LAST FLIGHT FROM DA NANG

Panic-Crazed Viets Mob Plane

SAIGON (Reuter) — South Vietnamese troops opened fire on each other in a panic-crazed scramble to board a United States airliner which arrived to pick up refugees from the beleaguered city of Da Nang today.

Government troops in trucks, jeeps and cars chased the chartered world airways jet around the airport as half a dozen Communist rockets landed on the runway and set several buildings ablaze, according to the pilot, Capt. Ken Healey of Oakland, Calif.

There were about 60 people in the baggage hold. Seven were in the wheel casing, of whom six walked away at the end of the flight. The seventh was carried off on a stretcher alive.

Unable to raise its wheels and with one wing-flap blasted away by a hand grenade thrown by a government soldier, the overloaded plane made it back to Saigon, Healey told reporters.

Two other planes had headed for Da Nang, but they turned back to Saigon because of the chaos at the airport. Flights had been cancelled Friday for the same reason.

Today's lone flight finally took off with 323 persons aboard, all but seven of them military personnel or their families, the pilot said.

Healey said the plane, designed to carry 150 passengers, was mobbed on the Da Nang runway wherever it stopped.

Several soldiers fired machine guns and pistols but crew members said they believed this was to attract attention as there were no bullet-holes in the plane.

"Soldiers were shooting at each other," Healey said. When the plane stopped, some of the soldiers threw away their flak-jackets and helmets, tossed away their guns and scrambled onto the aircraft.

Others came aboard with their weapons, including grenades, but surrendered them to crew members at the door. The weapons were stacked in the cockpit and handed to security officials when the plane landed at Saigon airport.

People tried to cling to the outside of the aircraft but fell off as it rose over the city.

Healey said the aircraft door could not be closed properly during the flight as the weight of people pushing aboard had damaged it.

He said military vehicles were careening crazily around the airfield in pursuit of the plane. At one point a jeep loaded with 20 people collided with a motorscooter, overturning the jeep and leaving five people sprawled motionless on the ground.

As the pilot tried to keep the jet moving during its 20-minutes on the ground, the soldiers abandoned their vehicles on the runway and they sprinted to the open door.

One British cameraman scrambled onto the aircraft as it was beginning its take-off run but lost his balance trying to heave his film camera aboard and fell to the ground.

The plane landed in Saigon after a journey of nearly two hours because of the damage to the aircraft, Healey said. The 375-mile trip usually takes about 40 minutes.

One U.S. Boeing 727 touched down Friday at Da Nang airport but took off almost immediately because of the chaotic situation. It did not take on passengers.

The U.S. and South Vietnamese governments were hoping to bring out 10,000 refugees a day by ship and plane from the threatened city. The evacuation by ship is continuing, a Saigon command spokesman said. The refugee airlift began Thursday when several hundred people were taken to areas further south.

Situation 'Hopeless'

Times News Services

SAIGON — Communist troops moved into Da Nang under cover of a heavy artillery barrage today, prompting military sources to call the situation in South Vietnam's second largest city "hopeless."

U.S. Army Chief of Staff Gen. Frederick Weyand visited government leaders and gave them assurances of President Ford's "strong support."

A U.S. statement said Weyand told President Nguyen Van Thieu the United States was firmly behind "the determined resistance of the people of South Vietnam to the massive invasion by a North Vietnamese expeditionary corps in flagrant and cynical disregard of the provison of the Paris agreement.

Bao Loc city, only 90 miles northeast of Saigon, was shelled and attacked at 7:15 a.m. according to an official announcement here, and lost only two hours later. The capital of Quang Nam province, Bao Loc lies astride a strategic road from the mountains to the south central seacoast areas where the Saigon government has been planning to relocate many of the million or more refugees from recently lost areas in the north.

Hoi An, the provincial capital of Uang Nam province, was attacked by Communist forces from three sides about 6 a.m. and overrun by 1 p.m. according to reliable but unofficial reports. The provincial capital is only about 20 miles south of Da Nang.

Cambodia Leaders Fleeing?

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH — As the No. 2 man on the list of prominent Cambodians marked for death by the Khmer Rouge left for Paris with his family today, reliable sources reported President Lon Nol will leave Tuesday for an official visit to Indonesia, Japan and the United States.

Political and diplomatic sources in beleaguered Phnom Penh are speculating whether the president will return to Cambodia or remain indefinitely outside the country without tendering his resignation.

The departure of Cheng Heng came as rebel forces stabbed into Phnom Penh's northern defence line. However, field reports later said the line was re-established.

A United States airlift of food and military supplies resumed after a 24-hour halt because of rebel fire on the airport.

Cheng Heng, who was chief of state after the coup ousting Prince Norodom Sihanouk in 1970, said at a news conference before his departure:

"I am going for medical treatment, not for political reasons. I am also leaving because I want to leave a good climate for our politicians."

Military informants said the Khmer Rouge insurgents pierced the defence line at Kap Srau, eight miles northwest of Phnom Penh. The sources added that Cambodian forces had pulled back about a mile and came under heavy mortar and artillery bombardment.

In Washington, Pentagon officials say U.S. arms shipments to Cambodia will stop in a few days because the money appropriated by Congress will have run out.

They said the Cambodian government has enough ammunition on hand to last an additional 10 days or two weeks.

Herring undergo checking and sorting

'Mad Scramble' Blamed In Herring Disasters

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Poor organization and too short a season are the main reason lives have been lost and 14 fishboats either sunk or capsized since the herring season started March 17.

Convinced of this Bill Hilborn, president of Oakland Industries Ltd. says the fisheries department, fish companies and the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union must get together and work out a solution.

"This is a disorganized fishery," Hilborn said, "The fisheries set a quota of 60,000 tons this year. There was a mad scramble, as a result of the strike, and the catch was as high as 44,000 tons in a few days.

"The end result is the boats are overloaded, trying to get there first — any bad weather and they go down like stones."

Apart from the loss of life and boats, Hilborn said the Canadian industry will lose out to competition because of the inferior quality of fish.

"The fish is arriving in such vast quantities at plants that the quality is deteriorating. It was the same case last year. It's really a roe (fish eggs) industry with Japan the buyer. Now, China is producing the best quality roe. It's a real problem industry."

Oakland Industries has just completed a modern plant on Montreal, going into production for the first time March 17.

Both Hilborn and Pat Keen, who is in charge of new production and quality control, feel the fisheries department should not raise the quota but extend the season to six or eight weeks in order to keep individual catches smaller, allowing total utilization of the fish.

"This way the boats would not get such large catches and spoil what, in effect, could be a good fishery," Keen said, "They would be landing top quality fish that could be totally used."

Under the pressure of the large catches, the plant is employing 200 people on a two-shift system for three weeks. Using a few

25 BABIES DIE IN WARD FIRE

RIJEKA, Yugoslavia (AP) — A fire snuffed out the lives of 25 newborn babies in a hospital maternity ward Friday, touching off wild scenes of anguish among parents and relatives.

One man who lost an infant son wailed outside the hospital: "For so many years we had waited for this child. We finally had him . . . for a total of three days."

Officials said the fire in the Rijeka hospital was caused by human error and old, faulty wiring. In addition to those killed, three other babies are in critical condition, they said.

Hysteria broke out among mothers in a room next to the babies when they tried desperately to save the infants but couldn't, a hospital source said.

He said the roaring blaze sapped oxygen in the room and in the incubator, and that 20 babies suffocated and five died of burns.

At Vatican City, Pope Paul interrupted his Holy Week observance and said a special prayer for the victims of the Good Friday tragedy.

Outside the hospital, Milivoje Zamic, a father of one of the victims, said: "I try to fight back tears and console my wife and mother. When this our second child was born we cried like babies out of joy. It was only two days ago."

Today was proclaimed a day of mourning in Rijeka. Public events were cancelled, flags were at half staff and ship captains were to wail sirens in the port during the funeral for the victims, all less than a week old.

Cyclist Tunnel Shuttle

The British Columbia bicyclists will get a break from the provincial government beginning April 1 when a shuttle service through the lower mainland's Massey Tunnel starts operating.

The tunnel is on the route between Vancouver and the Tsawwassen ferry terminal.

Highways Minister Graham Lea said Thursday the shuttle consists of a van for passengers and a self-loading trailer which can carry up to eight bicycles.

"Initially, the shuttle will run at two-hour intervals between 10 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. seven days a week. this schedule will be reviewed periodically," Lea said.

The suggestion for a shuttle service through the tunnel was made by Emery Barnes (NDP—Vancouver Centre) who said he often rides his bicycle from Vancouver to Victoria.

Prison Guard Charged In Heroin Conspiracy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver men, one a local prison guard, will appear in provincial court today charged with conspiracy to import from Hong Kong 8½ pounds of pure heroin worth about $5.9 million on city streets.

A 32-year-old Lower Mainland Regional Corrections Centre guard was arrested Thursday at 3450 East 27th by RCMP drug squad officers.

The raid culminated a month-long investigation by the RCMP after the heroin hidden in a wooden crate was discovered Feb. 26 by Canada Customs officials.

The two-foot by four-foot box shipped from Hong Kong was destined for a Vancouver address and was being stored at the Ballentyne pier warehouse at the foot of Heatley Street.

Charged with conspiracy to import and traffic in heroin are William Louis Reisig, a prison guard for about seven months, and Clifford (Fook Hing) Jung.

Reisig is also charged with possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

In another raid Friday, Vancouver police surrounded a truck on Jericho Beach at English Bay and found 75 pounds of marijuana valued at $36,000, scales and other equipment used to package and sell the drug on the beach.

Police arrested a man and a woman at the beach and later raided an apartment in the Kitsilano district where they seized another three pounds of the drug, more scales and arrested another two persons.

TIMES FEATURE FOR BIKE BUFFS

With the warmer, drier days of spring and summer ahead, a lot of bicycles which have been in storage or used infrequently during the winter will be back on the streets.

But there's a lot more to bicycling than just getting on and riding. A reasonable amount of care, maintenance and adjustment (particularly with the 10-speed variety) is necessary to get the most out of this healthful, enjoyable and economical sport.

To help out in this department, the Victoria Times is starting a 10-part series Monday with helpful tips for bicycle owners — tips that will save them a lot of unnecessary trips to the repair shop.

If you're a bike buff you won't want to miss "Cycling by Doug Langford" starting Monday in the Family Section of the Times.

Extortion Charge Laid

A 33-year-old man was charged in Victoria provincial court this morning with the attempted extortion of $100,000 from a Victoria bank manager Thursday.

James Archie Hancock of 1316 Rudlin was also charged with armed robbery of $571 from the Beacon Drive-In, 126 Douglas last Saturday.

Judge D. K. McAdam remanded Hancock in custody to Tuesday for election of trial method and plea.

Hancock was arrested 1 p.m. Thursday after a drama-packed hour during which an attempt was made to extort $100,000 from Vincent Fourt, manager of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch in the Hillside shopping plaza.

Victoria police said a man had phoned Fourt and told him to deliver the money or harm would be done to Fourt's 14-year-old daughter, Deanna.

Though Fourt phoned home and learned Deanna was there and in no apparent danger, police asked him to carry out the demands, which were to take the money in a package and drive to a phone booth in front of Memorial Arena where he would receive further instructions.

Police said Fourt found a note in the telephone booth which told him to drive to the third floor of the Bay Parkade and leave the car.

About 15 minutes passed, he said today, when he heard someone approach and open the door. A gloved hand then reached in to grab the package on the front seat.

"Don't make a move or you're dead," Bennett said he told the man, who let out a gasp. "He nearly fainted when he saw me."

The package did not contain $100,000, police said, but the amount was not disclosed.

Police said Hancock was not armed when arrested although a gun was later found similar to the one used in the Beacon Drive-In holdup.

The extortion bid was the third in Victoria in recent months. In each case the attempt has been unsuccessful.

O.C. Soccer

LONDON (Reuter) — Carlisle United, whose first ever season in the English football league's First Division has been an undignified dive towards relegation, at least had the satisfaction today of reshaping the championship race.

United became the first side this season to take four points off league leaders Everton with a 3-0 home victory that left the way clear for Liverpool to leap into top spot.

Liverpool toppled Birmingham 1-0 — the only goal coming from a controversial second half penalty by Kevin Keegan — and they now have 45 points from 37 games. This is one more point than Everton, but the deposed leaders have a game in hand over their Merseyside rivals.

Behind Liverpool and Everton come Ipswich, Middlesbrough and Stoke, bunched together on 43 points, and in sixth place is Derby, with 42 points from 35 games and perhaps with as good a chance of winning the title as anyone.

The complex situation at the top of the English League is in direct contrast to the Scottish First Division which was decided today when Rangers won their first championship in 11 years when they drew 1-1 with Hibernian and ended Celtic's run of nine successive championships.

Death Call For Sniper

"Kill him! Kill him!" shouted a crowd of onlookers as police dragged a bleeding man from a three-storey home from which a sniper had opened fire, killing two policemen and critically wounding a third.

James Carhart, 22, and unemployed, was arrested after police shot their way into the house in this working-class suburb across the Delaware River from Philadelphia following a three-hour siege.

Carhart was treated for a shotgun wound in the right hip. Doctors said he was in serious condition.

"He wouldn't give up," said Police Chief Eugene Stafford after Carhart was pulled into a police car Friday night. Stafford said he would seek murder charges against Carhart.

"We had to fire shots through the doorway," The chief said. "He was firing and he was incoherent."

Police said they didn't know what prompted the shooting.

Witnesses said Carhart stood in front of his house at sundown and fired a series of shots with a handgun. A passing motorist summoned police.

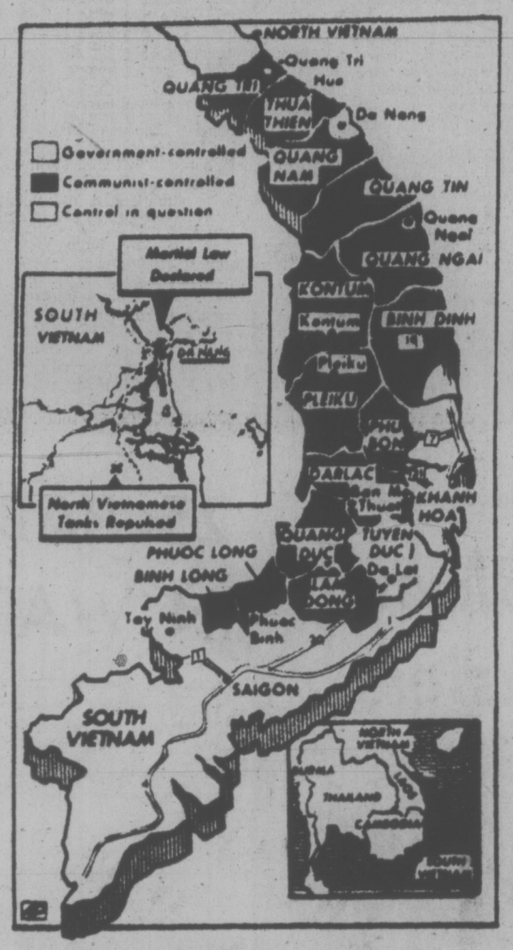
Stafford said two officers arrived and one was shot down on the pavement. While the second officer took cover, a third officer was shot as he emerged from his car.

Police sprayed rifle and shotgun fire onto the house while other officers retrieved the bodies of the slain men. Shots were exchanged for three hours until more than 100 policemen, under the cover of gunfire, raced into the house and up to the third floor.

Shooting erupted inside the house. Screaming was heard and within minutes Carhart was dragged to the sidewalk amid the shouts of onlookers.

Stafford told reporters that more than a dozen weapons were removed from the building.

Only minutes before Carhart's capture his parents and two brothers — one in a wheelchair — emerged from the building. Stafford said he did not know if they had been hostages.



Firm Claims Entire Yukon

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Using the purchase of an abandoned wartime pipeline project as a basis, a group of Edmonton men has begun legal action in a colossal claim of ownership to nearly one million square miles of the western Arctic — roughly one third of Canada.

Included in the claim, but not part of the proceedings that began here Thursday in Northwest Territories Supreme Court, is the entire Yukon territory. The Yukon portion of the claim is expected to be filed next summer in Whitehorse.

Mr. Justice William Morrow adjourned the case Thursday until June 3 after counsel for the governments of Canada and the Northwest Territories said they had not been given sufficient documentation and time to prepare their cases.

The area being claimed by the five Edmonton men — under the name Barbarosa Enterprises of Hay River, N.W.T. — includes the entire northern route of the proposed Mackenzie Valley natural gas pipeline. The area is bounded on the north by the Arctic coast and on the south by the 60th parallel, the northern boundary of the four western provinces.

The claim also engulfs the 400,000 square miles that, just 1½ years ago, Morrow gave the treaty Indians of the Northwest Territories the right to file a caveat over, subject to appeal.

That appeal by Ottawa is scheduled to begin June 17. Until the appeal process has been exhausted, the caveat — or legal declaration of interest — cannot be registered.

Meanwhile, the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories and the Metis and Non-Status Indian Association is attempting to use the caveat as a bargaining lever in land-claim negotiations with Ottawa.

The Edmonton men, headed by Czechoslovakian-born company president Edmund Buchta, 46, also are seeking a caveat over the same land. Their application to file a caveat was rejected here last year by the land titles registrar because they did not have sufficient legal description of the land in question.

Barbarosa's claim is based on incidents that date back to the Second World War. In 1942, through a series of ambassadorial notes, Canada gave the United States the go-ahead to begin construction on the Canol project, a 600-mile oil pipeline from Norman Wells, N.W.T., to Whitehorse, Yukon.

The U.S. needed fuel to keep its planes fighting in the war against the Japanese in the South Pacific.

Later in the war, contends Barbarosa Enterprises, the Canadian government agreed to give the U.S. oil exploration and drilling rights to the Yukon and most of the western Arctic. This is the area of nearly one million square miles being claimed by the Edmonton group.

But before the war ended, the U.S. had spent $134 million on the Canol project and decided the oil was no longer of strategic importance.

Barbarosa claims that Canada had first rights to buy back the property and assorted drilling, pipe-laying and highway-building equipment abandoned by the U.S., including the nearly one million square miles of land.

Holy Sites Crowded, Guarded

The Associated Press

Christians and Jews gathered in the holy places of Jerusalem this weekend for Easter and Passover. Israeli security patrols guarded against violence after the explosion of two bombs.

In Rome, Pope Paul called for the remembrance of those still suffering because of war and "political or civil conflicts."

Two small time-bombs wired to wristwatches exploded in Jerusalem Friday, wounding 13 persons. One went off in a crowded bus but the second one placed in a shopping bag in Zion Square was spotted and police cleared the street before it exploded.

Pope Paul, who reduced his Holy Week schedule last year because of ill health, carried a heavy wooden cross in the Good Friday Way of the Cross procession on Rome's Palatine Hill.

He then told a crowd of thousands gathered near the Coliseum in Rome that Christ's suffering on the cross should be known by "all who, still today, are suffering because of conflicts of war or because of political or civil conflicts."

CIA-JFK LINK PROBE PLANNED

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Senate committee on intelligence operations is planning an inquiry into persistent but never proven allegations of Central intelligence Agency involvement in the assassination of President Kennedy.

According to informed sources, members of the select committee's staff feel they cannot ignore the issue even if the prospect of settling it conclusively appears remote.

"I think it's fair to say they're sniffing around on that right now," one source said. "But there's no formal investigation yet and I don't know if there will be."

Plans thus far apparently call only for a preliminary staff inquiry. Under the committee's rules, a full-dress investigation cannot be initiated without majority approval from the 11-member panel.

"We might just end up exonerating them (the CIA) on this one," another source said, "but that's all right. That's our business, too."

Recent allegations and disclosures concerning the CIAs domestic activities have encouraged a resurgence of charges that Kennedy was the victim of a consipracy that involved the CIA in one way or another.

A Canadian motor sailboat from Victoria was boarded by U.S. Customs agents in Dungeness Bay and ordered into Port Angeles Thursday.

A Customs official said three men aboard the 43-foot Norwegian Wood were detained while a 45-minute search was conducted and then allowed to go on their way.

Donald Eide, district director of U.S. Customs in Seattle declined to say what specifically his officers were after but did say the boat was stopped for a possible violation regarding customs declaration.

He said such searches are routine.

BUTTER PRICE UP

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers face a 13-cents-a-pound increase in the price of butter, the second increase this year, the agriculture department announced Thursday.

It came as the result of annual dairy policy revisions announced after Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan discussed it at an all-day cabinet meeting.

Also increased Thursday were the government-set minimum prices for butter and skim milk powder. The butter price goes to $1.03 a pound from 90 cents, the powder to 64 cents a pound from 59 cents. The powder increase will not be passed on directly to consumers.

Disorganization Blamed

less people, the employment period for herring could be extended for much longer.

The plant has been designed to use every part of the herring, the flesh for fillets with Germany as the main market, roe for Japan and the milts (male sperms) for the British market, where it is made into fish spreads and other delicacies.

Even the scales of the fish (pearl essence) could be utilized, Keen said, being in demand for such items as dolls' eyes.

Oaklands has installed all the equipment needed to ensure the total utiization process moves swiftly. There's a sexing machine, developed by Neptune Dynamics of Vancouver, that separate male and female fish, using a light process.

The line of three filleting machines are made by the Swedish company of Arenco. They're capable of handling 197 tons of food fish in 21 hours.

Five Japanese technicians, employed by the company that buys the roe, are on hand to ensure the quality of the roe is the finest; roe being as much in demand in Japan as caviar is by European gourmets.

"This is such a waste," Keen said, as we watched a long line of helpers checking substandard fish, the flesh of which can only be used for such things as cattle feed.

He and Hilborn reiterated a better system has to be worked out if the full benefits of the herring fishery are to be gained.

"Something has to be done," Hilborn said. "You can imagine what chaos there would be at the processing plants if this sort of thing (overlarge catches in a small period of time) happened during the salmon season."

Skylark-Listening a Happy Easter Pastime

STRAY FEATHERS

Looking for something different to do on Easter Sunday? Why not try a little Skylark-listening? It'll not only get you out of doors but it'll give you a chance to hear something that has made Victoria and the Saanich Peninsula unique in North America for nearly 70 years.

Skylarks, for those of you not in the know, are European immigrants. They came here around the turn of the century through the good offices of other European immigrants who were nostalgic for the familiar sounds of their homelands.

Many other kinds of European songsters made the trip about the same time, all in the hopes that they would become established in the New World and add their voices to the sounds of spring. Today, only the skylark survives.

Formerly more common — urban sprawl and colder, snowier winters, have made inroads on their numbers — Skylarks can still be heard in many places on the Peninsula and have now even transferred some of their allegiance to such areas as Duncan and San Juan Island.

But to hear them you've got to know what to listen for and where to listen — and the object of my little exercise today is to provide the know-how to solve both these problems.

First, don't count on seeing Skylarks; they're not the easiest birds to see being either well-hidden on the ground by their rather non-descript sparrow-like, brownish-streaked plumage, or almost invisible as they perform their spectacular aerial songs from high above the ground.

As for what you'll hear I can do no better than quote Roger Tory Peterson who describes the song as a "tireless torrent of runs and trills" and add that you will be impressed by its length, often continuing for more than a minute.

Next to length, the most notable feature of a skylark's song is that it will drift down to you from a seemingly empty sky.

But enough of the what; on to the where!

The nearest spot for good listening has to be on Cedar Hill Cross Road at the north end of Uplands Golf Course. On the north side of the road, just west of Crestview, in some open fields and orchards, several pairs of Skylarks are usually involved in raising families at this time of year, and one significant feature of these activities is song.

Set up your listening post on Cedar Hill and wait; it shouldn't be long before you hear the birds.

Next comes the corner of Finnerty and Sinclair Roads on the UVic campus. Open fields to the east often have a complement of Skylarks in full song.

Farther afield there are the Martindale-Island View flats. If you approach the area from Welch Road you can begin listening almost as soon as you get out in the open.

Stay away from the Pat Bay Highway end of either Martindale or Island View Roads; the traffic noise will interfere with your listening.

Next you can try Wallace Drive in Central Saanich. About half way between West Saanich Road and Stelly's Cross Road — where Wallace makes a broad, sweeping curve — there are extensive grassy fields on the northwest side of the road. A few moments here will almost-certainly produce a Skylark or two.

While you're in this area you might also try the field on the northwest corner of West Saanich Road and Keating Cross Road. Despite occasional interference from parachutists, Skylarks still do their thing there.

Father north, around Pat Bay Airport, there are several good listening posts. My favourites are on the main road into the terminal, on the south side, and near the intersection of Wilson Road and Mills road — the north boundary of the airport — on the north. Aircraft may present a listening problem here but you can time your effort between landings and take-offs.

Good hunting!

Small Airlines Seek Gov't Aid

Economic difficulties facing small airlines on the coast may force curtailment of services if the federal government does not take immediate action, provincial transport department officials said Thursday.

The officials said the department is preparing a brief to the Canadian Transport Commission urging federal action on several proplems.

The brief is the result of talks in Campbell River this week between government officials and 12 local air carrier operators.

According to the spokesmen, the main problems facing the air carriers are caused by duplication of licensed carriers serving points with small populations, competiton from charter operators, the extreme slowness of the Federal Transport Committee in making decisions on new licences, difficulty in obtaining and retaining trained personnel and lack of aviation radio facilities.

Maintenance costs have increased as much as 60 per cent in the past year, they said, while revenues have decreased by 20 per cent.

Unless costs are reduced, they added, services will have to be severely curtailed or suspended entirely.

STARGAZERS TAKE BREAK

The Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on West Saanich Road will be closed to the public April 3 to 8.

The closure will allow maintenance repairs to be carried out on the observatory's dome.

First Step for Alaska Pipeline

TONSINA RIVER, Alaska (AP) — Pipe section no. YS00127 slipped beneath the slush and settled to the bottom of the 15-foot-deep ditch as the installation of the Trans-Alaska pipeline officially began.

There was no cheering, few dignitaries and not a souvenir in sight Thursday. Four helicopters carrying film crews competed with a graceful hawk for the vast air space above the pristine valley 75 miles north of Valdez. The choppers' rotors echoed off the majestic mountains which looked like they were smothered in whipped cream.

"On this happy occasion I would like to steal a little bit from Shakespeare and say we are not here to praise the pipepine, but to bury it," said E. L. Patton, president of Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.

Standing on a makeshift wooden stand perched on a sloping knoll above the Tonsina Valley, Patton spoke for the consortium born of eight major oil companies developing Alaska's crude-rich Prudhoe Bay. Alyeska is responsible for the design, construction and operation of the $6 billion pipeline conceived seven years ago and expected to be completed by July, 1977.

"It's a tremendous job that faces all of us," he said. "This represents the single biggest project which will get, or help us get out of the grasp of the oil producing and exporting cartel countries and it is therefore very important that we do it, and by the way, they're doing it right now ..."

As his voice trailed off about 300 bused-in spectators turned toward the valley. Below, hard-hatted workmen who couldn't hear the speeches and probably wouldn't have seen the ceremonial flag anyway decided on their own that the 2 p.m. ceremony was behind schedule. And on this project, that's prohibited.

So the 1,418-foot steel tube which stretched into the distance like some trussed-up prehistoric serpent was disappearing into the ground.

Alaska's senior U.S. senator, Ted Stevens, mingled with a couple of generals from Anchorage's Elmendorf air force base and with welders from Mississippi and truck drivers from Texas. Camera-clutching spectators jockeyed with professional photographers for the right angle and tried to keep from slipping into "the trench."

The mid-20s weather and bright sunshine belied the hard frigid winter of labor which proceeded Thursday's festivities. But for a few brief hours the occasion and its symbolism prompted most of the pipeline veterans to lounge against trucks or revel in the luxury of putting their feet atop the bulldozers' steering gears.

King of the Western Plains

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed's stunning victory in which his Conservative party won 69 of the 75 available seats is a testament to the 46 year old premier's political prowess. The calculated campaign and its foregone conclusion were carefully timed to finish only days before the federal provincial energy conference. Lougheed had in effect asked Albertans to give him a mandate for higher oil prices and they backed him with a record 63 per cent of the popular vote. In a pre election budget the Conservatives promised a 28 per cent tax cut. This measure, coupled with other joys Albertans already enjoy — no sales tax, gift tax or succession duties — and a predicted $1.5 billion oil revenue windfall in 1975, was all voters needed to provide massive endorsement.

But victory on the plains and foothills doesn't necessarily spell triumph in the Ottawa Valley. The current federally set price for Alberta oil of $6.50 per barrel is artificially low, considering the world market price of over $11.00 per barrel. The Trudeau administration can effectively argue against a large increase on the grounds it would stimulate inflation and impose hardship on Canadian consumers in less fortunate parts of the country. Alberta will argue with equal conviction that higher oil prices benefit the whole country in that they encourage more exploration and development of new supplies. It's an argument that will be lost on hard pressed maritimers and perhaps even on the delicate political balance in the federal cabinet. In a very real sense, by demanding higher oil prices Lougheed is asking poor provinces to contribute more funds to Alberta's already bulging Heritage Trust Fund — the newly set-up vehicle into which the province pours its oil riches. Alberta does need funding for secondary industry as conventional oil supplies approach extinction. Other provinces need secondary industry too. And to compare Alberta's need with that of Nova Scotia's say, is like arguing that the United States needs more economic aid than India.

Beyond this immediate implication, Alberta's election presents subtle trends worthy of speculation. In one stroke voters all but wiped out Social Credit in its birthplace. Less than 10 years ago the Socreds commanded 55 of the then 65 sets in the Alberta legislature. Now it is reduced to a corporal's guard of four that seems destined to march into Canadian political history. It is tempting to make comparisons here, but B.C.'s situation is different because of the NDP government. Yet the very name, Social Credit, conjures the past in Canada today as voters search for new solutions. And even though Alberta's Liberals divorced themselves from federal policies they failed to elect a single person, slipping to less than 5 per cent of the popular vote. A solid rebuke to the Trudeau administration from an electorate that automatically returns 19 out of 19 Tories to Ottawa in recent federal elections.

Lougheed is without question the most successful politician in Canada today. The federal Conservatives, gloomily beating the bushes for a new messiah to lead them out of interminable opposition, will exert strong pressures to bring the Alberta leader into the federal fold. With a mandate that runs until 1979, "the king," as he has been dubbed by voters, may want to hang around and preside over what seems destined to be Canada's most fortunate province.

Yet every silver lining has clouds too. The federal government has always been a provincial scapegoat. But when Ottawa is manipulated into the position of arch-villain for the purposes of a provincial election it turns confederation into a callous, self-seeking contract. Lougheed exploited a cheap emotion to achieve victory. He is king for now, but near absolute majorities have a way of going sour as Quebec's Robert Bourrassa is finding out. The Alberta premier avows he's a Canadian first, an Albertan second. He will have a chance to prove it next month.

Seabus? Fie

Onward and upward marches man, making things quicker, cheaper and more efficient. The progress of science and technology is an ever-unwinding spiral of modern aids to mankind.

Sometimes. The new cross-harbor ferry design for Vancouver unveiled Friday by Case Existological Laboratories Ltd. of Victoria looks like something out of Star Trek — double-ended catamarans with a dozen power doors that allow loading and unloading within 90 seconds.

It (no female this futuristic vessel) is called Seabus, in line with the provincial transit bureau's annoying penchant for replacing perfectly good words with hybrids like Fastbus and Town and Country Bus.

Undoubtedly Seabus will carry executives and their secretaries to and from their jobs in downtown Vancouver office towers capably in sterilized silence — eight and a half minutes to cross the harbor.

But where's the open deck, the opportunity to snatch a whiff of salt air? The old boxy open-ended ferries (which stopped running across Burrard Inlet in 1957) gave passengers a choice of riding indoors or out in the weather, with a marvellous view. Seabus, we suppose is the latest in efficient mass marine transportation, to use the terminology of the transiteers, but it resembles a ferryboat about as much as does a subway car.

Torpor in the House Awaiting Bunny's Return

Torpor enveloped the legislative precinct Wednesday as MLAs packed up for the 12-day Easter recess.

Plastic garbage bags filled the inner courtyard and waste chutes in the corridors were padlocked — mute testament to the ongoing local strike lockout that government shrugs off as not endangering arms or legs.

But in the house this last week, the ennui clouded the air. Day after day the opposition pounded away at Premier Barrett's estimates using up nearly 30 of the 135 hours allotted to debate the expenditures of 21 departments. Why Social Credit and Liberal benches took this tack is worth questioning considering that other juicy portfolios such as housing and education present better targets.

Barrett's municipal revenue-sharing scheme, natural gas prices and interminable questions about seemingly prosaic matters on the British Columbia Railway were repeated ad nauseum.

Even more perplexing the Liberals came on like gangbusters, sneering at federal resource taxation policies, and sounding for all the world like flaming radicals in their three-piece suits. And there was Barrett defending federal taxation policies.

Dissonances and inverted melodies. Harald Schoenberg would feel at home there.

But why the endless silly symphony about Barrett?

On gas prices, the opposition was simply giving the premier a forum to indulge his favorite subject, namely how the NDP is going to get a much higher natural gas export price at the upcoming federal provincial energy conference and pass one-third on to the municipalities.

"They are like a bunch of saboteurs sneaking into the factory to fine tune the machinery," one government source said, shaking his head at the opposiiton's questions.

Rumors had it that Social Credit was gearing to unload a major scandal in the house this week. Other observers thought it might be an attempt to compromise the new time limits on estimates.

Under standing orders, estimate debates are limited to 45 sittings or 135 hours. Then all 21 departmental estimates pass without debate, allowing the opposition to scream closure.

In retrospect none of the aforementioned materialized. Barrett's estimates passed. No scandals surfaced. The opposition just dithered down to the wire, spending the last two hours Wednesday afternoon haggling over the $537 million interim supply bill to keep government and public service going for the next two months.

Alice in Wonderland all the way down.

Even the much-heralded scandals so heavily hinted at prior to the session have failed to materialize. Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson's Casa Loma debacle and the matter of Human Resources Minister Norman Levi's $200 cheque are good examples of sloppy judgment, but scandals they aren't.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly's unexplained firings probably provided the best issue to date, yet the opposition let it die as they pressed on about boxcar shortages on the BCR.

The Columbia River inquiry — an issue that may provide some eventual revelations—remains on the back burner as the government scours the land for an untainted soul to head the commission.

Only a score or more of the promised 70 to 90 pieces of legislation have been tabled — an unusual practice for this government, considering the last five sessions.

It is almost as if the house has been holding its breath, marking time, waiting for an election or at least Barrett's return from the April 9 energy conference.

Much in B.C. politics depends on the outcome of this conference. If the government does not achieve a gas export price of at least $1.50 there will be shortfalls in projected budget revenues; the municipalities will scream, especially after the reassurances from Barrett this week, and last but not least, the opposition will have a field day.

More than likely, the price will rise to $1.35 with a promise of a further rise later this year.

As to the possibility of an election over the issue, don't hold your breath. Barrett would have to come home empty-handed before he went to the people on an issue this dull. B.C. is not Alberta. And while the premier has pledged much on an export gas price increase, federal energy policies are not the public cause celebre they are in Alberta. Nor does B.C. have a limp opposition which allows Alberta's Premier Lougheed to call an election with the confidence of a bookie laying off a fixed race.

But federal-provincial conferences have a way of becoming even more twisted than debates in the house on the inner harbor.

We can only await the return of the Easter Bunny from Ottawa. David Cottontail has promised some fancy eggs. If he lays an egg instead, the plot could scramble. — G.R.O.

Ugly Mood Grips Parliament

OTTAWA—Suddenly this parliament, which had seemed merely a bit pedestrian because of the opposition parties' leadership problems, shows signs of developing an ugly mood. That danger is seen by some of the best parliamentarians here. Two developments have brought the change.

Although much of the Conservatives' questioning about the Hamilton harbor scandal and federal government dredging contracts has been completely legitimate and proper, that party probably did go at Labor Minister John Munro too mercilessly. Munro, it must be remembeted, has been charged with nothing whatever. He is trapped for the time being by the fact that his name is known to have been mentioned at a Hamilton preliminary hearing, the evidence at which has been suppressed by a publication ban.

The attacks drove Munro to the breaking point at a time when it is impossible, at least to an outsider, to see what he could have done to have cleared himself of the suspicions that were being fostered.

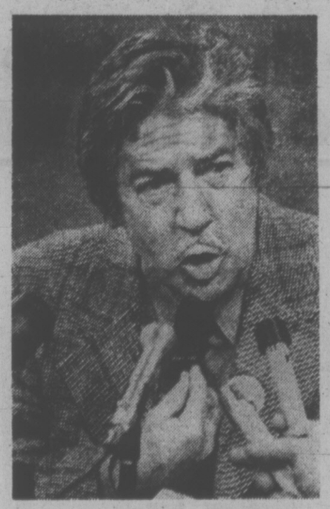
Tariff Barriers

In other ways, however, the Conservatives have been proceeding exactly as an opposition should. They have been relentless in demanding explanations of the timing of the relevant investigations of affairs at Hamilton and of other aspects of the dredging contracts. They have wanted apparent delays explained even while the police investigations were under way and they are completely correct to have pushed on this score.

The other development that contributed grievously to the change in parliament's mood was Transport Minister Jean Marchand's unfortunate charges of racism against those who venture to criticize him and some other French-Canadians. The transport minister has tried since then to back off from part of his charge.

He now denies that he was attacking members of parliament and claims that his attack was directed only at certain journalists. Unfortunately, tape recordings of statements he made outside the House of Commons, which have been broadcast by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, do not support him. They make it clear that Marchand was taking broader aim than he wants to admit now.

It is only about a month ago that the decision was taken that while the transport minister's health might be a problem, it was one for the prime minister to deal with, not the Conservative opposition. After that, criticism of Marchand stepped up considerably but it has never been ferocious or unrelenting.



JEAN MARCHAND
. . . treated easily by Tories

Considering the background, criticism is hardly surprising. It was Marchand himself who, after the Trudeau government had held power for six years and the Liberal party had been in office for 13, declared that transport was a "mess" in this country and that the government had no policy for dealing with it. Under those circumstances, Jean Marchand is the luckiest, best-treated man alive not to have been ploughed under by opposition criticism. Yet the truth is that at one time Marchand was being treated with such kid gloves by the Conservatives that they themselves began to come under criticism for not doing their job as an opposition.

Given all of this, Marchand's claim that he and one or two others were being subjected to criticism because they are French-Canadians was about as graceless a reaction as he could have devised. He asked for Claude Wagner's sharp retort that to have said it he must be paranoid. It is not much wonder that the Conservatives are not feeling happy with Marchand at the moment.

If anyone was going to do this, though, it is just as well that it was Jean Marchand. When he is not clubbing people over the head — figuratively speaking — Marchand is a very likable man, with a great deal of charm. If he turns it all on, and keeps it turned on, he can probably pull the House back from the brink of nastiness to which he has helped bring it. He has a duty to do just that.

Less Competitive

On their side, with John Munro back in the House, the Tories have an obligation to think twice about their own course of action. In politics, men should not be crushed or destroyed merely because they do not defend themselves very well. That was what happened to the late Rene Tremblay years ago over his furniture purchases. Anyone who examined his files and carefully checked payments against articles delivered could see beyond doubt that he had had no special favors, had done nothing untoward. He was blameless yet the attack on him was ferocious because he was not adept at defence. That is not good enough — Tremblay's fate is a blot on the Ottawa record.

The opposition now should remember that the trial stemming from the preliminary hearing at which Munro's name was mentioned does not start for two more months. Whether they commenced as quickly as they might have or not, the police investigations seem now to cover the whole range of possibly connected events. There does not appear to be doubt that this whole affair is going to unfold fully in court. The opposition has responsibility to see that the facts to indeed come out but its members should not try to substitute themselves for the courts. This is a moment when there is a sudden need for restraint on both sides of the house.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

By Freeman King

When you are walking along a forest trail and you spot an old fir snag (that is, a tree that is no longer growing) do you stop and examine it?

But while it is growing no more needles or putting forth any more twigs, it is still alive with other things growing on it. Perhaps a number of its old limbs have fallen off. But now it has changed in many ways. It has become a high-rise apartment for many kinds of insects.

Very many species live there, each on its own level. The carpenter ant will have the bottom, then comes the bark beetle, the borer, and as we get to the top, many other kinds of flying creatures living and going about their work in this great world we call life.

Other things now live there, such as mosses and lichens. They have moved in because the tree was more open to the winds that carried their spores. Of course the fungi move in and no doubt crept in between the cambium layer and the bark, so now when you hit the tree it sounds hollow. The large bracket fungus now takes hold and grows. Each species of tree will grow a different kind of bracket fungus and each year will put on a ring growth the same as the tree did when it was still growing. Some of these bracket fungi grow to quite a size. I found one once that was three feet long and almost two feet wide. These make ideal specimens for an artist to paint or sketch on. It can be done with a sharp piece of wood, though you must keep your fingers off the white surface.

Now our tree has become a place that is like a road-side stopping place where you can get a meal — that is, if you are a bird. Here comes the pileated woodpecker with its long sharp beak that drills in to get the ants and other insects that it likes. And the little Downey too will search for whatever it wants. We can find the little brown creeper and the nuthatch — they all like to search for food in the old tree. At the top, there is no doubt we can find a kinglet searching for food.

Now our old tree has become a place where there are homes, for the holes that were drilled out by the birds are taken up by other birds for nesting places, such as the woodpecker, the chickadee and often a little wren, and the swallow.

After a time the bark becomes loose, because the cambium or growing layer has been eaten up or has just dried out. So the bark starts to fall off in large slabs. Our tree changes as it becomes a buckskin snag, but it still stands for a long time. Until a high wind topples it down to the ground where it becomes a nurse log.

The tree has gone through many phases, each and every one of them a part of life and fitting into the way of life itself. This has taken perhaps over a century, yet in the age of the world it has only been a short time.

Sit Down and Settle

Pardon me, but what's going on in this here town! Municipal fathers look more and more like all politics and nothing else.

The employers' bargaining group rejected an industrial inquiry commissioner. Chairman Jim Campbell said that a settlement in the middle would "work against the taxpayers." With money saved already in the dispute, this would be less than their offer they presented to CUPE before the strike-lockout.

In an outburst, Mayor Pollen states that the regional representative for CUPE, Tom Smith, is a hindrance toward a settlement. How could Pollen try to make us believe that? If Tom Smith was pulling the strings and being a professional he would never have Local 50 go on strike in the slack winter-time. Nor would he have school board CUPE members on strike as there were too many out already. Is management trying to let everything ride until it gets so bad that provincial government has to force a settlement?

Pollen was elected as mayor mainly because of his popular strong stand against the Reid centre. Is he tired of being mayor and looking for a popularity contest to assure him a seat in the next provincial election? Alderman Malcolm Anderson won his city seat shortly after he established himself as organizer of volunteer groups for cleaning schools two years ago when school board CUPE members were on strike.

If municipal fathers want a settlement why hire lawyer Edward Pearlman whose record is long strikes such as Alberta Meatmarket, 1½ years, and Sandringham Hospital, three years. Sandringham finally settled when the provincial government raised the minimum hourly wage to $2.50 which was all they were seeking.

How about it. No more vacations. And take CUPE up on their proposal to sit down until it is settled. We the taxpayers deserve some honest hard work from our elected municipal represenatives. — John Jorgensen, 3417 Seymour.

Rental Problems

I am writing to complain about the difficulties of finding accommodation in Victoria. My fiancee and I moved here about a week ago from Toronto to escape the extremely high rents there, only to find severe restrictions here. Our greatest obstacle is our age. We are a young couple.

We have already checked several apartments and have found out already that we are forced to lie and tell landlords that we are married. Otherwise we barely get through the front door. Secondly, we are expected to have jobs and references (which is very hard right now, considering we have been here for such a short time). And thirdly, we have to dress up in formal wear practically, smile and be extremely polite to set up a good impression with our prospective landlords. It is much worse than applying for a job.

Apparently a lot of people here renting places have had several problems with young people leaving their apartments in a terrible mess, but I do not see why a young couple like us who want to live in British Columbia, should suffer for the irresponsibilities of others.

Unfortunately, we have no way of proving to these people that we are not pigs, but surely they could think it over a little more slowly before they reject us. — Beth Hansen, Victoria.

Victims of the Firetrap Cleanup

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

So our civic leaders are determined to eliminate the fire traps. They've been saying that for three years but this time, apparently, they really mean it.

Or do they?

It's a ghastly dilemma, a damned-if-they-do-damned-if-they don't situation, and it will be interesting to see over the next few months just how resolutely Victoria city council will act.

The immediate problem involves some two dozen downtown apartments and hotels, aging buildings with alarmingly antiquated alarm systems, open stairwells that make them one large smokestack, inadequate fire escapes and various other deficiencies.

This situation, says City Hall, is not to be tolerated any longer. The fire prevention bylaw will be strengthened to compel building owners, under summary threat of closure if they haven't acted within six months, to eliminate the fire risks in line with National Building Code standards.

The trouble is, these buildings are inhabited almost exclusively by those who comprise, in the beloved euphemism of city planners, "the lowest economic stratum of the urban community" — a largely male population of pensioners, unemployables, alcoholics and the like.

While the accommodation itself may be, again euphemistically, sub-standard, it is at least shelter at a reasonable price — in the region of $50 to $80 per month.

But if the bylaw is enforced to the letter and the building owner in question has to fork out, say, $30,000 on built-in fire protection, does anyone seriously expect those give-away rents to continue?

In some cases wouldn't the landlords find it more worthwhile to convert the old buildings to some other use, perhaps office space, where the fire safety requirements are less stringent? Or even to demolish and redevelop?

Whatever happens, if council gives Fire Chief Eric Simmons the solid backing it has already promised in enforcement, it seems likely many tenants will suffer by eviction. And the stark fact is there's nowhere for them to go.

But better to be turfed out than burned up, runs the city's argument.

On the face of it, a necessary choice between the lesser of two evils, but with foresight, planning and persistence in hammering away at senior governments it could have been avoided. At least some alternative accommodation could have been ready today for the roomers and other displaced persons to occupy.

A glance at newspaper files shows how long the city administration has been dithering around this very subject:

March 2, 1972, under the heading "Crackdown ordered on city fire traps" — council warned that 26 hotels, motels and apartment houses in the city were "considered hazardous." And an alderman noted that "to force extensive improvements. . . would drive rents up and work hardship on elderly tenants."

Dec. 6, 1973 — "Fire traps face axe, council backs get-tough plan." Said Mayor Peter Pollen on that occasion (commenting on a report from the fire chief which had already been stalled for nine months at City Hall, awaiting discussion): "It's up to us to respond and we will."

Fifteen months later, and three years after the matter was discussed at that 1972 meeting, the "response" has produced only the bylaw amendment itself, which was introduced at this week's meeting and will be given final approval next month.

No accommodation at all, though, and none likely to be provided inside the next 18 months to two years.

But in fairness to the city it has made some effort in this direction over the past year or so. Mayor Pollen wrote to Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson, drawing attention to the displacement problem and suggesting the government exploit housing opportunities in the downtown area.

A city study of potential parking sites showed, incidentally, that there were several locations suitable for residential development and this study, too, was passed on to the government.

Representatives of the city, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Dunhill Development Corporation and the provincial housing department held a few meetings.

But, in Ald. Sam Bawlf's words: "There doesn't seem to have been any initiative come out of all this. We've had the indication there isn't a lot of money to spare for this kind of housing . . ."

Much the same apathetic reaction greeted similar efforts in Vancouver, where 44 tragic fire deaths in 1973 — the majority in venerable hotels and rooming houses in the Skid Road area—spurred city council into action aimed at upgrading fire safety and public health standards.

Says Ald. Mike Harcourt, who headed Vancouver's Skid Road Housing Committee: "We've been pushing our heads against a wall. They (senior governments) don't consider this kind of accommodation for single men a very high priority. It's family housing first, senior citizens second and this a long way behind."

Vancouver's track record may not be brilliant — the blunt Ald. Harry Rankin says council has been "weak-kneed and gutless" in its whole approach to the fire trap problem — but the city did make some headway in providing replacement homes for those displaced under the Skid Road rehabilitation program.

In conjunction with the non-profit United Housing Foundation and with CMHC funding, the city has refurbished several old hotels for such residents. And it hopes to continue this program if funds are approved for a demonstration project tied to the 1976 United Nations conference on human settlements hosted by Vancouver.

Bawlf, however, is not impressed with this solution because he sees the renovation of obsolete tenements as "perpetuating a social problem."

The rational way to rehouse the elderly, the infirm, the alcoholics, is in new, well-designed accommodation which includes various extended care facilities, he says. And there are downtown sites available — in the Store-Swift-Fisgard area, for example — where such development could take place within their milieu.

All that's needed is the money, the commitment, the co-operation. But the city takes the view that it cannot afford to enter the subsidized housing field, and the responsibility here lies squarely with the provincial government.

Meanwhile, the fire prevention bylaw will be enforced, squeals of anguish from property owners will inevitably follow, and no doubt pleas for time extensions to carry out the improvements will be heard by city council.

But in the end there will probably be compliance — and the resulting evictions.

The alternative is the laisser faire attitude that has prevailed to date, with its attendant risks to human life.

In 1970 Seattle had its Ozark Hotel tragedy in which 20 people died, and Los Angeles its Ponet Square Hotel disaster which killed 19 persons. Both buildings were about 60 years old and in both cases open stairways were the culprit.

Victoria has several similar buildings of that age or older, with similar potential fire hazards ever-present. Whatever happens, their occupants must not be condemned to a similar fate.

Better bounced than burned?

Something Sinister

Re your editorial Unanswered Questions, March 17, what are the unanswered questions? You certainly have not raised any. What you have done, through innuendo, is infer that something sinister is going on involving the minister of human resources and a $200 campaign contribution. What you have not done is make any specific charges.

In fact, what has really happened? Mr. Levi has at the very most acted foolishly in that he accepted a contribution personally. Certainly the funds should have gone through his official agent, but your attempt to suggest that because the dates of the original cheque to Mr. Levi, the campaign disbursements by the minister and his wife and the date of deposit of the original cheque do not fall neatly in chronological order, raise questions of impropriety is a bit far-fetched.

A more realistic interpretation might be that Mr. Levi, like the rest of us, has human failings and could quite easily have held on to the original cheque a few days prior to depositing it.

I would hope that in future you would rely less on innuendo and be more specific in your editorial criticisms. — Roald Anderson, 609 Drake Street.

Oil Tank Farm

During the past six months the Victoria Times has published prominently, at regular intervals, a number of news articles about the oil tank farm on the old Songhees Indian reserve along Victoria harbor. All these articles that appeared in your paper for six months were completely one-sided and biased towards the viewpoint of Mayor Peter Pollen, later on joined by Regional Chairman Jim Campbell. This viewpoint is (as everybody knows) that this oil tank farm should be re-located. For four months their only argument was that the Songhees site was an eyesore. For the last two months this argument was joined (and partly replaced) by the contention of Pollen that the Songhees site is needed for open space and residential development.

Let us look at those arguments. Do they make sense? Yes and no. The need for open space and residential development in an area that for decades has been an industrial park, criss-crossed by railway line grids, and denuded and divested of any agreeable (to life) features does not make sense, or in other words, is nonsense. The argument of an eyesore elicits the question — to whom? Certainly not to most taxpayers in Victoria. The average Victorian sees the oil tank farm only from the Causeway, half a mile away. The only people to whom the tanks are a real eyesore are the owners (and their future customers) of the new hotel tower being built on Laurel Point, the former Bapco plant site, 700 feet distance across the harbor. The present oil tank farm on the Songhees site has never been publicly called an eyesore until the Bapco hotel tower plans were in a well-advanced stage. Draw your own conclusions.

Any relocation involves a new site. From the beginning, Peter Pollen has advocated a move to the site of a small three-tank farm on the former naval supply depot at Yew Point in Esquimalt harbor, 1,500 feet from Fort Rodd hill national historic park.

In the six-month string of one-sided and biased articles in the Victoria Times, mentioned before, not any of a number of arguments against the choice of the DND site was ever published, until I contacted one of your reporters and an article appeared in the Times of Jan. 25, publishing for once (and for the first time) one argument against that choice of site. The fact that this beautifully-treed surplus DND property is on the verge of being turned over to Parks Canada and declared a national park had for six months been carefully hidden from the public.

Until the national park fact was published in the Times, the subject of the oil tank farm in general had never been discussed by the full regional district board, and the subject had actually miraculously disappeared from the agenda for the board meetings on several occasions, according to the regional directors that I spoke to. And all this to keep the national park thing from being brought up and becoming public knowledge. (It was only discussed at committee meetings.) At the first regional board meeting after the Jan. 25 article, the subject was miraculously inserted into the agenda of the board meeting. The article in the Times of Jan. 25 (for once publishing one argument for the other side) was heavily criticized by Peter Pollen and Jim Campbell, both at the board meeting and by contacting the Times' editors. Of course, this criticism was immediately converted into blame and passed on to the poor city editor and the poor reporter. You want to know what the reason for the criticism was? The article was biased and one-sided!

For Peter Pollen to say that the new tank farm could be easily hidden, just like the three existing naval fuel tanks is contrary to the truth. There are very strict federal safety regulations pertaining to oil tank farms, from which military installations are exempt by law for strategic reasons. Commercial tanks cannot be painted green but must be painted a certain number of highly-visible colors, earthen mounds must be built around the tanks, trees must keep so-many-hundred yards away, etc. Actually, the federal regulations combine to make an oil tank farm highly visible — that is the purpose of the safety regulations.

The same snow job (as such is called nowadays) was done on Senator Perrault as had previously been done on the public by the Victoria Times. And then this newspaper dares to talk to me about fair reporting policies. Let me tell you that one of the first premises of fair reporting practices should be a concern for the underdog, be it electoral areas versus cities, or citizens versus governments, or little people versus business corporations. I sincerely hope that it is pure coincidence that cities, governments, and business corporations are your paper's advertising customers.

To set straight some more misleading information regarding the oil tank farm issue, Jim Campbell has argued that the existing DND tanks could be used when the tank farm is relocated. However, the Songhees tanks are used to store fuel oil for heating purposes, while the naval tanks at Yew Point hold diesel oil, and for this reason there are some differences in design for these specific uses, which cannot be mixed.

Let me conclude by urging the publisher and editors of the Victoria Times to stop catering to the powerful elements of this small region, and start reaching out to the underdogs in our society, be they people or areas. One way to attain this is to do some research and in-depth reporting, instead of just printing the press releases and the words that flow from the mouths of a few government officials. You have a weighty responsibility to your readers. Face up to that! — Axel E. Brock-Miller, Savory Road, Langford.

No Green Paper

The March 24 letter from Green Paper Response suggested that we should make use of the department of immigration's "gesture of high democratic calibre" in inviting public comment on immigration policy options. Unfortunately, it is not possible for any Victorian to do that — for the simple reason that nearly two months after publication the green paper is still totally unavailable in this city.

The public library does not have a copy. They had assumed that it had been delayed by the postal strike, but at the beginning of this week they were informed by their Ottawa supplier that it is officially "out of stock," and cannot be supplied at the moment.

The department of immigration when asked if the green paper could be consulted on their premises in Victoria refused, saying that it could be obtained from the Information Canada bookstore in Vancouver. However, when I went to Vancouver for the express purpose of buying it, I found that Information Canada has had no copies since mid-February. According to them, two volumes are out of print and the rest out of stock.

A further phone call to the Victoria department office produced an offer to come in and read a 60-page summary of the paper. This is an improvement on the 16-page summary available for some time, but it is still not good enough. Informed comment has to be based on fact, and if our judgment is to be free of emotion and prejudice, it should be based on a study of the complex statistical tables available only in the green paper.

The Victoria branch of the department allegedly has two copies of the green paper. I suggest that one of these should be placed at public disposal, either on their premises, or better still, at the public library. Then, and only then, will I be able to believe in the "high democratic calibre" of the Hon. Robert Andras and his department. — Vivienne Anderson, 1060 Pakington.

Commission Needed

The refusal of the Greater Victoria regional municipal employers to have an industrial inquiry commission set up shows how genuine these people are in settling the dispute. Capital Regional Board Chairman Jim Campbell let the cat out of the bag when he reiterated that regional employers were standing by their offer. It is exactly when one party adopts such an attitude, which the other party thinks it unfair, that a third party has to intervene. This is why the laws of the land provide for the appointment of an industrial inquiry commission.

Municipal employers want the dispute to continue. After all, local taxes are coming in and they are not supplying services. Shall we be paying only three-quarters of our taxes or will it be the whole lot? No doubt it will be the latter. If this is not daylight robbery I do not know what is!

It is very unfortunate indeed that volunteers do not seem to realize that they are being used by these unscrupulous people as strike-breakers.

In the next few days every alderman should declare whether she or he is in favor of the appointment of an industrial inquiry commission. Taxpayers should make a note of such declarations and act accordingly at the next municipal elections. If a commission is appointed, services for which we are paying but not getting will be restored in a couple of weeks. The decision is definitely up to the Greater Victoria regional municipal employers, who should not only agree to such an appointment but go even further and require that its recommendations be made binding, thus challenging unions' sincerity in ending the dispute. We want the resumption of municipal services, even if taxes have to be increased. We are now paying local taxes for nothing. — S. Tanti, 1440 Grant Street.

CHANGE THE LAW AND END THE DEBATE

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Shall we end the debate now? Shall we go ahead and hang policeman-murderer Rene Vaillancourt and then decide afterwards how we all feel about it? Decide afterwards — when the matter is, shall we say, somewhat less academic and intellectual? Hang him, televise it, have in attendance all members of Parliament in the death room at Don Jail.

Vaillancourt murdered Metropolitan Toronto Police Constable Leslie Maitland. The law says the penalty is death for murder of a policeman or jail guard on duty. That has been the law of Canada since 1968 when Parliament, on a free vote, abolished capital punishment for all other murders — first for a five-year period ending in 1973, now renewed for a five-year period ending in 1978.

All the courts have finished with Vaillancourt. The Supreme Court of Canada was last: it, too, upheld his conviction. Now it is for cabinet to decide if there are circumstances warranting clemency and commutation of the sentence of death to one of life imprisonment.

That is the law. Death for murdering a policeman or jail guard on duty unless the cabinet finds grounds for a clemency order. Was it the intent of the law that those grounds could be simply the cabinet's opposition to the death penalty?

No. Not likely.

So what kind of law do we have? On the books, a compromise between retentionists and abolitionists. In fact the present cabinet has no intention of hanging anybody. Since 1968 there have been nine murders of policemen and one of a jail guard. Each case that has reached cabinet has been commuted. Solicitor-General Warren Allmand is to present the Vaillancourt case to cabinet. He has made it clear he opposes all capital punishment. Most of his cabinet colleagues have made it clear they share his views.

So intead of firm law, there is executive power.

This is dangerous in the face of the noise being made across the country. Police groups everywhere want the rope brought back in.

One petition asking for hanging has been signed by 100,000 people, the Canadian Press reports, and sent to Vancouver Conservative MP John Reynolds who has become a national bring-back-the-rope figure. He said he would accept all petitions sent to him until March 28 when he would present them in the House of Commons.

Vaillancourt should not hang. No murderer should hang. To kill the killer for his killing is to descend to the level he once touched.

The law and the practice of law as it now stands should not be allowed to stand unchanged.

The government should commute Vaillancourt's death sentence to imprisonment and immediately introduce a government bill to amend the Criminal Code to abolish all capital punishment and provide instead for life-until-death imprisonment for those who would kill either policeman or prison guard.

That is how the debate should be ended.

Life-until-death imprisonment. No parole. Separation from the larger society forever. Better the thousands a year to keep a man behind bars than the mark of Cain on us all.

Recession's Effect on Interest:

By JAMES ROWE

WASHINGTON (WP) — The recent sharp rise in long-term interest rates, despite the worst recession since the Second World War, puzzles many U.S. economists and bankers.

Most are convinced, however, that it is a temporary phenomenon caused by extremely heavy corporate bond offerings, general nervousness about inflation and the state of the economy, a less than robust loosening of monetary policy and concern about the huge U.S. Treasury deficit that will have to be financed over the next 15 months.

If the rise is not temporary, said Henry Kaufman, chief economist for the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers, "It would be a disastrous event."

Long-term interest rates — the yield on long-term investments like corporate bonds and home mortgages — behave differently than short-term rates, primarily because the investor has to tie up his funds for a much longer period of time.

In recent months, as the recession has struck hard, business demand for bank credit has declined substantially. The prime rate, which was 12 per cent last summer and fall, is down to 7.5 per cent at most big banks, and will undoubtedly head lower.

First National City Bank of New York estimates that, all told, non-financial corporate borrowing has "slackened by $20 to $25 billion at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, as the steep fall in outstanding bank loans more than offset the step-up in bond issues."

That step-up in bond issues has been "fantastic," according to the chief economist for Commercial Credit Corp., Lee Gould.

Gould said that bond offerings will total $12 billion in the first three months of the year, a record rate. "Before 1973, that would have been a yearly rate," Gould said.

Economists point to a number of reasons for heavy business borrowing in the long-term sector of the market.

Last year many companies were forced to borrow short-term, high-cost funds from banks and are now floating bonds to repay those loans, in other words "restructuring" their debt.

Even though capital spending by companies is on the "weak side," in real terms, Gould said, in dollar terms it is still sizable. According to Chase Manhattan Bank, overall business capital spending will rise five per cent this year and because of declining profits, even more of it will have to be "financed" by borrowing.

Furthermore, according to Edward Roob, head of the bond department for First National Bank of Chicago and formerly chief manager of debt for the U.S. treasury, the huge projected borrowing needs of the government are inducing some companies to borrow now, rather than later.

Many economists expect that the economy will begin to turn around and private credit demands will pick up at just about the time the treasury's borrowing needs are the greatest early next year and rates will rise sharply.

But heavy corporate borrowings do not explain all of the sharp rise, especially when short-term rates are falling sharply. According to the Salomon Brothers Index, corporate bonds, which had fallen to a 3.75 per cent average in mid-February have climbed back to their December level of about 9.5 per cent.

People are extremely nervous about buying long-term securities, according to First Chicago's Roob.

In addition, monetary policy has been "very moderate and hardly aggressive," according to Salomon Brothers' Kaufman.

But, it will become clear that inflation will not "rebound," Kaufman said. Until that happens the long-term market will remain a "volatile one." He believes that long-term rates will be lower next January than they are today.

Japanese Interest Purchased

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Marubeni Corp., Tokyo, has purchased 51 per cent of Western Grain Exchange, Inc., a Portland grain trading firm.

Russell Woolcock of Hillsboro, Ore., who was sole owner, retained 49 per cent interest in Western Grain and remains as president.

Western Grain operates elevators at Great Falls, Mont., and Central Ferry, Wash., on the Snake River. The firm handled $132 million worth of wheat and barley during the year ending June, 1974.

The purchase by Marubeni, Japan's third largest trading company, strengthens its grain gathering operations in this country to a capacity of 1.7 million tons annually, Marubeni officials said.

Marubeni deals with various nations, so the acquisition does not mean a majority of the grain exported by the exchange will go to Japan, Don Ruse, Western Grain secretary, said.

A spokesman for the Portland Marubeni office said the two companies will continue separate operations with no change in personnel or policies.

Investment Firms Plan Merger

MONTREAL (UPI) — Three major investment companies in eastern Canada have announced plans to merge as part of the general trend in the industry towards fewer but larger and better capitalized firms.

The new company will be called Osler, Geoffrion, Norris and Gelinas Inc., with offices in Montreal, Toronto and Quebec City. It will have seats on the Montreal and Toronto stock exchanges and more than 100 registered representatives.

The new firm will be formed through the merger of Geoffrion, Robert and Gelinas Ltd., of Montreal, A. E. Osler, Norris, Gendron Ltd., based in Toronto and Gendron, Norris, Osler, Inc., of Quebec City.

"The link-up complements the activities of each firm, increases research capability, strengthens equity and bond business, consolidates retail and institutional services and adds resources to their operations in underwriting and private placements," the firms said in a statement.

The amalgamation is subject to approval of the regulatory bodies.

Canada Savings Bonds 'Fraud'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada Savings Bonds are the "greatest fraud ever perpetrated on a stupid population," Dr Morton Shulman said Wednesday.

"They're re-guaranteed all right — guaranteed to lose," the millionaire Ontario MP told a meeting of the legal and accounting association ini Winnipeg.

Dr. Shulman, a New Democrat, said investing in material goods is the only way an individual can shield himself against inflation.

"If you buy any paper investment you are guaranteed to lose money," he said.

On the topic of Canada Savings Bonds, Dr. Shulman said the high rate of inflation erases any interest gleaned from the bonds.

He said land and commodity futures are the only two sources of investment guaranteed to yield returns and act as a hedge against inflation.

"Basically, the stock market has no reason to go up. And if it's just sitting still, then 700 on Dow Jones is not the same thing as 700 will be tomorrow. It's actually less because money is worth less."

In order to cope with inflation, Dr. Shulman predicts governments will initiate wage and price controls throughout Canada by next fall.

Despite his gloomy assessment of the current economic situation, Dr. Shulman predicts Canada and the United States will snap out of the economic doldrums by 1978.

"We're going to have a great big delightful bust," he said.

Purse-Snatchers' Penalties: No Jail, But Tailor-Made

A combination of penalties handed down to two young pursesnatchers was described by the sentencing judge in Victoria provincial court Thursday as "very onerous indeed in the aggregate."

But the penalties did not include jail.

Instead Judge William Ostler suspended sentences for Donald Merle Haldene, 18, of 967 Bewdley and Richard John Chabasiewicz, 18, of 897 Selkirk and placed them on two years probation. Then added a set of conditions to the probation unlike any he had ever imposed before.

Each youth was ordered to participate in the Metchosin weekend program for young offenders, instructed to do 50 hours community service work, placed on a curfew of 10 p.m. weekdays and 11 p.m. weekends for six months, and told during that time not to be in one another's company.

He said only their clean records had prevented him from sending them to jail. Ostler noted both had come from what he called good families, had been good athletes, but that in recent months had turned rebellious.

"It is to my mind no coincidence . . . that this coincides with their use of marijuana.

"Here are boys healthy, active, well provided for stooping to the cowardly, contemptible conduct of footpads and thugs."

The two youths pleaded guilty to snatching purses from women in the city March 12, 13, 17 and 19. In the March 13 incident in Beacon Hill Park an 87-year-old woman suffered a broken arm and dislocated shoulder when her purse was wrenched away from her.

A third youth, Rudy John Oleinek, 17, of 885 Craigflower, has been charged in connection with three of the robberies also and pleaded guilty.

He, however, pleaded not guilty to a new charge against him and was remanded to April 29 for trial. His lawyer Clifford Watt requested Oleinik's sentence be delayed for one week.

TELETYPE VET RETIRES

The man whose skillful hands have kept Canadian Press teletypes in Victoria carrying the news to and from the provincial capital and the rest of the world has retired.

Tommy Cuff, one of the last line operators with CP, leaves after almost half a century with the news-gathering agency.

He has been operating and maintaining the teletype and other equipment in the Victoria bureau of CP, located in the Victoria Press Ltd. building, since 1953.

Cuff, a largely self-taught machinist who assembled a complete machine shop in his home over the years, built intricate steam and other engines in his spare time.

One of his jobs has been to see that the teletype machines, which clatter day and night in the Victoria Press newspaper offices year round, keep running, a job which brought him out at all hours of the day and night to cope with power failures and other technical problems.

Cuff began work for CP at Winnipeg in 1925 as night office boy, filing news copy and running errands. He became a teletype operator and then a line operator, operating and maintaining equipment for CP at Port Arthur and Fort William in the 1930s and then in Winnipeg before moving to Victoria.

He and his wife Ann live at 1525 Arrow Rd. in Saanich and have two grown children. Victoria Press presented him with a set of golf clubs and golf bag Thursday at a farewell ceremony.

Survey Shows Anger About Mail Service

TORONTO (CP) — A mood of anger about post office "inefficiency" and labor unrest is sweeping Canada's small-business community, says John Bulloch, president of the 25,000-member Canadian Federation of Independent Business.

Three of every four owners of small businesses who responded to a mail survey by the federation since January expressed dissatisfaction with the mail service, Bulloch said Tuesday.

He said the Federation received 2,745 replies to a questionnaire mailed to 21,000 members across the country.

Of this total, 2,060 were unfavorable.

He said businessmen were asked to document postal complaints and as a result many businessmen sent postmarked letters to show delays that in some cases stretched to a month.

About 70 per cent of the businesses polled had 15 employees or less.

"It's not a scientific survey," said Bulloch, "but there's plenty of evidence to indicate that the concept of one-day mail service is a fraud."

A post office official said representatives of the department will meet Bulloch to discuss the complaints.

Bulloch's survey isn't telling the post office something they don't already know, Victoria Chamber of Commerce manager Brian Small said.

He said businesses were generally concerned about overall delays, strikes and internal disputes in the postal system, but the post office certainly knows about it.

Small said the local post office is "very responsive in reacting to specific complaints" from businesses. Investigations are started whenever there is a complaint about a long delay or a lost piece of mail, he said.

"A lot of the problems come from Montreal or Toronto when the major networks get fouled up," he said.

Sauve Wins Environment Pledges

WASHINGTON (FP) — Canadian Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve has won points on at least three controversial issues during her first diplomatic mission to the U.S.

She secured a U.S. promise to keep its commitment on Great Lakes pollution clean-up.

She sewed up an agreement to refer the controversial Garrison water diversion project to the International Joint Commission (IJC).

And she strongly pushed a plan to keep Alaska oil tankers away from hazardous waters around British Columbia and Washington State.

In addition, Mme. Sauve signed a weather agreement between Canada and the U.S., guaranteeing advance notice and consultation on any moves to alter weather conditions, such as rainmaking.

She also paved the way for more extensive consultations with the U.S. on trans-border environmental issues.

During her two-day visit to Washington, which ended Thursday, Mme. Sauve met officials from the state and transportation departments, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the Council on Environmental Quality and the U.S. Congress.

JURORS CONDEMN DEEP THROAT

WASHINGTON (WP) — A U.S. Superior Court jury has found the manager of the Mark II theatre guilty of 55 counts of exhibiting an obscene movie, the unedited version of Deep Throat.

Immediately after the verdict, Superior Court Judge Joseph M. Hannow praised the jurors for defending "decency here," adding, "ordinarily I don't comment on a jury verdict, but I thank you all very much."

Low Bid Rejection Hit

A decision by Duncan council to accept a local bid that was not the lowest will discourage future bids by outside companies, says Terry Sievert, general manager of Mawson Gage of Victoria.

Sievert said his company was lowest bidder at $76,604 on a contract for electrical alterations and additions in the new city hall.

However, Duncan council awarded the contract to a higher bidder, Hamilton Electric of Duncan at $76,900.

"From a legal standpoint there is nothing we can do," Sievert said. "However, this contravenes the standard practice in bids. There is a certain morality involved."

He said, by custom, the lowest bid is accepted as long as it comes within budget as in this case.

"I think it is extremely unlikely we will bid on future contracts in Duncan if they are going to favor local firms."

He said his company received a direct invitation to tender a bid and was surprised when Mawson Gage did not get the contract despite the low bid.

The Victoria company was one of eight seeking the contract.

Duncan council voted to accept the second-lowest bid, then later resubmitted the question to a vote. At the second vote, council split evenly and Mayor Kenneth Paskin cast the deciding vote in favor of the Duncan company.

The architect and consulting engineers had recommended to Duncan council that the Mawson Gage bid be accepted.

Gonorrhea Incidence Rate Slows

The increase rate of gonorrhea has slowed in B.C., says the annual report of the B.C. Health Branch.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke tabled the report Thursday in the legislature.

The report says that the incidence of the disease rose by 20 per cent a year from 1969 through 1973. Before 1969, the increase was 15 per cent a year.

During 1974, however, the incidence of gonorrhea increased by only four per cent.

The report said the slowdown was due to poor early summer weather which discouraged visitors last year, and to increased publicity about control of venereal disease.

Before The Judge

A 17-year-old youth, who pleaded guilty to mischief March 17, was sentenced in Victoria provincial court Thursday to nine months in prison, to be followed with a one-year probationary period.

Leslie Morgan, of 1540 Jubilee, was arrested after smashing a glass door at Shop Easy, 230 Cook March 16. He had told the court he had just had an argument with his girlfriend and decided to vent his frustrations by punching a few telephone poles, then kicking in the grocery store door.

Morgan also pleaded guilty to failing to comply with a 1974 probation order to attend the Metchosin weekend camp Feb. 21.

For breach of probation, Morgan was given a one-month sentence, to run at the same time as his sentence for mischief.

"He has the dubious distinction of having the highest blood-alcohol reading I've seen for a living person," Judge William Ostler said of a 44-year-old man who pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

Edward Frank Detta, of 1006 Tolmie, was arrested March 21. He has a breathalyzer reading of .32 per cent.

Police said after the reading was obtained, Detta was rushed to the hospital for a check-up.

Detta received a $500 fine and licence suspension.

Bill Fuller, 34, of 484 Kingston, who pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana and hashish, was fined $75 and given a one-day jail sentence.

A psychiatric examination was requested by Ostler for Arthur William Hawes, 31, of 3533 Saanich who was charged Wednesday with possession of a switchblade knife in Saanich for a purpose dangerous to the public peace.

Hawes was remanded to Tuesday for further hearing.

MacKenzie was charged with intent to cause an explosion after an incident last Aug. 30 at Gordon's Towing, 1618 Store.

Ian MacGregor-Irving, 45, of no fixed address was fined $50 and placed on eight months probation after pleading to obtaining lodgings by fraud.

The incident occurred at the Crest Motor Inn, 455 Belleville, two and a half years ago.

Robert William Woods, 25, of 7060 West Saanich Road, also charged with breaking and entering and theft, received a suspended sentence, was placed on 18 months probation and ordered to perform 30 hours of community service work.

Woods had pleaded guilty to stealing three leather coats, one woollen shirt and a pair of moccasins from Elley's Leather Fashions, 738 Johnson, Nov. 23. Entry had been gained by smashing the front window.

The value of the goods taken is $421.20, which Ostler ordered Woods to repay to the leather shop.

Howard Hughes CIA Front?

By ROBERT MEYERS

LOS ANGELES (WP) — The covert worldwide activities of billionaire recluse Howard R. Hughes on behalf of the Central Intelligence Agency are detailed in sensitive documents stolen from a Hughes office here last year, Los Angeles authorities have been told.

In addition to secretly building the unique mining vessel Glomar Explorer, which the CIA used last year to salvage part of a sunken Soviet submarine, the Hughes organization was used as a "paymaster-type front" for undercover CIA agents around the world, the Los Angeles officials were told.

They heard one report that payments for undercover agents were sent by the agency to Hughes units around the world, and that payments were then made to the CIA operatives either in cash or by cheques drawn on Hughes accounts.

Spokesmen for the CIA and Howard Hughes declined comment on the report.

The authorities also heard that the missing documents contain information on Hughes' relations with various political figures, the Nevada Gaming Commission which controls gambling in the state where Hughes once owned casinos, and at least one organized crime figure.

The nature of that information was not revealed, but it was believed to have no connection to the Hughes-CIA activities.

The burglary, which a county grand jury has been probing, occurred shortly after midnight last June 5 and netted the robbers more than $250,000 in cash, not $60,000 as had been reported, investigators were told.

Also stolen were a rare butterfly collection, four 6-by-4-inch gold medallions, several expensive digital wristwatches with the initials "H.S." engraved on the back and several valuable oriental vases, the grand jury was informed.

On March 3 the grand jury secretly indicted Donald R. Woolbright, 36, on two counts of possession of stolen property and extortion. Woolbright is currently being sought in a nationwide manhunt.

Gordon told authorities he first met Woolbright in January, 1974, at the jewelry shop of a former St. Louis bail bondswoman, Carol Yeskey. Over the next six or seven months, Gordon said, he saw Woolbright several times.

In August, 1974, Woolbright called Gordon and told him, "I have some stuff that is dynamite, and I want to talk to a writer about what to do with it."

Gordon said he invited Woolbright to his house in the San Fernando Valley, where Woolbright described the stolen documents.

"I know Howard Hughes better than any man alive," Woolbright reportedly told Gordon.

Gordon said he immediately went to an investigator friend who is a member of the Los Angeles sheriff's department. Two days later Gordon also met with two members of the District Attorney's staff and agreed to help law enforcement agencies in any way he could.

The next day Gordon and a lawyer he had retained met Woolbright. Together the three examined a sample of the documents Woolbright said had been stolen from the Hughes headquarters here.

They saw handwritten notes on three pages of legal-lized paper, addressed to Robert A. Maheu, who was Hughes' $520,000-a-year chief of staff from 1967 to 1970. One note asked Maheu to get the Atomic Energy Commission to hold its testing in northern Nevada, instead of southern Nevada, where Hughes lived at the time, Gordon said.

Stapled to the yellow legal paper was a typed reply from Maheu, saying the matter was being taken care of, Gordon added.

With the knowledge of police, Gordon once secretly tape-recorded Woolbright's voice so police could compare it with an earlier taped extortion attempt on officials of Summa Corp., which Hughes owns. The voices matched, Gordon said he was told.

During their meetings, Gordon said, Woolbright told him four men were commissioned by someone Woolbright didn't know. "They torched it," Gordon said, meaning that the robbers used acetylene torches to open the walk-in vault.

'A Constant Hope We're Winning'

Felt a bit like our esteemed PM the other day.

Well, Mr. Trudeau was given the freedom of the City of London while in England, wasn't he?

And I was given the freedom of Brannan Lake. I was presented with a key (with a long cord and a pin attached) that would open any door. And I was grateful.

For there were many doors and behind them many questions waiting to be answered. And hadn't Duncan Mayor Ken Paskin called for the "full story" about what goes on at the Island Youth Centre there? But what is the full story Mayor Paskin? A reason to one man is an excuse to another.

All I know is I spent a long day there and met a lot of dedicated people trying their hardest to help a group of kids (sure, the staff well outnumbers the youngsters) most of whom don't particularly want to be helped and would rather be on the outside.

There is nothing to stop them being on the outside and it appears that this is Mayor Paskin's main complaint. In the 20 years since Brannan Lake was first opened and since it was completely remodelled and renamed Island Youth Centre in 1969, there have been runaways. And there have been incidents of vandalism in the community, some linked to those from the school.

But as acting administrator Jack Harris points out, "Whenever there is trouble, we are suspect. If only we were able to quote our success stories and tell of kids who were here once and have gone on to do well in their lives, I don't think the public would believe us."

"That's what keeps us going, a constant hope that we are winning," says Iva Woodward, Duncan-based regional director for the Department of Human Resources.

For the public, who hear only of the failures and the misdeeds, there is more often a feeling that they're losing.

John Noble, an official with the human resources department who was director at Brannan Lake for seven years, says many people in Duncan and Nanaimo have suggested that the Brannan Lake kids "should have their heads shaved and be dressed in flourescent jackets, so they would be easily distinguishable in the community."

And, says Noble, residents within 10 miles of the institution used to complain it was "too nice for bad kids who shouldn't have a swimming pool and things other kids don't have." They believed "boys are being persuaded to commit crimes to get in there."

It is nice, too.

Nestled among tall trees on the shores of picturesque Brannan Lake in beautiful country seven miles north of Nanaimo, the Youth Centre has a soccer field, tennis and lacrosse courts, miles of trails for hiking through the 164-acre grounds and of course the lake for swimming and boating in the summer. Under the instruction of Fred May, the boys themselves have built six canoes, three sailboats (including the masts) and two motor boats.

And, as well as several recreation rooms such as the library and billiards room, there is a big gymnasium and a fine indoor heated pool. The boys all learn woodwork and auto mechanics from Art Jones, who also runs a driver-training school.

All these things are of great value in preparing the youngsters for a return to society.

The pool, also used by retarded children from Nanaimo and Ladysmith and other groups, is "great therapy," says teacher Mike Yakelashek. "A kid can be very uptight and you take him into the pool and he really settles down."

But all these things are not the rights of the youngsters who go there.

Explained Joe Alexis, the former Trinidadian who is in charge of the program for boys from the Lower Mainland, the youngsters get points for good behavior and for good work and with the points they can buy time for such things as sailing or playing pool.

"It's all a privilege system," says Joe, "you have to earn these rights and privileges."

When I was there, several of the boys were cleaning up and getting ready to go home for the Easter break. But many were not and social worker Ike MacKay explained "they haven't earned their trip."

Ike, one of Canada's best-known soccer players, loves his job. "The kids are the best part of it," he says. And you can tell that the others feel the same way.

Take Walter Shogan for example.

Walter is chief child care counsellor and has been in the job for 34 years, 14 years in Port Coquitlam and 20 at Brannan Lake. And his three senior counsellors, Dick Burdett, Len Bailey and Frank Chapman, have all been there "for years."

"Kids who come here have been through the mill," says Shogan, "most of them have forgotten how to live and our objective is to teach them everyday living again."

Under the over all administration of Harris, each of the program directors is responsible for his own department. There's Alexis, Joe Sasvari who runs the program for Vancouver Island youths, and principal Frank Murphy, who handles the Brannan Lake School for the Nanaimo School District.

And then there's Tom Williams.

Williams is in charge of the newly-opened Guthrie Centre for reception and assessment of youngsters. It is run as a completely separate unit and has five beds for boys and five for girls in a general assessment program that lasts about six weeks, and another four beds in an emergency 24-hour service to the community.

Some of the youngsters now attending the Youth Centre have been referred there from the Guthrie Centre. And all 20 of the day students — girls and boys — who attend the Brannan Lake junior-secondary school went through the Guthrie Centre.

The day students, says principal Murphy, are kids who have had difficulties in ordinary schools and have either dropped out or been kicked out.

"We pick them up right on their doorstep every day and take them home again, too. They aren't motivated enough to come themselves.

"These are kids with real problems," says Murphy, "the ordinary tough guy is being dealt with now in the community. Almost all the kids have a very poor self-concept. They hate themselves and they think everyone else hates them. They have an image that they are bad boys and they do everything they can to prove this. Unfortunately, they've been getting this message from society. That's the first thing we have to do, improve their self-concept."

"There is such a huge range in ability — from about Grade 2 to Grade 12 — that we have to set up an individual program for each student," explains Murphy.

"Their behavior is our first responsibility. People ask me what is our success rate and I tell them 100 per cent. Every boy who leaves here is better than when he arrived, some a little better, some a lot. But every boy changes and he changes for the better."

I talked to John, a 16-year-old from nearby Wellington who said he got in fights at his school and one day the principal said "take your books and get out!"

At first, John didn't like Brannan Lake School.

"I had trouble with some of the boys here, too," he said. "But after a while it was all right." Now he's all smiles and doesn't want to leave.

"I hope I won't have to go to another school, I like it here," said John.

Many don't like it, though.

I found 16-year-old Rob from Vancouver sitting beside the pool watching others have fun.

"It's my second time here," he said distantly. "The first time was for swiping cars and B and Es and they discharged me and then I was caught for possession of narcotics and sent back."

"I don't like it much here, though," said Rob. "You can only get seven cigarettes a day here. I'd rather be on the outside."

"Dad lives in Vancouver and mum lives in Kamloops," explained Rob. "I'll be getting my discharge on April 7 and going to a foster home."

He smiled. "I like the swimming pool and the billiards room, oh and the free meals and free cigarettes, I guess, but I don't think this place helps you any, though."

I found Donna sitting looking out over the lake and she said she didn't like the getting up at 7 a.m. part, but likes the "arts and crafts and listening to records and relaxing."

Joe Sasvari, whose program is specifically designed to suit the community needs of the upper-Island-Powell River region, proudly showed me over the new Campbell House, a bright and cheery cottage for girls which is to open soon.

Over at his other cottage, Park House for Island boys, there are signs of life and occasionally signs of rebellion.

In one of the little sleeping cubicles, an Indian boy has plastered his walls with psychedelic posters and a cross hangs next to a Swastika and a sign defiantly proclaiming "Red Power."

While Mayor Paskin and others have been concerned about what happens outside, few, except for the staff there who are deeply involved, have cared enough about the inside, about the boys themselves.

We hear how terrible these kids are. Yet I saw no terror. We hear how they keep escaping yet no one ran past me. In all the hours I was there, I saw no fights, heard no arguments or even raised voices. The kids I met had an ideal opportunity, through me, to show the outside world how bad they are, yet they didn't. Instead, they were polite, as politeness goes, and were interested in what I was doing.

As for the running away, Sasvari says when the kids go there it is tough for them at the start, and that's when most of them run. Most don't get far, though and don't do any harm.

"We have no bars here," says Joe with a kind smile. "What we do have is very close personal supervision and if we get a kid with really tough problems, then it's a one-to-one basis for 24 hours.

"But what we provide this way is a relationship . . . bars do not provide a relationship."

Extended School Day Will Start April 8

A five-hour school day will be introduced in Greater Victoria senior secondary schools and most elementary schools Tuesday, April 8.

Junior secondary schools will be put on a four-hour day the same day.

Decision to lengthen class time from the present three hours was taken by Greater Victoria school board at a special meeting Thursday.

The six senior secondary schools, including Reynolds, will be open five hours between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. daily, with each principal free to set exactly which hours.

The 10 junior secondaries will have morning classes from 8:30 to 12:30, plus an optional hour between 1:30 and 3 p.m. for individual or group instruction.

Elementary schools will be operating five hours daily if volunteers are keeping the schools clean enough and where health standards are met.

An amendment by trustee Roy Temple that would have put junior secondary schools on the same five-hour day as senior secondaries was defeated.

Greater Victoria schools have been operating on reduced hours since district custodians and maintenance workers, members of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, went on strike Feb. 24.

The board appealed to the public, including parents, pupils, interested citizens, and teachers, to help clean the schools.

District superintendent Jake Longmore reported that as of Thursday, 28 district schools were judged clean, 20 satisfactory and eight unsatisfactory.

A week before, he said, only nine schools were judged clean, 26 satisfactory and 19 unsatisfactory.

Five schools have no volunteers to clean them, he said, one because the principal has asked that no volunteers be sent in and four because no parents have volunteered.

Longmore said volunteers are particularly short in the junior secondary schools. Colquitz and Lansdowne have none, he said.

Oak Bay junior started with nine volunteer cleaners and now has three, he said, and Central started with 20 and now has 10.

Trustee Peter Bunn challenged teachers to "demonstrate real professionalism" by helping to clean the schools, a suggestion that received applause from about 20 parents attending the meeting.

"For us to go in and do the kind of things you're suggesting would in fact be strike-breaking," responded Mavis De Girolamo, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

Teachers in the district have voted to cross CUPE picket lines but to refuse to do any work normally done by custodians and janitors.

Tutoring Eyed For Students

Weekend and evening tutoring may have to be started this spring to help Greater Victoria students make their school year, trustees were told Thursday.

Assistant superintendent of schools Dr. John Wiens was assessing for the school board the impact of the current reduced school day on the district's 29,000 students.

He said the shortened school day, which the board instituted after district custodians and maintenance men went on strike Feb. 24, has affected students in three ways.

There are some who have worked hard and whose school work has not suffered.

There are those who have worked hard but their work has suffered anyway; and there are those who haven't worked and whose schooling has suffered.

When the strike ends, Wiens said, the board will have to decide whether to give special help both to those who have tried hard and those who have slacked, or to single out those who have tried.

"I am not very sympathetic for the plight of students that could have helped themselves and didn't," he said.

Remedial help for students who have been slipping behind has already begun in many schools, Wiens said, but teachers may have to start weekend and evening tutoring.

Wiens said he thinks the dangers of the current strike and school disruptions to children's education is exaggerated by many.

Freed from hours of sitting in classes, these students have been able to work independently, he said.

After the three-week custodians' strike two years ago students were asked what help they needed to make up for the disrupted school time.

Their response, said Wiens, was: "We don't need summer school, we don't need night schools, we'll be fine."

Most were, he added, but a few weren't.

Young Trio Arrested

Three 16-year-old juvenile boys will be summoned to appear in Family court next week for car theft after Saanich police arrested them at 7:12 a.m. today driving a stolen vehicle.

A police spokesman said the trio is also charged with breaking and entering the Scandia Food Palace, 3591 Douglas overnight and stealing about $90 cash.

Juvenile Faces Court

A 14-year-old Victoria boy is expected to appear in family court early next week charged with stealing a car and possibly dangerous driving following an incident in Colwood at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Colwood RCMP said a car, reported stolen in Victoria earlier in the day, sideswiped a vehicle on the Trans-Canada Highway and then crashed into a power pole on Millstream and Peatt.

Police said the boy and a 13-year-old girl companion fled the scene and were arrested about two blocks away. They were taken to Victoria General Hospital for treatment of minor injuries and released.

The mishap interrupted power distribution in the immediate vicinity for a short time, police said.

Airport Open For All Taxis

Taxi service at Victoria International Airport should double April 1 under a new system worked out with the Ministry of Transport.

Under the system, all qualified taxi operators, fleet or individual, can both drop off and pick up fares at the airport, provided they have paid the $40 annual fee and received a permit decal from the transport ministry.

In the past, all taxis were allowed to take passengers to the airport, but only authorized drivers were allowed to pick up fares there and the regulations meant many of the drivers had to return to Victoria with empty cars.

Drivers are required to accept short-haul fares from the airport and the cabs must be kept clean and in good condition.

Special waiting areas for the cabs displaying the special airport decal will be set up April 1.

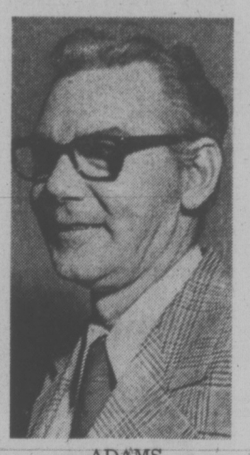
New SPCA Head

Don Adams, 41, an inspector with the Victoria branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals since May of 1971, takes over as manager Tuesday.

His promotion came after Dave Beeching, 64, manager of the local SPCA office for 13 years, decided to retire. Beeching will continue as a consultant for the next six months.

Both Beeching and Adams are former policemen, Beeching joining the SPCA after 30 years with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Adams at one time was with the Ontario Provincial Police.

The local SPCA branch, with office and kennels on Napier Lane, has a permanent staff of eight, including three inspectors, and a part-time staff of eight.



ADAMS
. . . sees changes

Main function of the operation is welfare of animals but it also provides animal control under contract to Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, said Adams.

He said animal control put the local SPCA about $5,000 in the red last year and there is the possibility of having to get out of this kind of work rather than subsidize it with donations intended for animal welfare.

Beeching said the major change he has seen over the years is a vast increase in the number of animals the society has had to deal with, from 5,407 in 1962 when he started as manager, to 9,200 last year.

As the city becomes more crowded, people become more conscious of animals and the problems they create, he said.

Adams, who is an "aviculturist," a bird hobbyist, who breeds several species and treats injured birds, has developed a method of washing and caring for birds coated with oil.

He said he would like to see people more actively aware of animal problems. He said he disagrees with a common attitude among many young people that their pets have a biological right to reproduce.

On Top of Old Smoky, a Tyrant Heel

TODAY I OFFER A REport from the persecuted minority to which I belong. We smoke. In a society becoming rampantly anti-cigarette, that makes us fair game for anyone who never acquired the habit, and more so for the person who has kicked it.

A man's home is supposed to be his castle. But even under our own roofs, we're no longer safe. So short a time ago that I still get hot under the collar at the recollection, that fact was forced on my attention.

An ex-smoker of our acquaintance stopped by for a chat and a mug-up. He was no more than inside the house when he began sniffing like a bird dog.

"Still smoking, eh?" he said to me. "I thought you'd have quit by now."

As an item of self-preservation, the persecuted learn that meekness is politic. It didn't matter that the caller had to my personal knowledge set two wastebaskets afire and ruined a living-room rug. He had quit smoking, an achievement which elevated him to the master class.

"Still at it," I told him. "But I've really cut down."

"It doesn't work," he said. "You'll never quit that way! Now look at me . . ."

I looked. It occurred to me that he had put on weight since he renounced nicotine, most of it under his belt.

"Smoked my last cigarette on May 17, 1973, at eight in the evening," he proclaimed, launching into the familiar testament of the saved.

Why does the ex-smoker insist on clobbering his victim with the precise date, hour and even minute at which he last lit up? Is it pride, a sin we're warned against? Or is he a prisoner of virtue who draws cold comfort from keeping track of time served?

And why did this otherwise pleasant fellow — a man who would go out of his way to avoid stepping on a bug — alternate for the next five minutes between boasting about his will-power and working me over for my lack of the same?

I could have suggested that he'd better start watching his cholesterol level. But civility forbade. Anyway, us smokers are learning our place, and in case we forget it, there are plentiful reminders.

Signs are springing up. Last time my dear one and I visited a cafeteria we favor, we were fetched up short of our preferred corner by a sign that dangled on chains from the ceiling.

The smug message lettered on it was, 'This Area Reserved for the Comfort of Those Who Do Not Smoke.'

We halted at the dividing line. "Look at those creeps at OUR table!" I muttered to Win. "You ever see such an unhealthy-looking pair?"

My loyal wife, who rarely reminds me that she hasn't smoked since 4:03 p.m. Feb. 27, 1970, shushed me.

We found a table on the edge of the flyway from the kitchen. A waitress, probably a non-smoker, joggled it while hurrying past with an order for the elect, slopping coffee into my saucer.

I am perfectly willing to grant non-smokers their rights, and take elaborate care to ensure that those rights aren't infringed upon.

I don't smoke in stores, even those in which smoking isn't prohibited, or in buses, or in houses in which an ungracious lack of ashtrays conveys a loaded hint.

But the unreformed who reach for the pack in shirt pocket or handbag also have their rights. One of these is or should be to pollute the hell out of ourselves without being bullied, scolded, condescended to and moralized at by never-touch-'ems who shun cigarettes but indulge the reprehensible habit of petty tyranny.

With tolerance on one side and consideration on the other, smoker and non-smoker can live in amity. Win and I have been demonstrating that fact for five years, two weeks three days, seven hours and 57 minutes!

Players Muzzled?

Boycott Lindsay, Writer – Eagleson

ATLANTA (AP) — A letter from Allan Eagleson, president of the National Hockey League Players Association, has asked Atlanta Flames players not to co-operate with controversial hockey writer Stan Fischler or former NHL star Ted Lindsay.

The letter addressed to Pat Quinn, the Flames' player representative, was on NHLPA stationery and signed by Eagleson. Dated Jan. 10, 1975, it advised Quinn and his teammates: "... I think it in the best interests of the players association and the players not to co-operate with either of these gentlemen. ..."

A newspaper article last December quoted Lindsay as saying Eagleson was "one of the biggest detriments in sports." Lindsay is the color commentator on NBC Television's NHL game of the week.

Fischler also has been critical of Eagleson in the past in his weekly column for a national sports publication and in a book he had written.

The letter, which had been posted on a bulletin board in the Flames' dressing room, was taken down by Quinn Friday night after Atlanta's 3-2 victory over Buffalo Sabres.

"I'm sorry, this is a player matter," Quinn said. "It doesn't concern anyone else. We get all kinds of letters. And some of them shouldn't be put on the bulletin board."

Quinn had no further comment, nor did the other Flames players. Eagleson was unavailable for comment, as was Lindsay.

But Fischler, said: "It seems to me he is trying to punish honest reporting and trying to influence the press to report matters beneficial to players rather than matters that are beneficial to the public."

Cougars Dabble in History With Reason for Optimism

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

As far as importance goes, it won't rival the Fall of Rome, but Victoria Cougars make a bit of history tonight: participating, for the first time, in the Western Canada Hockey League playoffs.

And ditto Kamloops Chiefs, who face the Cougars at Memorial Arena in the opening game of their best-of-seven Western Division semi-final series.

And you'll have to excuse the Cougars if they believe they can outlast the Chiefs.

Reasons for optimism are many.

The season's performance is one. When the Cougars humbled Lethbridge Broncos 9-1 at Memorial Arena on Thursday night, Victoria wound up first in the Western Division, and 15 points ahead of the fourth-place Chiefs.

Victoria won seven of eight games from the Chiefs, including all four in Kamloops.

There's also a scoring factor that breeds optimism in Victoria's corner. Finishing with a flourish, Cougars are the only WCHL team ever to surpass the 400-goal mark.

Reasons continue with Mel Bridgman, the hometown-developed centre who won league scoring honors with 157 points. His 66 goals and 91 assists established club records.

The offence has been obvious for most of the season.

On the eve of the playoffs, his defence may have given coach Pat Ginnell another reason to anticipate first-round success. Against Lethbridge on Thursday, as they were against Medicine Hat Tigers in a 9-3 victory Tuesday, Victoria defencemen had a solid look about them.

Perhaps often too offensive-minded in the past, the rearguards have been satisfyingly steady in their past two games.

The extra support reflected in goaltender Bob Leslie's play. The "Beaver" came up with one of his best home-ice performances Thursday and was unfortunate in not recording his second shutout.

He missed by 102 seconds. A forward's laxity in intercepting the puck and a well-placed shot by gary Wagner ruined Leslie's night. Otherwise, he was great. He smothered the puck with authority and confidence and came out smartly to cut down the angles on some of Lethbridge's best scoring chances.

Bridgman clearly stood out as the champ. He scored four goals and set up another by Dan Lucas.

Jim Gustafson added two goals and became the fourth Cougar to surpass the 100-point total in scoring. He also took an assist to finish with 102, behind Lucas (113), Peter Morris (115) and Bridgman.

Trottier, who collected a goal and two assists in Lethbridge's 8-6 victory over the Bruins in New Westminster on Friday, wound up No. 2 in league scoring with 46 goals and 98 assists for 144 points, 13 behind Bridgman.

In winning 47 games this season, the Cougars fell only six short of matching the team's combined total for its first three years in the league.

Cougars and the Chiefs shift to Kamloops for the second game on Sunday and return to Memorial Arena for the third on Tuesday. The fourth will be played Thursday in Kamloops and the fifth, if necessary, in Victoria nexty Saturday.

Let's Hear It For Washington

Times News Services

Vancouver Canucks took an important step forward and the Flames continue to burn brightly in Atlanta but the lowly Washington Capitals also drew a loud round of applause Friday.

They finally won a game on the road.

Nelson Pyatt's two third-period goals helped Washington defeat the California Seals 5-3 in Oakland. It marks the first time the Capitals have recorded a road victory since joining the National Hockey League.

The Capitals, who had lost 37 consecutive games on the road this season, their first in the NHL, jumped into a 3-1 lead on goals by Doug Mohns, Ron Anderson and Gord Smith.

Butch Williams opened scoring for Seals and then Charlie Simmer and Dave Gardner brought California even, 3-3, to set the stage for Pyatt's goals. Pyatt scored his second into an open net in the final minute of play when Seals benched goalie Gilles Meloche in favor of an extra attacker.

The Canucks, coming up with a commanding 41-16 edge in shots on goal, defeated Los Angeles Kings 4-2 in Vancouver to vault back into first place in the Smythe Division.

John Gould, Leon Rochefort, Dennis Ververgaert and Don Lever each scored once as Canucks moved one point ahead of Chicago Black Hawks and three ahead of St. Louis Blues.

Bob Nevin and Bob Berry replied for the Kings.

The surging Flames collected a power-play goal from Tom Lysiak at 13:39 of the final period and a pair from rookie Eric Vail to shade Buffalo Sabres 3-2. It was Atlanta's fifth straight victory and moved the Flames to within three points of third-place New York Islanders in the race for a Patrick Division playoff berth.

Jerry Korab and Danny Gare scored for Buffalo.

Vail, Atlanta's hope for the rookie - of - the - year award, drew a standing ovation from a crowd of 13,786 fans when he connected for his second goal, and 36th of the season, in the third period.

"I've never seen any more enthusiastic reaction from a crowd," said Flames' coach Fred Creighton.

"If that doesn't pump you up, I don't know what will. You would have to be a statue not to be affected by it. I know it gave me a tingle and I'm sure it got to the players, too. I'm sure that ovation had a great deal to do with our scoring the winning goal."

Third Time Lucky

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Dave Roberts set a world record in the pole vault Friday by soaring 18 feet, 6½ inches in the Florida Relays at the University of Florida.

The previous mark was 18 feet, 5¾ inches set July 2, 1972 by Bob Seagren at Salem, Ore.

Roberts, formerly a student at Rice University and now a resident of Gainesville who competes with the Florida Track Club, missed on his first two attempts at the height. He pulled up short twice on his approach for the final attempt before clearing the bar.

Four City Swimmers Hit Gold

VANCOUVER — A trio of Vancouver swimmers established national age-group records but Victorians came up with four gold medals in the opening day of the British Columbia championships.

The record-breakers, all scoring in the 200-metre freestyle, were Robbie Bayliss (2:11.7) and Steven Pickell of Vancouver Dolphins, and Pam O'Dell (2:13.4) of Hyacks. Bayliss and O'Dell competed in the 11-12 division while Pickell's standard is for 15-17 boys.

Victoria's champs were Paul Sparrow of Juan de Fuca Cohoes (10 and under boys' 100 backstroke), Patti Gilker of Saanich (11-12 girls' 100 backstroke), Allison Noble of Cohoes (13-14 girls' 100 backstroke) and Karen Rushcall of VASC (15-17 girls' 200 butterfly).

Janet Rushcall, also of VASC, took the silver medal in the 13-14 girls' 200 freestyle while Sparrow added a bronze medal in the 11-12 boys' 400 freestyle.

Skaters Start Chase

Some of North America's top skaters attracted most of the attention this morning as the Canadian indoor speed-skating championships got under way at Memorial Arena.

The two-day event is being staged in Victoria for the first time.

Today's program was to continue until about 6 p.m. and competition resumes Sunday at 9 a.m., continuing until late afternoon.

Thibeault, the only member of Canada's national team, expects Gaetan Boucher, also of St. Foy, Quebec, to provide some of the stiffest competition in the intermediate division.

Members of the host Esquimalt Speed Skating Club listed among the threats for national titles include midget skaters Keith Robinson and Brenda Shields, juveniles Cheryl Sanderson and Guyle Cornett, bantam Shawn Hobday and juniors Debbie Bourgeois and David Shields.

ONE OF FAVORITES to collect titles in Canadian indoor speedskating championships at Memorial Arena is Jacques Thibault (above) of Quebec, winner of North American intermediate championship this year and member of Canadian national team. Competition started this morning and was expected to continue until about 6 p.m. Skaters resume the chase for titles Sunday at 9 a.m. and wind up the meet about 6 p.m. (Times photo by Irving Strickland.)

Champs Retain Tag-Team Title

Ormond Mulumba and Guy Mitchell successfully defended their Canadian tag-team championship Wednesday by defeating Seigfreid Steinke and Masa Saito in the feature battle of a professional wrestling card at Memorial Arena.

The champs won two of the three falls.

Milestone for Gordie

2,001: Howe Odyssey

Times News Services

Gordie Howe felt good and was confident it was going to be a skate night.

The 46-year-old Houston Aeros right-winger was right. He skated so well Thursday night in Houston he scored two goals and had two assists, increasing his career scoring total to 2,001 points, in the Aeros' 8-0 World Hockey Association victory over Winnipeg Jets.

No other major league hockey player has reached the 2,000 mark. Bobby Hull of Winnipeg is second in career points with 1,428.

Gordie, who plans to retire after playing just one game next season, said he had been working for the 2,000-point mark.

"And it was good to get it on a night when everything fell into place," he said.

Howe was pleased that goalie Ron Grahame got his fourth shutout of the season, that the Aeros had clinched the WHA's Western Division title, and that son Mark Howe got a goal.

"I felt good," Gordie said. "When we were skating in warmup, my legs felt good and I told Mark it was going to be a skate night. It all adds to the enjoyment of the game."

Against Winnipeg, Gordie skated around Hull to score a short-handed goal and his 1,998th point at 11:08 in the first period. At 9:03 in the third period, he got his 32nd goal of the season.

Just 27 seconds later, Howe passed to Jim Sherrit for his 2,000th point when Sherrit's goal gave the Aeros a 6-0 lead. Gordie's final point of the night came at 16:10 when he and Sherrit provided assists for Mark's 32nd goal of the season.

In Friday night's games, Toronto Toros beat Edmonton Oilers 5-4 to move within two points of the Canadian Division-leading Quebec Nordiques, whom they play tonight in Quebec City, while Phoenix Roadrunners and Minnesota Fighting Saints tied 2-2.

In other games Thursday, New England Whalers defeated Cleveland Crusaders 5-3, San Diego Mariners beat Indianapolis Racers 5-2 and Baltimore Blades tied Edmonton 2-2.

Veteran Catcher Ready for Work

By The Associated Press

Bob Montgomery, a journeyman catcher who'll be 31 next month, is faced with the task of filling in for Boston's injury-prone Carlton Fisk for the second year in a row.

On Friday, he hit a three-run triple off Chicago's Wilbur Wood in the sixth inning and a three-run homer off Jack Kucek in the 10th leading the Red Sox to a 9-5 exhibition baseball victory over the White Sox.

"Shucks, days like this only come natural," Montgomery joked with reporters. "Just look at the homers I hit and the runs I've driven in in my career."

For the record, Montgomery has 16 homes and 97 RBI in 235 major league games. With Fisk sidelined for lengthy periods last season with groin and knee injuries, he got into 88 games and hit .252 with four homers and 38 RBIs.

This time, Fisk is out until mid-May at least with a broken arm and Montgomery is due for plenty of action. He seems ready with a .371 spring batting average, 13 hits and nine RBIs.

Montgomery had to share batting laurels Friday with Juan Beniquel, who had two doubles and three singles and doubled home the tying run with two out in the ninth.

Baltimore's hot-hitting Don Baylor is outdoing Montgomery. Baylor hit a two-run homer, his eighth in spring training, leading the Orioles to a 4-2 victory over Kansas City Royals. Baylor, who also doubled, boosted his hitting streak to 14 games and raised his home-run total to eight and his batting average to .547.

Doc Medich allowed three hits and one run in seven innings as the Yanks beat Atlanta Braves 4-1. He has allowed only two runs in 28 innings. Bob Oliver's tie-breaking two-run homer was the big blow.

Houston Astros rocked Ferguson Jenkins for 11 hits and eight runs in the first three innings and beat the Rangers 15-10. The Astros got 22 hits, led by Greg Gross, who went three for three and drove in four runs.

UVic Athletic Program Jumping

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

This was the year that UVic arrived.

After 10 years of trying, the basketball Vikings made it to the top of the standings in the Canada West University Athletic Association men's league and nearly beat UBC Thunderbirds in the championship playoff.

The school opened its new $2.4 million athletic complex, named after Archie McKinnon, and moved into the new gym, pool, squash courts, classrooms and offices in January.

And the move to the new building brought an explosion in intramural sports and recreation that has made UVic one of the most active athletic universities in Canada.

It was fitting, of course, that McKinnon himself was on hand to present the silverware at the annual UVic athletic awards night Friday at the Student Union Building.

Even more fitting was the fact that Tony Beeftink was named winner of the Martlett Trophy, considered one of the top awards and given to the person making the outstanding contribution to athletics at the school.

Beeftink, a 22-year-old fourth-year physical education student who lives in Victoria but was raised in Port Alberni, was UVic's student director of intramural activities.

"Tony's work over the last two years is one of the main reasons we have so many people involved in intramural sports here," athletic manager Mike Elcock said.

The selection committee had several top candidates to consider for another major award, the Robert T. Wallace Shield for the rookie of the year. It went to field hockey player Jan Crook with special recognition to volleyballer Tom Graham and basketball star Robbie Parris.

The basketball Vikings this season lacked a super star but got there with balance of teamwork. That presented problems in selecting the most valuable player, but the choice finally settled on Parris. The Sparling Trophy for the outstanding defensive player went to freshman Evan Jones, an excellent checker, while Pard Hogeweide received the award for team leadership and inspirational play.

Debbie Brill was presented a B.C. record certificate in recognition of a 6'1½" high jump during the year while Rick Piechotta was awarded the Skip Bryan Trophy as the top point scorer for the hockey Vikings.

The Hugh Farquhar Trophy for top performances in this spring's superstars competition went to Stu Garland, the men's winner, and Donna Blackstock, the women's winner.

There was some good news, too, for Elcock. Acting as temporary athletic director for the past three years, he learned just prior to the awards presentations that he has been appointed manager of athletics and recreation at UVic.

Australian, India Sides Visit Victoria

JOHN BUCHANAN
. . . Canadian choice

Two outstanding cricket sides are scheduled to play in Victoria in May.

Australia's test team, considered one of the finest in the world, and the Hyderabad Blues of India will participate in three matches within a five-day span.

The Aussies will play the Western Canada Selects May 22 at Beacon Hill Park as part of a Canadian tour.

The Australian team will open its visit May 23 at Vancouver's Brockton Oval by facing a British Columbia Cricket Association team. At least five Victoria players are expected to be selected to the Western Selects. As well, the district also is expected to be strongly represented on the B.C. side.

A four-man selection committee, which includes Tom Brierly of Victoria, is expected to name the Western squad in mid-April.

The Indian squad will play Vancouver Island all-stars May 24 and 25. Matches have tentatively been scheduled at Beacon Hill Park and St. Michael's University School.

While the announcements may serve as a treat for district fans, there was another special one tossed at John Buchanan, a member of Albion in the Victoria and District Cricket Association.

Buchanan has been selected to play for the Canadian Colts, a team that will represent Canada for the first time in the international junior tournament, scheduled July 21-28, at The Hague, Netherlands.

Buchanan, Paul Griffin and Trevor Hart, both of Vancouver, are the only B.C. players selected to the 15-man team.

Doubles Upsets Bounce Rollicks

OTTAWA — Friday was an upsetting day for the Rollicks as play in the Canadian badminton championships moved through the quarter-final round.

Bruce Rollick, the Vancouver veteran who formerly held the national singles crown, was an unexpected loser in men's doubles. Rollick and Rolf Paterson, the second-seeded pair, were tripped 15-4, 15-8 by the seventh-ranked Toronto combination of Dave Gibson and Pradit Basu.

In women's doubles, Judy Rollick, Bruce's wife, was also seeded second and also was shunted to the sidelines. Judy and her Vancouver partner, Mimi Milsson, dropped a 15-10, 15-10 decision to the seventh-rated team of Jenifer Dakin, Toronto, and Pauline Belisle, Montreal.

Judy was also bounced out of the running in women's singles, but this defeat was no surprise. Judy was rated seventh and her opponent was Alison Ridgway of Calgary, seeded fourth and an 11-0, 11-3 winner over Mrs. Rollick.

Bruce, seeded second, made it to the semi-finals of men's singles with an 18-13, 15-5 triumph over national junior champion Lucio Fabris of Creighton Mines, Ont.

Also advancing to the singles semis were Jamie McKee, Toronto; Wayne Macdonnell, Vancouver, and Don Smith, Calgary.

Super Round by Nicklaus

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, challenged by Johnny Miller's gaudy exploits of the last year or so, responded with one of the most outstanding efforts of his career Friday, an eight-under-par 63.

"It's a better round than the record 64 at Augusta," Nicklaus said, comparing his effort against the 1965 round that matched the record in the Masters.

And, while Nicklaus was stretching his lead to six shots halfway through the $200,000 Heritage Classic, Miller quietly abandoned this resort island off the South Carolina coast.

He was a victim of the 36-hole cut. He shot 151, 22 strokes behind Nicklaus.

It was the first time he had failed to make the cut since the 1973 Canadian Open.

"No excuses," said Miller. "I just played lousy."

Nicklaus' 63, which gave him a two-round total of 129, 13 under par, was two strokes away from the 61s Miller scored in the Tuscon and Phoenix earlier this season. But the courses and conditions don't compare.

And Nicklaus played them all well.

"I didn't hit a bad shot," he said. "I hit three shots that I wasn't completely happy with."

He missed two greens. On one of those he came within three or four inches of holing an explosion shot for birdie. He came out of another bunker to within three feet.

On all the others he laced his shots dead at the pins on the tiny greens that nestle among the massive sand traps and the moss-hung old cypress. He was never more than 22 feet from the cup. His longest birdie putt was 18 feet. Four times he threw his irons inside of three feet and he missed one of those putts.

Tom Weiskopf matched the previous course record of 65 and was alone in second place, six strokes behind with a 135. Hale Irwin and Tom Kite each shot a 68 and were tied at 137.

Trevino shot 67 for 140 and Player had a 70 for 141. Arnold Palmer shot a 75 for 149.

Birdie Protects Carner's Position

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — JoAnne Carner, seeking her first 1975 tour victory, blew a three-stroke advantage Friday but came back with a birdie on the final hole to take a one-stroke lead over Judy Rankin in the second round of the $70,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

A former Seattle resident, Carner had an even-par 72 to go with Thursday's five-under-par 67 for a 139 total. Rankin fired a 67 Friday to finish at 140, one stroke ahead of Jane Blalock.

Ipswich Advances To Cup Semifinal

LEICESTER, England (CP) — Ipswich Town reached the English Football Association Cup semi-final for the first time Thursday with a 3-2 victory over Leeds United in the third replay of their quarter-final soccer series.

The quarter-final series covered four matches and seven hours. In previous games, the teams tied 0-0 twice and 1-1 once.

Ipswich now meets West Ham United in a semi-final game at Aston Villa's ground Saturday, April 5. The other semi-final is between Birmingham and Second Division Fulham.

Clive Woods, a young forward who was only in the game because of an injury to first-team regular Mick Lambert, played a key role for Ipswich. With nine minutes remaining and extra time looking inevitable after Leeds had twice tied the score, Woods fired a 20-yard drive past goalkeeper David Stewart for the winning goal.

Meanwhile, Irish international Terry Conroy kept Stoke City in the English League championship race Friday with two goals which earned Stoke a 2-2 draw with West Ham.

Goalkeeper Joe Corrigan, making a string of superb saves, frustrated Middlesbrough's championship bid in a 2-1 victory by Manchester City.

At the other end of the table, Tottenham Hotspur brightened hopes of relegation with a 3-0 victory over Wolverhampton Wanderers. It was Tottenham's first home win since Dec. 7. Spurs' new skipper, Steve Perryman, scored twice.

LATEST ACE A RECOR FOR TURYK

He scored another hole-in-one Thursday.

It is ace No. 18 in a golfing career that began only about 20 years ago.

It's his eighth ace on the seventh hole and gives Turyk a share of a world record with Joe Lucius, 59, of the Mohawk Golf Club in Tiffin, Ohio. Tiffin has eight aces on his club's 15th hole. They now share the record for most aces of a single hole.

Turyk scored his 17th ace on his 54th birthday, March 31, two years ago.

The latest ace and a chip-in for a birdie two on the 13th hole helped Turyk to his best-ever round, a six-over-par 76.

Jane Austen

This year is the 200th anniversary of birth of author Jane Austen and Victoria will be the centre of the literary world next week when scholars gather to honor the master of novel of manners

'Another Lady' Not Up to Task

By PAT BARCLAY

"What's so special about Jane Austen?" When I posed this question recently to a literary gentleman of my acquaintance, I felt like a fraud. Jane-ites like me don't go around asking questions of this ilk — we tote soapboxes surreptitiously under our cloaks, ever poised for an opportunity to jump on them and declaim. "One of the world's great women," we burble to anyone in earshot, "absolutely unique. Miraculous. Marvellous. Masterly." We go on and on like this until somebody pushes us off an starts declaiming about somebody pushes us off and starts declaiming about instate Planet of the Apes on TV.

Oh well. We Jane-ites are secure enough to withstand any onslaught the Philistines care to mount. My literary acquaintance told me that what he likes best about Jane Austen's novels is their structure — their "physical realization of an animating idea," as he put it. You don't need to be consciously aware of its structure to appreciate a Jane Austen novel, but somewhere your brain is bound to be registering the knowledge that you, the reader, are in safe and competent hands. (That's what good structure is meant to achieve, in novels as in architecture).

When I asked which of the novels, in his opinion, was the best, the reply was instantaneous: "Emma." Here's how English novelist Sheila Kaye-Smith described her first acquaintance with this particular literary heroine: "Emma Woodhouse — handsome, clever and rich, had lived 21 years in the world with very little to vex or distress her" — I was caught . . . There is a magic in that opening phrase of Emma — a magic that it would be hard to define and which probably charms only Jane-addicts, but with them it is truly potent. I repeat that I was caught and from that moment I read on till I had finished the book. And when I had finished it I read the others, and when I had finished them I read them over again, and when I had read them over again I read them over and over and over again and am still reading them."

There, you see, I wasn't exaggerating one bit. Jane-ites everywhere seem driven to the superlative, which is an irony Jane herself, that model of common sense and moderation, would have enjoyed.

As nearly everyone must know by now, 1975 is the 200th anniversary of her birth. Among the events scheduled to commemorate the occasion is the publication of Jane's last unfinished novel, Sanditon, the one she was forced to lay aside four months before her death of Addisons Disease in 1817. What is especially intriguing about Sanditon's resuscitation is the news that "another lady" has been found to fill Jane Austen's shoes — to finish the novel for her in fact.

The identity of the mysterious "other lady" began as a closely guarded secret, for reasons best known to the lady and her publishers themselves. (Perhaps, in anticipation of a scandalized reaction from Jane-ities everywhere, they simply opted for discretion as the better part of valor.) Whatever their reasoning, the secret is now out, and Jane's co-author stands revealed as Marie Dobbs, an Australian journalist married to a retired Russian specialist with the British foreign office.

I have managed to get hold of a copy of the new Sanditon (it wasn't difficult: My literary gentleman acquaintance has a wife who reads Redbook Magazine, which printed the novel in full in its February issue). I have read it, digested it, and can now report that while Mrs. Dobbs sews a fine seam — somewhere in the middle of Chapters 11 or 12, I am informed — she is nevertheless no pattern designer.

Sanditon contains more principal characters, unfortunately, than is usual in the Austen novels. There are two sets of heroines and heroes and several minor ones, friends, relations, a domineering dowager, etc., etc. The story takes place at the "small fashionable bathing place" of Sanditon, which is actively promoted throughout the story by another major character. As satire, it levels its aim most directly at this latter character and at young Sir Edward Denham, a "major hero" who suffers from a surfeit of romantic fiction. His fine phrases and erotic daydreams culminate in a ludicrous abduction scene in which Sir Edward, having been thwarted in his attempt to steal the object of his lust, promptly seizes a substitute and makes off with her instead.

Whether Miss Austen could have made a success of this scene is a moot point. I think it inarguable, however, that Mrs. Dobbs has not. The imagination is there, but the style and wit which give Jane Austen's writing its special distinction are not.

It is also tempting to quarrel with Mrs. Dobbs' manipulation of the teeming plot. Once a reader knows that the disposition of a certain story is not necessarily final, anarchy is born. This fact alone, I should think, would be enough to undermine any would-be co-author. If the recycled Sanditon meets with general critical disapproval, perhaps its publishers should consider throwing the floor open to the Jane-ites of this world who think they can do Mrs. Dobbs one better. That ought to settle their hash in a hurry.

Jane Austen was the daughter and next to the youngest of eight children of English clergyman George Austen and his wife, Cassandra Leigh.

She was born during the Regency of George IV in 1775 and lived all her 42 years within a few square miles of her birthplace in Hampshire in the south of England.

But this country-bred spinster of small life experience and none at all of the fashionable cosmopolitan world, wrote six novels which have survived more than 150 years as models of their genre.

The novels — Sense and Sensibility, Pride and Prejudice, Mansfield Park, Emma, Northanger Abbey and Persuasion — were published between 1811 and 1818, the latter two posthumously.

Writers in her own time viewed her work in sharply differing ways. Many of the finest contemporary writers regard Jane Austen as something of a miracle and her work as a prototype of style and insight in presenting the comic aspects of human behavior.

The American writer and critic, Eudora Welty, has written concerning the novels: "Their high spirits, their wit, their celerity and harmony of motion, their symmetry of design are still unrivaled in the English novel. As comedies they are irresistible and as nearly flawless as any fiction could be . . . they withstand time (because) they pertain not to the ever-changing outside world but to what goes on perpetually in the mind and heart."

On the other hand contrast this with another vicar's daughter, whose opinion was recorded in a letter more than 30 years after Jane Austen's death.

Said Charlotte Bronte: "Her business is not half so much with the human heart as with the human eyes, mouth, hands, and feet. Jane Austen was a complete and most sensible lady, but a very incomplete and rather insensible woman. If this is heresy, I cannot help it."

Thomas Babington Macaulay, however, had compared Austen to Shakespeare with respect to her powers of caricature, and Alfred Tennyson also put her "next to Shakespeare."

Romance touched Jane Austen two or three times. Once she was genuinely in love but her sweetheart died before he could formally ask for her hand.

Later, when she was 27, she accepted a proposal one night from a 21-year old youth but broke the engagement the next day.

Jane Austen was devoted to her numerous family and extremely close to her sister, Cassandra and whenever the sisters were separated Jane wrote long, full letters, often humorous to the point of acerbity.

These have been a rich source for study and analysis by the Austen scholars of the literary world.

Jane died in 1817 and her novels and reputation went into an eclipse of more than 50 years.

Then in 1870, her nephew, James Edward Austen-Leigh (the Leigh had been added in connection with an inheritance) published A Memoir of Jane Austen and the rediscovery of the novelist began.

FAMILY HEIRLOOMS ON VIEW

Portraits and minatures of various members; Jane's mahogany, leather-lined writing desk (below), glasses, penknife and ink well; a notebook, a tiny needle-case made by the author as a gift for a girl friend. Several pages of a manuscript of an unfinished novel, The Watsons, in Jane's small neat handwriting as well as first editions of the six novels are among prized possessions.

All of these will be on loan for next week's symposium and displayed in the McPherson library at UVic.

Normally Joan Mason Hurley keeps most of the items in a bank vault to preserve them from the event of fire.

Items that do not stay in the vault are a plate (above) and the miniatures which are portraits of two of Jane's brothers and a cousin.

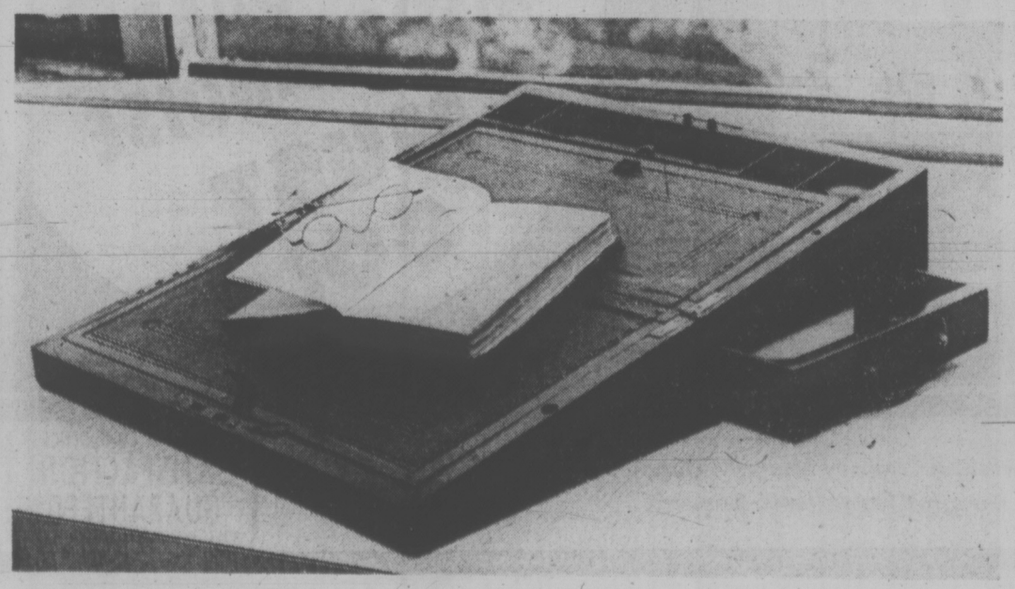
The plate is part of a set of Wedgewood that was selected by Jane for a brother's household on occasion of his marriage. It was retrieved from among odds and ends in a kitchen cabinet in an aunt's home. Joan Hurley recognized the pattern from having seen a display of the crested set.

"Oh that," said the aunt, "I've always used that for backing my apple tarts. It's just the right shape."

Oven-to-table ware was not known when Wedgewood put out that china, but the purple and gold border is scarcely faded, the crest is perfectly distinct and there is not a crackle in the glaze.

Incidentally, with regard to Emma, the last novel published during the author's lifetime bears a royal distinction. The Prince Regent, who admired Jane Austen to the extent of having complete sets of her books in each of his residences, implied that dedication of her new book would please him.

As a result, Emma was so inscribed and the presentation copies of the three-volume novel, bound in scarlet leather with the Prince of Wales' feathers on the spine, remains today in the possession of Queen Elizabeth.



A Proper Setting For Anniversary

For those Victorians who know this city well and have a sense of period and atmosphere it would probably seem a proper choice as a setting for a Jane Austen commemoration.

The pockets of old world atmosphere, the unhurried pace of life, the gardens both formal and informal, the many relics of Regency England, are distant reflections of her own place and time.

But Victoria also has a uniquely positive claim to its association with the immortal Jane. Probably her only descendant on the North American continent, Joan Mason Hurley, is a native daughter and lifelong resident.

Even so, the University of Victoria came close to losing out in its bid to host the first North American scholastic comemoration of Jane Austen's bicentennary. Yale University and the University of Southern California were among distinguished seekers after the honor.

So the UVic celebrations, which take place April 3-5, are bathed in a prestigious spotlight that brings the Department of English into continent-wide academic notice.

Canada Council and UVic grants have assisted in the project, which will feature a day and a half of papers and discussion, a dramatization of readings from Austen works, a library display, luncheons and a dinner.

Participants will include "world-famous scholars from all over Canada and the United States as well as many enthusiastic readers of Jane Austen," says Dr. Reginald Terry, one of the organizers.

Innovator of the whole venture is David Jeffrey, department chairman. By the time the UVic plans had advanced to the stage of announcement of the speakers' list, Jeffrey was under fire from Carleton University's nationalistic-minded Robin Mathews.

Mathews blasted the committee for loading the speakers' list with American, and ignoring Canadian scholars.

There was a breathless interval when it seemed that Canada Council might rethink the grant it had indicated would be forthcoming.

But in the end there was really nothing to fuss about when Canadian content turned out to be reasonably proportionate. Of 12 papers to be presented, four are from Canada, one from Australia and seven from the U.S. And of these seven, one is by Donald Greene of Moose Jaw, who happens to be teaching at the University of Southern California.

On top of which there is the "play for voices." Our Own particular Jane, by our own particular Joan (Mason Hurley) which will entertain the bicentenary visitors as well as Victorians at the on-campus Phoenix Theatre.

Sessions begin at 9:30 a.m., Friday with Professor R.B. Heilman of the University of Washington in the chair. speakers will be Andrew Wright, University of California, San Diego; John Halperin, USC; R. F. Brissenden, Australian National University; and Robert Merrett, University of Alberta.

Chairman for the afternoon session, Friday, will be Norman Page of the University of Alberta; and speakers scheduled are Ian Watt of Stanford, Joel Weinsheimer of Texas Tech. and Greene.

The Jane Austen performance at the Phoenix will be presented at 5 p.m. and will be followed by dinner at the Empress Hotel when the speaker will be A. Walton Litz of Princeton.

Saturday's program begins at 9 a.m. with G. B. Tennyson of UCLA in the chair. And lest it may seem that the committee has a male chauvinist streak, it should be noted that there will be two women speakers on the rostrum — Katherine R. Burlin of Bryn Mawr and Juliet McMaster of Alberta.

Intriguingly, it is one of the men, Professor Monaghan, who has chosen for his subject, "Jane Austen and the Position of Women."

The public may attend any of the sessions but the committee feels that general interest will centre in the play, which will be presented at the Phoenix Wednesday through Saturday at 8 p.m. as well as at the Friday pre-dinner hour.

DESCENDANT Joan Mason Hurley stands beneath a portrait of her great-grandfather, J. E. Austen-Leigh, nephew of Jane Austen and the first to write a book about her.

A Life Described In Her Own Words

When Joan Austen-Leigh left Victoria at the age of 16 to do her last two years of schooling in England, she had not read any of the works of her distinguished ancestor, Jane Austen.

As she was about to meet aunts who had lived their lives surrounded by Jane's aura, the dictum was issued. She must prepare by reading at least one of the novels.

So en route she read the liveliest and most popular, Pride and Prejudice.

"I can't say I appreciated it," she comments. "In fact I was well into my twenties before I really began to enjoy the novels and now I re-read them often and always discover new meanings and delights in them."

Joan, who is Mrs. Dennis Mason Hurley and the mother of four — two of them married — is now a student at the University of B.C. with one year to go toward a Master's degree in playwriting and theatre.

She had turned 40 when she began writing creatively and entered the University of Victoria from which she received her B.A. in 1973.

Her most recent dramatic writing is the play for voices, Our Own Particular Jane, which will be the decorative centrepiece of next week's UVic Jane Austen bicentenary commemoration.

In short form — one hour — it will be performed for the visitors and special speakers at Friday's session of the Commemoration. In full it will be offered for public enjoyment Wednesday through Saturday at the Phoenix at 8 p.m.

Directed by Maurice Harty of the Camosun College Theatre Arts program, the play makes use of excerpts from Jane's letters and novels.

The part of Jane is being taken by professional Vancouver actress Patricia Grainge. The other readers are Reg Terry, Anthony Jenkins and Patricia Wainman Wood of the UVic English and theatre department faculties.

Joan says talent and the urge to write has cropped up in each generation of Austen-Leighs since her great-grandfather's time. He was the James Edward Austen-Leigh who rekindled interest in his Aunt Jane with publication of his Memoir.

Joan Mason Hurley's first play, Immolation, produced in 1967 by the Vancouver Little Theatre, was a far cry from ancestress Jane's kind of literature. It dealt with rape.

She has not found Our Own Particular Jane easy to write. "I naturally approached it with some diffidence," she says. "It was altogether too audacious to attempt to put words into Jane's mouth so I resolved the dilemma by using excerpts to tell her history, including passages from some of the novels, all linked by narration."

The play will be heard on CBC radio FM on April 7 at 8 p.m. and Joan says it will also be performed at Chawton, the site of the Jane Austen Cottage in Hampshire, where a major celebration of the bicentenary is to take place.

Described by Douglas Bankson of Vancouver's the New Play Centre as the "most produced playwright in B.C.," Joan has had 12 plays done on stage in Victoria and Vancouver, and two previously produced by CBC radio.

She has twice won best original play awards in B.C. festivals and has four plays currently being produced in zone festivals.

PSYCHIATRIST PLEADS FOR DRUG FREEDOM

BURNABY (CP) — Psychiatrist Thomas Szasz said that a public intelligent enough to cope with razor blades and drain cleaner should be allowed free access to drugs like marijuana, LSD and opium.

"You should have the right to put any idea into your head and any substance into your body," he told about 300 Simon Fraser Unversity students.

Dr. Szasz is the author of the books the myth of mental illness and ceremonial chemistry and has attacked his fellow psychiatrists for encroaching on individual freedom in the name of treating mental illness.

He said that governments should provide information on the hazards of drugs, similar to warnings now on cigarette packages, but not try to regulate their use.

"Before 1914 U.S. citizens could buy any drug existing in the world and the country didn't fall apart," he said.

He said people don't use drugs to escape, but to help deal with real problems, "to endure Marxism, or capitalism."

He said the medical profession has perpetuated myths encouraging continued government control of drugs.

He cited a chapter on opium abuse in a standard pharmacology textbook written by a former drug enforcement official and called this "like having a rabbi in Israel write for an encyclopedia on the Nazis."

Screen-Changing Panels

Rare Zebra wood veneer applied to arched panels of this screen shows how a small amount of rare wood can enhance a basically simple project. Screen is made of walnut frames with veneer-covered plywood panels set in. Veneer is easy to work with — and inexpensive (only a couple of dollars for this project). Cut veneer to shape with a sharp knife, attach to plywood with contact cement.

The inner panels are photo enlargements mounted on hardboard panels, but fabric or scenic wallpaper would do as well. Put different paper or fabric on each side and change the panels from season to season!

To order the folding screen pattern No. 87, send $2 cheque or money order to: DECO-PLANS, Victoria Times, P.O. Box 90, Boucherville, Quebec.

. . . His Dying Breath

TORONTO (CP) — A doctor told a coroner's inquest that a collapsed patient's bad breath kept him from doing close mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Dr. See Wee Teow said he could not place his lips on those of Mohammed Hassan Yasi, whose death is being investigated, because the patient's breath was disagreeable.

Dr. Teow said Yasi, 33, a Guyanan visiting relatives here, collapsed in his office after suffering an allergic reaction to a penicillin shot for a veneral disease.

George Atkinson, a driver-attendant with the Toronto department of ambulance services, told the inquest jury that resuscitation is almost impossible without mouth-to-mouth contact. The inquest continues.

Funds Flee Faisal's Home

By JIM HOAGLAND

BEIRUT (WP) — While a small group of about 50 mourners turned out in Beirut's main mosque for a memorial service for King Faisal of Saudi Arabia Wednesday morning, a Kuwaiti businessman here was frantically placing calls to the emirate to shift millions of dollars to European banks.

"This is terrible for us," the Arab businessman said to a visitor between calls. "The king's disappearance could create a vacuum in the (Persian) Gulf and expose us to grave dangers."

These two scenes in the Lebanese capital typified first Arab reactions to the assassination Tuesday of Faisal by a member of the Saudi royal family. Popular reaction outside of Saudi Arabia was muted, but the region's political and economic leaders were clearly shaken.

Although his country's vast petroleum deposits and growing monetary reserves had made the 69-year-old monarch a major international figure by the time of his death, he had emerged as an acknowledged leader on the Arab scene only in the past two to three years.

For much of the previous decade, he had been locked in a bitter feud with Egypt's Gamal Abdel Nasser, the leading Arab political figure. Faisal's close links to the United States, Israel's main supporter, also cost him popularity among Arabs.

"Faisal was respected, by many, but not loved," a Lebanese editor explained when asked about the lack of street demonstrations and the small attendance at memorial services. "He possessed power, not charisma."

His feud with Nasser, which brought the two countries to the brink of war in 1966, when they supported opposing sides in the Yemeni civil war, appeared to be a strong factor in limiting the outpouring of grief Wednesday in this part-Moslem, part-Christian nation.

Lebanon's Sunni Moslems, who are the catalysts for street action, still give their allegiance to Nasser, not Faisal," a Lebanese political figure said, "They were very grateful to Faisal for his support of the Arab cause in the 1973 war" with Israel, "But that did not erase their suspicions of him."

The somewhat reluctant emergence of the ascetic, taciturn Faisal as an Arab leader to be listened to outside of his own remote desert kingdom came only in the early 1970s, after Nasser's death and after Saudi Arabia's status as the world's largest oil exporter gave him tremendous leverage on the international scene.

He moved adroitly to patch up relations with Nasser's successor, Anwar Sadat, when Sadat made it clear that he would eschew Nasser's intriguing against other Arab regimes and make Egypt less dependent on the Soviet Union, which Faisal denounced in terms almost as harsh as those he reserved for Israel.

The Saudi-Egyptian alliance was sealed firmly during the 1973 war, when Faisal promised to pay for replacements of Egyptian military losses and led the way in imposing an oil embargo against the United States and cutting global oil supplies.

Pro-Egyptian Beirut newspapers eulogized Faisal Wednesday morning as the man who will be remembered for "exploding the Arab oil weapon," an act that partly repaired his reputation among Arab nationalists.

The foreign political consequences of Faisal's death are likely to be felt most immediately in the small conservative emirates and sheikhdoms on the Arab side of the Persian Gulf that looked on Saudi Arabia as the strongest available counterweight to the radical Arab government in Iraq and to the growing military might of Non-Arab Iran.

Kuwaiti residents of Beirut are particularly fearful that Faisal's death, coming the same month as the signing of a border agreement between Iran and Iraq, could focus new pressure on that oil-producing emirate.

Iraqi troops invaded a narrow strip of Kuwaiti-claimed territory along their disputed borders in March, 1973. Iraq's army, which had been pinned down by a Kurdish rebellion that was evidently ended by the Iran-Iraq agreement, will be in a much stronger position now.

Prices good for the dollar as tourists still shun Chile

By STAN DELAPLANE

SANTIAGO, Chile — "There's no outward change here since the military junta took over in September, 1973. The political slogans that used to appear on every vertical piece of wall have been painted over. The city — 3,000,000 people — looks unusually clean."

(We got a travel reporter into Chile. He was there during the Allende regime and saw some of the earlier street fighting.)

"The weather is 81 degrees. It's the end of summer and beginning of fall. Money exchange is 1800 escudos to $1 U.S. Last time I was here it was an unrealistic 156 escudos to $1.

"Of course nobody exchanged at the official rate. The black market rate was about today's 1800 to $1. You were hustled to change dollars the minute you got into the airport taxi. Hotel clerks followed you right up to your room.

"There still is a black market. About 20 per cent more than the official 1800, but it's very dangerous."

"The best suite in the Carrera Sheraton is $22.55. A bottle of Chilean champagne and a bowl of fresh fruit in the room. From the fourteenth floor we look out on the snow-covered Andes — it's close to ski season.

"Moneda Palace — where Allende was shot or committed suicide depending on which side you're on — looks the same on the outside. But a lot of work on the inside shows it took a beating during the fighting."

"Many new cars on the street. Mostly French Peugeots, Citroens and Italian Fiats all assembled here. A rent car cost me $165 a week. Not too bad since you get a lot of mileage on these small cars.

"Gasoline is 73 cents a gallon — I just got used to paying $1.50 in Spain, $1.40 in England.

"Restaurants are cheap at this exchange rate. Dinner for two with Chilean wine cost $7.44 at Restaurante Arabe. There's a 10 per cent service charge. Waiters expect 7 per cent more.

"Nobody knows how the coming season will be for the international skiers. Portillo, where I skied two years ago, is only an hour and a half from Santiago. Magnificent ski runs — you can take a whole day to ski between resorts.

"We drove down to Vina del Mar, the big beach resort for Santiago. The place was almost empty. We stayed at the fashionable Hotel Bernardo O'Higgins, and the clerk nearly wept when we checked out after two days. Said there was nobody else in the house.

"The two Sheraton hotels in Santiago were doing all right. Sheraton is owned by I.T. and T. which has been under fire as a political arm of the CIA — or vice versa.

"But while I was here, the military government took over the telephone company, also owned by I.T. and T. So who's sorry now? I couldn't find out.

"No doubt but that the stories of military shooting has damaged tourist business. Braniff Airline just about owns the traffic into this part of the world and they're not pushing Chile.

"Too bad because the price is good for the dollar. Chile runs 2,600 miles in a strip between the Andes and the Pacific. (At one point it's only 56 miles wide.). You get a wide range of climate from desert to a Mediterranean weather.

"The double room at Vina del Mar was $13.35. You get around by hansom cabs almost anywhere for $1. For $5 you could probably buy the horse. Dinner for five at Hotel La Bahia ran $13.88 including the service charge.

"We drive north a half hour to Renaca. Many string and bikini girls on the beach. But the night club and amusement park had only 50 people. It's designed to amuse 5,000 — ferris wheels and many dance floors.

"No military on the streets. The national police — carabineros — patrol the roads. Bust the speed limit and the carabinero who spots you phones the next post. They have the citation already written out when you arrive.

"I was glad to see them nail two drivers who'd been tailgating me. You appear in the district where you were caught."

Lubeck proclaims heritage: Queen of Hanseatic League

By KIMMIS HENDRICK

LUBECK, Germany — The first time we came here we called our visit a beautiful bonus of our trip to Scandinavia. But we soon decided it was much more than that, and began coming back to Lubeck for itself. We understood why it still proudly claims its heritage as Queen of the Hanseatic League.

West Germany abounds in such treasure cities. Travelers who plan on Cologne, Berlin, Heidelberg, and Rothenberg will enhance their trip if they get off the beaten tourist trail and see Freiburg, Regensburg, Bamberg, Lubeck.

Lubeck particularly. It's special. It's different.

Maybe it's the stunning glazed brick of its city hall and churches and the shining slate of its tall towers.

Maybe it's the polish of present-day prosperity. A big factor is the patrician quality, derived from eight centuries of history matched by agreeable, creative people.

We stopped here coming back from Copenhagen. The train station opened on an area of small hotels. Lubeck is a busy commercial centre and West Germany's fifth seaport, so we were glad to get a room.

For a double with bath we paid $25 including breakfast. We later found larger, more expensive hotels across the sculpture-lined bridge that leads into the old city.

We also found restaurants excellent enough to please any gourmet. German cooking had always seemed heavy to us, but for $5 in Lubeck we ate a very pleasant dinner. We found, too, that the main department store's large dining room served interesting, tasty lunches at a reasonable price.

Much of Lubeck was made rubble by war in 1942.

But, as in so many other West German cities, rebuilding has been faithful to antiquity and has improved on it.

The great Marienkirke must appear on the outside much as it has looked for centuries. But interior restoration has removed past clutter and given a few masterpieces of glass and sculpture their full due.

Late in the 1600s, Dietrich Buxtehude established a series of organ concerts in Lubeck churches — Bach would walk 50 miles to hear him play — and the tradition continues.

I asked the woman selling postcards at an entrance to the Marienkirke if a sign about an "improvisation" that evening at five meant a concert. "No" she said severely, "an improvisation."

We came back for it and joined the large receptive audience that heard a master improvise on a hymn theme on one of the church's four superb pipe organs for half an hour.

Across from the church stands the elegant Buddenbrookhaus, described by Thomas Mann in an early novel. It's a bank now, but still as elegant.

Not every Lubecker comes from wealth — Willy Brandt spent an impoverished childhood here. But life in Lubeck looks rosy — maybe because so much of the brick is rose-colored.

Among its attractions, we came upon a group of pretty cottages around a lovely court and found they had long since been established by wealthy Lubeck citizens as homes for less fortunate elder folk.

Highways from Germany stretch north through Lubeck enroute to Denmark, so it is easy to drive here. It is recommended that motorists park their cars in multilevel garages outside the old city and enjoy its parks and streets on foot.

Lubeck has good air connections, too, and about 150 trains a day stop here from all directions. Car ferries from the port near Travemunde — Lubeck's old-world, but very popular resort on the Baltic Sea — take thousands of travelers to Scandinavia.

So do the trains. The North Express, the Paris Express, the Trans-Europe express called the Merkur all make Lubeck a principal stop.

Glasgow marks 800th birthday

The late Will Fyffe, Scottish character comedian, immortalized Glasgow with his classic comedy song I Belong to Glasgow: millions still sing it and think nostalgically of the city on the banks of the Clyde.

Glasgow has its 800th birthday in 1975 — it was eight centuries ago that it was granted its burgh charter.

There is a charm and warmth about Glasgow that few who really know it can escape. Visitors find the people among the friendliest in Britain; they also learn that Glasgow has some 50 major parks (including Glasgow Green which was a park way back in the 12th century); excellent hotels, shops and restaurants; and The Barrows, a quite remarkable open-air market — a sort of Scottish Petticoat Lane, where you can go on a Sunday and buy almost anything.

To mark this anniversary, an old Glasgow tramcar and an 1830 mail coach are to take part in the Lord Provost's procession May 10. The tram will be one of 100 vehicles in a cavalcade through the city; there will be an ox-roasting on Glasgow Green, and a rowing regatta on the Clyde. Rare photographs of Glasgow old and new are to be featured in an exhibition.

There is much of romantic history in Glasgow. Its university was founded in 1451. The early lecture room was in the crypt of the town's cathedral. Today, the university has some 9,000 students. A second and more modern university, the University of Strathclyde, is off the north-east corner of George Square.

Glasgow's Art Gallery is deservedly famous; it contains works by Rembrandt, Rubens, Velasquez, Giorgione and Botticelli, as well as an outstanding array of 19th and 20th-century French paintings. Its most famous acquisition is Salvador Dali's Christ of St. John of the Cross.

George Square, in the city centre, is a show place for a dozen imposing statues of famous men in front of the City Chambers and the cathedral dates back to 1136, the year when the first building was completed, only to be burned down in 1192. A crypt still survives from 1197. Strictly speaking, the building is not a cathedral: after the Reformation it became the Parish Church of Glasgow (which it still is) and hence Presbyterian.

Just opposite the cathedral is Provand's Lordship, the name given to the oldest house in Glasgow. It was built about 1471 by Bishop Andrew Muirhead for a priest in charge of St. Nicholas Hospital. Mary Queen of Scots stayed in this house when she visited Glasgow in 1566.

Glasgow, engineering city, is also famed for its noted Museum of Transport. No tramcars were more renowned than Glasgow's in their heyday; this museum has a comprehensive collection of them, from the very earliest models. There are six steam locomotives, the earliest built in 1886, horse-drawn vehicles, and a collection of bicycles, including the oldest cycle in the world.

One of the least-known facts about "dear old Glasgow town" is that it happens to be one of the most popular tourist centres in Britain. Loch Lomond and the Firth of Clyde are only a half-hour's drive from the city centre; you can reach the edge of the rugged Scottish Highlands within 90 minutes.

The visitor can take a 'bus or train, or hire a car, and be out of the city in a little over 20 minutes. Few other large cities have such a variety of holiday playgrounds practically on their doorstep.

Glasgow, proud of its past 800 years, is moving energetically into the 1980s in a vast program of redevelopment. Fortunately, the best of the old is being merged with the new.

CHEAPER THAN GASOLINE

Pig and fowl manure goes into the production of bio-gas in Australian inventor John Coulthard's system. He claims his car's range is up to 210 miles on the gas, which costs about four cents a gallon.

Visitors to Enkeldoorn Get Jailed, in Comfort

ENKELDOORN, Rhodesia (CP) — Visitors to this tiny community are likely to be thrown into jail the moment they arrive.

Then again, there are worse jails. This one is next to the hotel bar, close enough for the bartender to hand a drink to a prisoner.

Furthermore, the cell door opens instantaneously if the visitor hands over a 50-cent fee to have his passport stamped with a visa from the self-proclaimed Republic of Enkeldoorn.

"We only have two classes of citizen," said Buck Rogers, a former Royal Air Force type who is president of the republic, "those we accept and those we put in jail."

Henry Cook, urbane host of the hotel, is prime minister. The cabinet, consisting of regulars at the bar, is shuffled more often than in any banana republic.

In its 20 years of existence, the republic has jailed some distinguished guests including Rhodesian President Clifford Dupont, former member of Parliament for the area, and members of the Pearce Commission, which toured Rhodesia a few years ago in an unsuccessful effort to marshal public opinion in favor of a settlement of the former colony's differences with Britain.

"We're in an ideal spot here," he said. "We catch Rhodesians going south and South Africans going north.

The republic issues about 500 visas a year, the take goes to charity and to developing local amenities for Enkeldoorn's population of about 100.

"We have a favorable trade balance," Rogers said. "We export the best beef in the world, mainly to the neighboring state of Rhodesia. You might say we are the biggest bullshippers in Africa."

The president said relations between the republic and Rhodesia are somewhat strained.

"There's no particular reason why they should be, but we keep them that way."

Enkeldoorn, he explained, was ahead of its time when it declared its independence.

"The big news then was the federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland. We were against it in this town. We said it would not work so we declared ourselves a republic.

"South Africa followed us in declaring a republic and then Rhodesia did the same."

The president's reply was disparaging when he was asked about the republic's feelings toward Canada.

"They can't skate in Moose Jaw," he said, "And they speak bad French everywhere."

His knowledge of Canada's frailties may come from Hazel Astbury, who currently works behind the bar.

Miss Astbury, who spends her life riding horses in various parts of the world, arrived in Vancouver in 1965 and told immigration officers the purpose of her visit was to attend Expo 67 in Montreal. She figured it would take her two years to get there.

Since then, she has ridden across the United States, Ireland and Rhodesia before she fell off a horse in South Africa and suffered a broken back. When she is fully recovered, she plans to complete her South African trip and move on to South America.

The republic's cabinet appointments are strictly based on merit. The minister of transport and communications obtained his post by working his way up from assistant stationmaster and then stationmaster. There is no railway line within 50 miles.

The prison is operated by two groups, the Enkeldoorn Stranger-bashing Society (ESS) and the Sanitation and Dungeon Squad (SDS), which share the same philosophy about law enforcement.

"You just might do something, so it's best that we put you inside where you won't have the opportunity of doing something if you should decide to do something," the guard on duty explained.

Enkeldoorn also enjoys strained relations with the neighboring town of Unvuma, which Rogers plans to annex to the republic. Unvuma's handful of residents have sworn to fight the takeover to the bitter end.

New Mousy Tricks

LONDON (Reuter)—Can a mouse be taught new tricks—just by an injection?

Yes, say United States researchers. Mice can "borrow" the memory of other mice by an injection of chemicals distilled from crushed mousebrain.

Some British scientists greeted the claims with suspicion but it is the kind of research that may one day lead to "instant learning" pills.

The breakthrough in understanding the complex process by which the brain unscrambles messages and stores information is described in a recent edition of the New Scientist magazine.

The work, by C. J. Radcliffe and J. W. Shelton of Baylor University medical school, Houston, Tex., is likely to renew debate on a subject that has sinister implications but might ultimately help the mentally retarded.

They found that mice injected with extracts from the brains of mice trained in running a maze learned to run the maze faster than untreated mice.

They taught one batch of mice to locate a cup of water in a maze quickly by depriving them of water. The creatures were then killed and extracts prepared from their brains.

This "brain juice" was injected into a second batch, which ran the maze in 280 seconds on average. A batch of control mice took 560 seconds to run the course.

The experiment was based on a theory that the brain acquires information by chemical changes in its nerve cells. These changes occur naturally when we learn in, say, the classroom.

But the theory is that they can be induced artificially if the chemicals in which the learning is "encoded" can be isolated and implanted.

A British scientist who asked that his name not be used was skeptical of the claims.

"It's such an attractive idea that everyone tries to do it," he said. "If you have enough attempts, you're bound to get a few successes. But it doesn't mean anything."

B.C: A CHEAP PLACE TO DIE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadians trying to save on funeral expenses should arrange to die in British Columbia and avoid Montreal, which has possibly the highest-priced funerals in the country.

Jill Watt, author of the Canadian Guide to Death and Dying, said, "The average funeral in Montreal is $2,300, in Vancouver, between $750 and $900."

"The reason is simple," Mrs. Watt said. "There are 85,000 members of the Memorial Society in this province and they keep the undertakers in line."

Mrs. Watt, a former nurse, recommends her book "to people who for the first time in their life are responsible for someone and don't know the procedures of death."

"They don't even know the vocabulary."

To help them understand, she has included a glossary telling the reader that casket means coffin and testacy means the practice of leaving a will at death.

Mrs. Watt's book discusses all aspects of death's complications from transporting the body — trucking companies seldom will accept bodies on Fridays — to donating parts of the body to science — Roman Catholics should ask the church for permission.

She had trouble collecting the information.

"Nobody was hostile but some were evasive or just didn't answer.

"I wrote 16 medical schools but only got six replies, and from 17 cemetery and crematorium companies I again only had six answers.

Mrs. Watt also had trouble interviewing lawyers about their role. Eventually she gave up and relied on her own experiences and discussions with others who had experienced legal complications.

She suggests that people ask for a breakdown of legal charges, from the cost of writing letters to the fee for settling an estate.

"Lawyers will invariably charge you on a percentage basis for simple matters and on a straight hourly rate for more complicated problems. Around $40 an hour and two per cent of the value of the estate is the normal charge."

Mrs. Watt said the executive normally takes an additional five per cent of the value of the estate.

Although she found comparative shopping impossible, she lists average undertakers' prices: Embalming is $65; cremation $45. The book says the cheapest coffins are often displayed side by side with the most expensive.

She advises people not to leave instructions for their funerals in their wills because the will usually is read after the funeral service.

The book is published by Self-Counsel Press.

Mrs. Watt said she loves collecting facts. She has just completed a directory of services for Greater Vancouver. In her spare time, she transcribes print into braille and indexes Canadian books at the University of B.C. on a volunteer basis.

Rain Shield Drive-In Boon

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian Patent 957408 will not improve the quality of drive-in movies, but at least it will let you see what is on the screen.

It's the patent number of a rain shield, the most recent invention of Frank Stoyles, 37, a teacher of mathematics and computer science at Algonquin College who is also a part-time inventor.

The device is built of 20 feet of plastic stretched across the roof of the car. It is supported by tubing that rests on the hood. Flaps are tucked inside the front-door jamb to anchor the shield.

Mr. Stoyles said his invention will stand the test of time.

"There is enough junk on the market without adding to it. Some items collapse before even leaving the store. My invention will last.

"Though it looks fairly simple, building it presented a surprising number of problems. There are times when you think the difficulties are insurmountable but eventually everything is solved".

The rain shield, which he said cost about $1,000 to develop, is being tested in potential markets. Mr. Stoyles' brother Harold in London, Ont., handles the marketing. The inventor said this is a difficult task.

"Design determines the worth of a patent. If a design doesn't interest big industry then the patent isn't much good".

Companies that have been approached about manufacturing the rain shield have been wary, Mr. Stoyles said. But the brothers have received some nibbles of interest.

"I would be satisfied with a small return so I could pursue some other ideas I have," Frank Stoyles said.

HASTINGS' FIFTIETH
By Sir Harry Golombek

The 50th Hastings International Chess Congress earlier this year did not open under happy auspices. For one thing, it had been shaken to its very foundation by a partial withdrawal of financial support by financier Jim Slater. Only by the most vigorous endeavors on the part of the organizers had the necessary financial support been secured for this year.

Then, too, there was that perpetual bane of organizers, last minute withdrawals. Just three weeks before the tournament was due to start the Soviet Chess Federation informed the organizers that Grandmaster Victor Korchnoi's physical condition had been so impaired by his match with Karpov that he could not play at Hastings. This may have been genuine since that match would certainly have proved exhausting. Or he might have been punished for speaking too freely about World Championship matters to the Yugoslav press.

His place was taken by the Armenian Grandmaster Rafael Vaganian and, though indeed we missed Morochnoi, Rafael's genial, sunny presence and his fine chess were excellent compensation.

The tournament was still Category 10 when, out of the blue, another misfortune hit it. Robert Byrne withdrew. His place was taken by Pal Benko but the lowering in Elo rating meant that the tournament dropped to Category 9.

Here the tale of woe stops since, very happily, it turned out to be one of the most exciting tournaments in the whole series with every player looking for the win at all times.

Czechoslovakian Grandmaster Vlastimil Hort, after an indifferent start during which he lost to the British champion George Botterill, fought his powerful way to the top, stayed there and, by beating the redoubtable Albin Planinc in the last round, made sure of first prize with 10½ points. Tying for second-third were Gudmundur Sigurjonsson (Iceland) and Rafael Vaganian (U.S.S.R.) with 10 points. Sigurjonsson fulfilled the Grandmaster norm for the second time and thus became Iceland's second Grandmaster.

Next were Ulf Andersson (Sweden) and Alexander Beljavsky (U.S.S.R.) with 9½. Beljavsky missed the Grandmaster title by half a point!

Sixth was the ingenious Yugoslav grandmaster Albin Planinc, with 9 points. Anthony Miles secured seventh prize with 8½ and Hartston eighth with 7½; Pal Benko (U.S.A.) and George Botterill had 7.

The player whose play most caught my fancy was Albin Olaninc. Here is his charming win against Vaganian, which is surely destined to become an anthology piece.

School Vandalism Toll Mounting

VANCOUVER (CP) — School vandalism is a million-dollar problem in this area and no one has a solution.

Officials estimate destruction of school property last year cost taxpayers $600,000 for replacement of glass alone and several hundred thousand dollars more for other property. That includes damage to desks, walls, fences, washroom and even gymnasium floors.

Thousands more are spent on security measures that often have little effect.

Officials are reluctant to reveal figures but glass replacement costs ranged from $5,000 in New Westminster to $240,000 in Vancouver.

"Trustees get uptight when we get a lot of vandalism, said Svein Urdahl, secretary-treasurer of the Langley school board. "Then we debate whether we should tell the public, but when we do we often get more trouble."

Most school boards have been installing unbreakable glass at twice the price of ordinary glass. But it's softer and profanities are often etched in it.

Some districts use security guards or patrols but they are expensive and often their efforts are negated by the tactics of vandals.

All boards hase installed intruder alarms in the larger schools but the cost is about $8,000 and they don't halt the second-most expensive form of vandalism—paint.

"Spray cans are the worst things and kids seem to like to use them on freshly-painted walls," said Miles Adam, secretary-treasurer of the Delta school board.

One authority said some vandalism is the work of deranged minds. In Burnaby schools hamsters were mutilated and human excrement was spread in stairways.

Vandalism is sometimes premeditated and cleverly carried out. Several persons broke into a Vancouver school during the Christmas holidays and plugged the drains in all washroom sinks.

They wedged open the faucets so the water would keep running. By the time the incident was discovered, about $50,000 damage had been done, including a badly buckled hardwood floor in the gymnasium.

Most school boards lump vandalism (other than glass breakage) with general maintenance, so over-all damage figures are often not available.

He said the figure is an increase of $79,000 from 1973, and $158,000 from 1972.

But nobody seems to know what causes vandalism.

Dr. Sue Stephenson, professor of child psychiatry at University of British Columbia, said people have urges to break things as a kind of catharthis, but most can control the impulses.

She said many children are drawn into acts of vandalism because of pressure from their peer group.

Several school districts have formed committees to study vandalism. In Campbell River, on the east coast of Vancouver Island, school trustees offer a $100 reward for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of vandals.

The Vancouver police youth squad has stationed eight constables in schools to, act as liaison officers.

Many boards follow the example of Delta, where vandals are required to work for the school to compensate for damages.

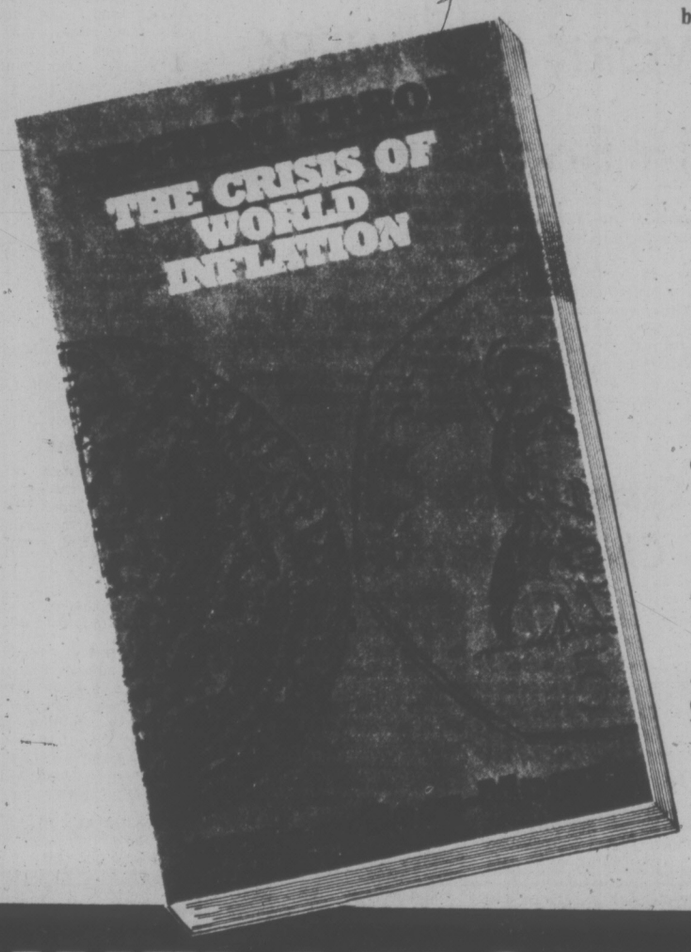
10-INSTALMENT SERIES

From the outstanding book "The Reigning Error"
by William Rees-Mogg, Editor of the London Times



STARTS FRIDAY, APRIL 4th in THE VICTORIA TIMES

While such problems as unemployment, housing, pollution, and labor disputes may dominate public thinking from week to week, by far the greatest threat to our security, liberties and social structure is inflation.

Some economists would argue that we have already passed the point of control to prevent an economic collapse.

In view of the importance of this issue, the Victoria Times has secured serial rights for the controversial new book "The Reigning Error" by William Rees-Hogg, editor of The London Times. While readers may not agree with the outspoken views set forth in this important study, it will certainly challenge the minds of all persons concerned about Canada's present economic position. A condensation of this new book will be published in 10 instalments by the Victoria Times, commencing Friday, April 4th.

No Need For Generation Gap Because Basic Principles Apply

jack beastall

Many pleasurable hours have been spent with young couples venturing into the unknown realm of gardening. Experience they do not have; reasoning is sound as far as knowledge permits; enthusiasm and ambition is high, but it is felt that a discussion of theories and an exchange of ideas is necessary in order to establish the route to be followed.

Hesitantly, almost apologetically, they mention organic gardening or biodynamic gardening, apprehensive of the reception their thoughts may receive. To most older gardeners, organic and biodynamic are unfamiliar terms, mentally associated with far-out cults that advocate impractical, even impossible, theories.

Neither of these theories is new, nor is either contrary to long accepted principles that have been recognized as essential to success and practiced as a matter of course without knowing them to be part of a larger conception of soil and plant husbandry.

Organic means living, as contrasted to inorganic which is non-living. All living things are plants and animals, possessing the capacities of growth, behavior, and reproduction of their kind. Matter which has once been alive is also termed organic.

The organic gardener recognizes soil as a living thing existing in a non-living base. The non-living, or inorganic, base is grains of sand or clay from disintegrated rock. The living portion is the organic matter added to this base, together with the beneficial organisms whose existence is possible only when organic matter is present.

The principle can be stated in this way; all living things are directly or indirectly the product of the soil and must be returned to the soil to complete the circle of life.

If gardeners religiously maintained this cycle the extensive garbage dump adjoining every city could be drastically reduced. The recycling of organic waste in the garden, and inorganic materials by industry, leaves only synthetic materials for disposal.

Biodynamic gardening embraces, and extends beyond, organic gardening. This system is built around the concept that any garden is a biological, organic unit in which all elements of its operation — cropping, tilling, manuring, pest and disease control — are interrelated and interdependent, rather than a series of dissociated processes.

The fundamental consideration is the maintenance of the productive life and health of the soil through constant addition of humus, something all good gardeners recognize as necessary, and which many practice in a limited way.

To the bio-dynamic gardener humus means a carefully and systematically prepared product. He insists that all manures and organic wastes shall be properly "ripened" by careful composting before being applied to the soil.

Thus the compost heap, properly constructed and handled, and the correct use of the resultant humus according to the crops being grown, is perhaps the most vital single factor in the bio-dynamic system.

Another factor receiving careful consideration is crop rotation together with the influence different plants have on others growing in close proximity, with a view to rontrolling pests and diseases of both soil and plants.

The idea of plants having a preference or an aversion to plants growing nearby has frequently been revived in my lifetime, having originated when cultivated plants consisted only of medicinal herbs. Today it is called companion cropping, and interest is again increasing as gadeners and conservationists realize the effects of irresponsible use of sprays and herbicides in home gardens by untrained persons.

Before any useful information on companion cropping with the plant material in use today can be published, extensive, planned experiments are necessary in a sufficient number of gardens spread over the continent to include all types of soils and climates, each gardener keeping careful records including weather, temperatures, rainfall and snowfall depths, advanced or retarded seasons.

Many of our young people are interested in a project of this type and would willingly cooperate if such a scheme were started.

There need be no generation gap when young gardeners speak of organic gardening or bio-dynamic gardening, because most of us have used the principles to some extent since we first started gardening, and our experiences can be passed along to benefit the newcomers.

No reasonable approach to plant growing can ignore the soil in which plants are to grow, but the extent to which we are prepared to go determines whether we classify as organic, bio-dynamic, or ordinary dirt-gardeners.

My advice to these young people, and to gardeners in any age group, is to obtain from books all the knowledge possible on these different, but overlapping, systems.

Put into practice those principles that can be easily applied under existing conditions. Expand further when and if possible. Become an organic, or bio-dynamic gardenre if you can.

Even a minimal application will result in improvement of the soil, therefore an improvement in the plants grown in that soil. Nothing will be lost and much will be gained.

Ignore disparaging epithets engendered by jealousy or ignorance. The bio-dynamic gardeners' contention that only close cooperation with nature, and a thoroughly natural type of husbandry can maintain the productivity of lands now fertile, and restore those rendered infertile by misuse, may soon receive international support.

WORK FOR WEEK

Keep up the compost making; bring in manure and seaweed to add to waste material on heap. Continually adding a scattering of good soil to every new addition avoids possibility of odor and hastens the decomposition of the material.

When early daffodils and other narcissi are fading, see that the flowers and seedpods are removed promptly to prevent draining the bulbs. If not already done, feed and water the bulbs for building up flower production for next year's display.

Prune Buddleia davidi, Cineraria maritima, Santolina incana, and the late flowering clematises such as C. paniculata, and named varieties as Jackmanii, Comtesse de Bouchard, Ernest Markham, Hagley Hybrid and Miss Bateman.

Parsnips can still be sown; ones in ground, dug up and chopped into small pieces for composting.

Use compost in planting holes for perennials and shrubs.

Easter Chicks Can Put Children in Hospital

DENVER (AP) — The American Humane Association says the Easter chick or duckling that looked so cuddly in the pet shop window probably will die after a few days in your home but could put your child in the hospital before then.

The warning is part of an annual Easter campaign by the Denver-based organization which seeks to have the sale of the pets outlawed.

"Chicks and ducklings sold as Easter pets seldom enjoy the gift of living associated with Easter," said Rutherford Phillips, executive director of the association.

He said the problem is that relatives usually buy the animals on impulse as Easter-morning gifts, without realizing that they almost certainly will die without special handling.

"This is not only inhumane, but a terrible waste, particularly when much of the world faces food shortages and starvation," Phillips said.

He adds that poultry are the biggest transmitters of salmonellosis, whose incidence annually rises in the week after Easter.

Salmonellosis is easily caught, sometimes requires hospital treatment, but rarely is fatal. It generally brings on diarrhoea, fever, cramps and vomiting during a period of three to five days.

Dr. Theodore Eichoff, head of the infectious diseases division of the University of Colorado School of Medicine, said children are especially susceptible to catching the disease from pets.

School Strikes Outlawing Urged

Strikes and lockouts should be outlawed in the education sector, Greater Victoria school board trustee Dr. Hal Knight told fellow trustees at a board meeting Thursday.

Knight urged the board to try to reach agreement with its Canadian Union of Public Employees workers to accept binding arbitration on a two-year trial basis.

"Strikes and lockouts have no place in the educational setting where the innocent third parties are the students," he said.

He pointed out that British Columbia teachers have already accepted the binding arbitartion method instead of the strike method of settling contract disputes.

Board chairman Bill Ross suggested that Knight save his motion until the board's current dispute with CUPE Local 382 is settled, at which time the idea can be put "in a larger if not a stronger package."

A parent at the meeting, Mrs. Sharon MacBain, asked the trustees what can be done to ensure that this year's CUPE strike never happens again.

Trustee Peter Bunn told her it will happen again unless B.C. labor laws are changed.

"That's considered a very red-necked opinion but that's my opinion," he said.

Ross said the board would welcome a chance to join with citizens to petition the provincial goverment for changes in the Labor Code prohibiting strikes and lockouts in the field of education.

REPORTERS VOTE TO TAKE PAY CUT

COLORADO SPRINGS (UPI) — William Woestendiek, publisher of the Colorado Springs Sun, said Friday editorial employees have voted to work fewer hours or take a paycut to avoid layoffs of personnel because of economic problems.

The paper's 28 reporters voted to take a 10 per cent pay cut or work a four-day week rather than see "four or five" employees laid off. City editor William Busenberg said the vote was taken in the newsroom Thursday night.

Woestendiek said economic troubles, among them the high cost of newsprint, forced the paper to cut its expenses.

BOUGHTON — In loving memory passed away March 29, 1969, of our dearest grandfather, who —Sadly missed by grandDaughter and family Judy, Ed and children.

BOUGHTON — In loving memory of our dear Dad and granddad who passed away March 29th, 1969.
We mourn him in silence,
No eyes now see up weep,
But many a silent tear is shed
When all others are asleep.

BOUGHTON — In loving memory of our dear Dad and Granddad, who passed away March 29, 1969
W mourn in silence
No eyes see us weep
But many a silent tear is shed
When all others are asleep,
—Forever remembered by 3 daughters and their families, Mabel, Edna and Elsie.

MONTGAUE—To the memory of our beloved parents, Christopher N., who passed away April 1, 1971, and Elizabeth B., April 6, 1972.

We do not need a special day,
To bring them to our minds,
For days we do not think of them,
Are very hard to find.

We weep for them in silence,
Outward tears have long since dried,
But the ache that's deep inside us,
Can never be denied.

They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps us to forget,
But time has only proved so far
How much we miss them yet.

Folks may think we have forgotten,
But little do they know
The longing, hoping, wishing,
For those days so long ago.

Their memory is a keepsake,
From which we'll never part.
God has them in His keeping,
we have them in our hearts.

Goodnight Dad, Goodnight Mom.

Remembered always by your daughters, Eileen, Audrey and their families.

ROSS—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Edith M. Ross who passed away March 30, 1974, also a dear son and brother, Merville D. Ross who passed away April 5, 1964.
We tell our lonely aching hearts,
God took her from us for the best.
That only He, the Great Physician could ease her pain and give her rest.
Alas, the hours without her are too empty to be measured and we wish
A thousand times each day for the dear ones that we treasured.
Lovingly remembered by —Charles, Dorothy, Ted and children.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself, what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Six months later, the pile of rubble on the left, photographed in October, has turned into the through-road on the right, speeding traffic from James Bay and Fairfield into the city centre as part of the major re-routing of the south ends of Blanshard and Quadra streets. Both these pictures were taken at the intersection of Blanshard and Collinson, near the Victoria General Hospital.

Witness Alters His Testimony

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Crane operator Richard Kruysifix told B.C. Supreme Court Thursday he saw a worker pull the main line of the crane just before a serious accident despite lower court testimony to the contrary.

He told Mr. Justice J. G. Gould several times that he saw a Slavko Masonry worker grab the crane's hook when it was three or four feet from the ground, tip the block and cause a ripple or whip in the line.

Under cross-examination by Dr. J. J. Gow, representing the injured Slavko Brajkovich, who owned the masonry company, Kruysifix said the worker "jerked" the hook towards a truck where Brajkovich was standing with two 25-foot slings in his hand.

Gow presented evidence of a transcript of a Nov. 27, 1973, provincial court matter in which Kruysifix was asked if he saw anybody jerk the line.

"No I didn't," was the reply.

"No I didn't."

Kruysifix, who now lives in Vernon, told Supreme Court "I must have given those answers" in provincial court.

And were they correct, asked Gow.

"In a way yes and in a way no. It happened a long time ago," he replied.

Did you have any difficulty in understanding the questions and answers then?

"Not that I can remember."

He again repeated that he saw a man near Brajkovich handing over the hook to him.

Brajkovich is alleging negligence and seeking damages against Kruysifix and Capital Builders, owner of the crane. He suffered crippled hands and his right leg was amputated below the knee in the June 2, 1973, accident at an apartment site at Craigflower and Carrie when the main line of the crane "fused" with high-voltage electrical lines running along the street.

D. H. Gray is representing Capital Builders and Edward Pollard appeared for Kruysifix.

The crane operator, under cross-examination, said the boom was immovable immediately before the accident and no one could pull it half a dozen feet.

He agreed the block and hook would weigh about 180 pounds and that the main line consisted of two steel cables each 9-16ths or ⅝ths of an inch thick.

The main line of the cable stretched 45 or 50 feet from boom to three or four feet above the ground.

He denied he touched any of the controls while fixing a gas pedal which had come off the throttle line. He agreed the worker who took the hook did not give it a vigorous shake.

Asked to estimate the swing of the whip or ripple in the line, he said "a couple of feet, two or three feet." It would become greater higher up the line, he believed.

"Yes. I touched none of the controls."

He denied that he accidentally moved the turntable control lever after fixing the gas pedal.

The boom was 12 to 15 feet from the power line and didn't move?

"Yes sir."

Then how do you explain the boom is above the power lines in photograhs?

"These pictures are not true. They were taken 20 minutes to half an hour later."

You say the crane settled and the boom moved after the accident?

"Yes."

This explanation is theory or speculation?

"Yes."

Counsel for the plaintiff and the defendants will submit written arguments to Gould with a deadline of April 18 for the plaintiff and May 2 for the defendants' reply. Judgment is not expected until about the end of May.

INDIANS PLAN TOKEN PROTESTS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Indian demonstrations against the British Columbia government Tuesday will not last more than an hour, says a Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs official.

"There will be a series of short information pickets and that's it," Penticton Band Chief Adam Eneas said Friday.

The picketing, in North Vancouver, Victoria and Penticton, will protest the government's slowness in negotiating the future of 36,000 acres of land cut off from reserves between 1912 and 1916.

Eneas, head of the union's cut — off lands committee, said any attempt to move on to the land, as previously threatened, will be at a later date.

Eneas said Indians in Penticton will picket in the city at an undetermined location. He did not know where picketing will be carried out in Victoria or North Vancouver.

But he said the Squamish band, which holds lands next to Lions Gate Bridge which connects Vancouver and the suburban North Shore, is definitely planning to demonstrate Tuesday.

USAF Unit Accused Of Spying, Threats

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a new book, a former aerospace engineer accuses a unit of the United States Air Force of engaging in a variety of illegal and unethical activities, including death threats. The service has denied the charges.

Peter James, a former Pratt and Whitney propulsion engineer, makes the allegations in the book The Air Force Mafia.

He says the air force foreign technology division (FTD) has engaged in death threats, harassment, falsification of intelligence documents aand spying on U.S. citizens.

While working for Pratt and Whitney at West Palm Beach, Fla., from 1962 to 1971, James went to international conferences where he mingled with Soviet scientists and reported regularly to the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), he says.

He says his work earned him letters of commendation from the air force, from the CIA and from his employers. He was fired in October, 1971, for what Pratt and Whitney called violation of company regulations.

He has filed a $6.2-million suit against his former employer, a division of United Aircraft Corp. It alleges that Pratt and Whitney and the FTD conspired to prevent him from writing his book in violation of his constitutional rights.

The book is being published by Arlington House. The formal release date is April 4, but the book now is on sale in Washington stores.

James says his main purpose in writing the book is to alert the people and to spur Congress into conducting an investigation of the air force unit, based at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton, Ohio.

Senator William Proxmire (Dem. Wis.) a year ago called for abolition of the FTD, and the Pentagon says Defence Secretary James Schlesinger has curtailed its activities.

James made many of the same accusations in a series of articles he wrote for the Palm Beach, Fla., Post in late 1973, and the air force then investigated the division at Proxmire's request.

"These interviews support Mr. James' facts insofar as dates of international meetings, identities of FTD attendees, etc., are concerned," the air force wrote Proxmire.

"The interviews do not, however, appear to substantiate his allegations against FTD of improper administrative conduct, intelligence collection malpractice, threats or harassment."

Specifically, the air force said, it found no support for a contention by James that there was a conspiracy to threaten him and his wife in Brussels in September, 1971.

In the book, James says that an agent of the division told him and his wife:

"If Uncle Sam tells me to do a job, then by God I'm going to do that job, and nothing will stand in my way. And I can say that I have friends in the Mafia who can arrange an automobile accident.

"I'd be asked questions later, and I'd have a few difficulties, but they would be answered, and that would be the end of it."

James writes that on the next day he and his wife were followed by suspicious-looking persons who he believes had designs on his life, but that they managed to get home safely by taking refuge in the U.S. embassy.

Canada Called In On Middle East

Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Canadian External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen has responded to an urgent call from U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to come here Monday to discuss the crisis in the Middle East.

The meeting raised immediate speculation about Canada's future role in the elusive quest for peace in what Kissinger described Wednesday as "a moment of potentially great danger."

Canada has 1,100 troops in the United Nations peacekeeping force stationed in the troubled area, plus 20 members of a truce supervisory organization in Palestine.

Kissinger's invitation to MacEachen was delivered by Ambassador William Porter in Ottawa Thursday, the day after the secretary told a press conference here about the failure of his personal peace mission in the Middle East.

The meeting, to be held over lunch at the state department here, was announced Friday.

"The secretary will brief MacEachen on recent developments in the Middle East in light of Canada continuing interest in events in that area," the state department said.

A U.S. official said that Canada had earlier "expressed particular concern" and asked to be kept informed about developments because of its peacekeeping role.

The official said as far as he knew MacEachen is the only foreign minister Kissinger has invited to discuss the Middle East situation since the breakdown of Kissinger's "shuttle diplomacy."

"It is clearly not a very happy situation," the official said.

Student Grants Delayed

More than 90 students haven't yet received their provincial government grants they applied for earlier this year, Nels Granewall, director of financial aid at the University of Victoria, said Thursday.

Up to $1,500 may be given to students for a school year, depending on financial need.

Granewall said the main problem is the government's computer program — some kind of computer foul-up.

Dean Clarke of the education department's student services program, said he will investigate individual complaints from eligible students who have not received their grants.

He said 25,000 cheques have been issued to students during this school year.

Home Grant Deadline For 1974

Confusion over a housing department advertisement announcing an extension of the 1974 homeowner grant deadline has been cleared up, a housing department spokesman said Thursday.

The first ad, announcing an extension for applications to March 31, did not clearly indicate the new deadline was for 1974 grants.

It caused many phone calls and letters of inquiry and the government revised its ads to try to clear up the confusion.

The spokesman said the deadline extension is to ensure that people who simply paid their property taxes last year and forgot to apply for their homeowner grant at the same time, don't lose out on the $200.

Artists Show Their Work

Victoria artists will dominate this year's University of Victoria Spring Craft Fair.

Scheduled for April 4 and 5, the popular event now in its fourth year will include displays and sales of stained glass, pottery, toys and leatherwork.

Among local artists showing their work will be Jeanne Sheppard, the Swan Lake Potters, Gina Rohr, Chris Aarondson, Doris Bernhard and others.

Twenty-seven craftsmen will participate.

Times for the fair are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

IWA Wildcat Strike Hits Youbou Plants

A wildcat strike by International Woodworkers of America members has shut down the B.C. Forest Products sawmill and veneer plant in Youbou.

About 450 IWA members of Local 1-80 went on strike at midnight Wednesday to protest the suspension of three men earlier the same day. The men were suspended after a dispute about pay rates and work responsibilities.

Mill manager Jim Warr said the mill will be closed until the company is advised by the union that crews are prepared to return to work and settle the dispute through procedures provided in the union contract.

Warr said the three men who had been suspended had refused to perform part of their normal duties.

An IWA spokesman said the mill would have been open Friday, as the members were taking their Easter holiday Monday.

CBC Sheds Commercials

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—CBC English and French radio networks become commercial-free on April 1, with minor exceptions, at a cost of approximately $2 million in lost revenues for the national network service.

The principal exceptions are that the CBC will continue to carry network programs that are not available to it without commercials—National Hockey League broadcasts from Canadian and U.S. points, and the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts Saturday afternoons from New York.

The CBC has been reducing the number of national and local advertising commercials it carries on its stations for a number of years. Most of the major metropolitan stations now carry no commercials during their breakfast time shows.

The $2 million in lost commercial revenues will have to be recovered from the CBC's annual parliamentary grant, a corporation spokesman said. However, the loss in revenue is small in comparison with the $50 million the CBC would lose if it stopped all advertising on its TV networks.

Laurent Picard, CBC president, has said that ending TV commercials would cost about $80 million a year—the $50 million in lost revenue, plus another $30 million in production costs to fill the time now occupied on the TV networks by advertising.

Mr. Picard has said ending commercials on TV has a low priority. The CBC would rather use its money to improve programs.

In radio, the Canadian Radio - Television Commission (CRTC) limits commercials to 1,500 minutes a week for broadcasting time between 6 a.m. and midnight. This works out to an average of about 12 minutes per hour.

Some privately-owned radio stations come close to this limit on a regular basis and others bump against it during peak advertising periods, the pre-Christmas and pre-Easter sales periods.

Cutting out CBC commercial time could mean increased demand by advertisers for time on private stations, said a spokesman for the Canadian Association of Broadcasters (CAB). It would be a healthy development for struggling frequency modulation (FM) stations if some of this revenue went to them, he said.

The CRTC proposes to limit commercial time on FM stations to eight minutes an hour in most cases.

Another exception to the general rule is that CBC stations serving communities in a language in which there is no other radio service will continue to sell local advertising.

This applies to CBC French stations in Moncton, Toronto, Windsor, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton and Vancouver, and probably to a new CBC English station which is to be set up in Chicoutimi, Que.

The Canada Elections Act requires the CBC and private stations to provide commercial time for federal election campaigns, and so the CBC will continue such announcements — but only for federal elections.

The CBC will carry some commercial-like public service announcements—without charge—for such enterprises as the United Appeal. But it will not carry government-paid advertising for Canada Savings Bond campaigns, post office Mail Early for Christmas appeals, or job service advertisements for Canada Manpower.

The CBC now carries some network shows in which gaps are left for advertising spots. On CBC stations, these gaps will be filled with music, but on privately-owned stations affiliated with the CBC, the local stations will still be permitted to sell local commercials for those gaps.

Age No Handicap For New Class At Camosun

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Age is a help, not a handicap, in Camosun College's new social service assistant program.

The 19 students who will graduate from the first class in June have an average age of 34, and between them they have 30 dependent children.

"Most of them are women who have brought up families," said program chairman Wilna Thomas in an interview this week.

Thomas was looking for people with life experience when she selected her first class, and she wanted people with at least four years' work experience.

She counts homemaking as full-time employment.

People under 21 aren't likely to be accepted into the 10-month program because of this emphasis on maturity, she said.

The program trains paraprofessionals to work in the social work field just as nurse's aides work in hospitals and teacher's aides work in classrooms.

A social service assistant can do a lot of the legwork for the professional social worker, as well as handling more routine problems that don't require the skill of the professional.

The students will be in class till May, when they are sent on a six-week field placement working five days a week in a human resources office, hospital or social agency.

Next fall Camosun hopes to introduce two new social service programs, special care aide and early childhood education and care.

"There is tremendous enthusiasm for this course," Thomas said of the early childhood education course.

For both social service assistant and early childhood education the pressure to start the courses came from students eager to take them, not employers looking for trained personnel, she said.

Early childhood education will be a two-year course training people to work in day care centres and nursery schools.

Special care aide will be a one-year course to train people to work with the retarded. Government funding has not yet been assured for this course, Thomas said.

"We're eager to begin to do a really proper training program for anyone who works at Glendale, G. R. Pearkes Clinic and places like that," she said.

Thomas has been teaching all the social work classes this year for the social service assistant course, but with two new classes added in the fall at least three more teachers would be needed, she said.

She has scheduled a meeting April 7 for all people who have applied to take the courses next fall.

Recollection of Sunrise Service

elizabeth forbes

Dawn came on that Easter Sunday morning back in 1923 with clear skies and no wind. And, with the daylight, men, women and children gathered at the summit of Mt. Tolmie for Victoria's first sunrise service.

They came by streetcar; they walked from their homes. Young ones clambered up over the rocks. Mothers pushed baby buggies and fathers carried tiny tots up the winding dirt road to the summit.

Frank Hall, one of the city's first radio operator-announcers, who helped set up a public address system for that service, remembers there was no lookout at the top of Mt. Tolmie then, and no paved parking space. Just a natural amphitheatre facing out to the Olympic Mountains and the Sooke Hills.

He says, "When the sun rose the whole top of the hill was crowded with people."

Hall, then in his 20s, was an active member of Centennial Methodist Church (now Centennial United) and it was Dr. Clem Davies, interim pastor there, who conceived the idea of the service and involved church members in the project.

"He was a Welsh spellbinder," Hall says, "and that morning of the hill proved it."

Looking back now, he laughs at the loud speaker system set up for the occasion.

Jack McKay, who had a Marconi agency in Victoria, his brother Hugh and Hall, set the unit up, with Leo Main of Vancouver, chief engineer for Marconi "giving advice."

"Just as Dr. Davies was ready to start, someone tripped over the connecting wires . . . and we had to work like blazes for a few minutes to get the thing going again."

When the service was over and the amplifying unit dismantled, the McKay brothers, with Main and Hall, hurried down to Centennial Church where another "event" was scheduled.

At the urging of Dr. Davies a broadcasting station had been set up — the first in Victoria — there and the minster planned to send out a message from it, that Easter Sunday.

Hall remembers Davies simply told the congregation one morning "not long before" that the church was going to have its own radio station and that it would be ready by Gbod Friday.

Equipment was obtained through the Marconi Company; an aerial was erected by B.C. Telephone Company. The operating room was in Davies study and part of the equipment in the men's choir gown room. A mike was placed on the pulpit.

The McKay brothers and Hall, with help of a few church members, did the actual setting up and "by deadline time we were ready to throw the switch."

It was planned to have a trial broadcast on that Good Friday, so receiving sets were placed at several points around the city "with a special crystal set in charge of Hugh McKay's wife, over in James Bay."

Telephones were ready in the church too, for the feedback. Nothing happened.

"We did a quick check," Hall remembers, "and Leo Main thought the guy wires on the aerial might not be functioning . . . so they put me in a sort of bosun's chair and hoisted me up to do some repairs with a wire cutter." Again nothing happened.

One more effort was made to overcome the trouble.

Frank Hall, "the skinny one in the foursome" as he tells it today, was given the job of crawling under the church with a roll of chicken wire which he was to stretch out in line with the aerial to act as a "counterpoise".

It worked. The switch was thrown and with the opening of the microphone, CFCL, 410 meters and 500 watts of power was ready to go on the air.

At 11 o'clock that Easter Sunday morning — after the successful sunrise gathering on Mt. Tolmie — Dr. Davies again scored, with a first broadcast of a church service in western Canada.

Soloist that day, Hall says, was Estelle Kelly and among those in the choir were Tom and Maude Hammond and Mary Holt, who was destined to become Mrs. Frank Hall, not long afterward.

The McKay brothers and Hall continued to run the station "without salary" until 1924, when Dr. Davies left the church.

The new pastor was not interested in radio, so the station was moved downtown and taken over by the Deaville family. Later again it was sold twice in several years.

Today, of course, it is Victoria's popular CJVI.

It was in 1924 too, that Frank Hall gave up radio telegraphy, in which he was expert, and after successfully passing Dominion civil service exams, joined the customs staff here, first as a night guard and eventually as a customs officer. He has been retired now for 18 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall have a delightful home on Arnot Avenue, high above the Gorge, where pictures of children and grandchildren hold prominent places.

Doris' Dreamy, Creamy Rolls

By MARY MOORE

Our temptation for today came from Doris Witter and we yielded.

You may have heard these called "Lilies" because they will remind you of the wrap-around Calla lily.

Doris discovered that if she made them into little cylinders she could tuck in more cream.

These are rare beauties for dress-up occasions and take time and patience — but wow! what flavor!. What a reputation you will earn.

DORIS' DREAMY CREAMY ROLLS

1 c. sifted cake-and-pastry flour;
1 tsp. baking powder;
3 large eggs;
¾ c. granulated sugar;
1 tsp. vanilla;
about ¾ c. icing sugar

Whipped Cream Filling:

1⅞ c. (15 oz. or ¾ pt.) whipping (32 per cent) cream;
4 tbsp. icing supar;
1 tbsp. (envelope) plain gelatine;
3 tbsp. water.

Sift flour then measure 1 cup. Re-sift with the baking powder. Set aside.

In medium-sized bowl, beat eggs and sugar on "high" for 10 minutes. Stir in vanilla, remove beaters then fold in sifted ingredients until batter is smooth. (Batter will be thick.)

Spread out a large piece of waxed paper and sprinkle it with the icing sugar.

With oil, generously grease a teflon cookie sheet or 13x9x2" pan. Drop batter on by even heaping tablespoons. (DO ONLY THREE AT A TIME. YOU WILL SEE WHY AS SOON AS THEY ARE BAKED.) Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 4½ - 5 minutes — edges will just begin to turn pale gold. Remove from oven and QUICKLY transfer with lifter these small flat cakes to wax paper generously coated with icing sugar. IMMEDIATELY roll each cake up as you would for a jelly roll but just so edges overlap. Turn overlapping edge down and place on large plate. Sprinkle with a little more icing sugar. NOTES: 1) THIS STEP MUST BE DONE AS FAST AS POSSIBLE or little cakes cool and will break when you roll them. 2.) It might be a good idea to try only one the first time to give you an idea of the procedure.

Repeat until all batter is used, each time scraping off any dried batter on baking sheet and greasing sheet again.

Prepare Whipped Cream Filling: in a cup soak gelatine in water for a few minutes. Place cup in boiling water and stir until gelatine is dissolved then remove it from heat. Pour whipping cream into bowl with icing sugar and beat on "high." When cream begins to thicken, slowly pour cooled liquid gelatine into whipped cream while beaters continue on "high". Beat until stiff. Gently pry lapped cake edges apart and fill generously with whipped cream then re-close edges. Be sure roll is full of whipped cream — you may have to add a little to ends. Place folded side down on large plate. Sprinkle with icing sugar.

PAULING STAYS WITH 'COLD CURE'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The long-sought cure for the common cold has been around for nearly 50 years, according to Dr. Linus Pauling. He says it's plain old vitamin C.

But the American Medical Association disagrees. Two reports in the journal of the AMA conclude vitamin C will not prevent or cure the common cold.

Pauling says his recomendation to take vitamin C is in the realm of "folk medicine," which he says has often been far ahead of the doctors in discovering cures for common ailments.

Pauling, who has won two Nobel prizes including one in a non-medical field indirectly related to vitamins, first publicized his theory in a book published in 1970, "Vitamin C and the Common Cold."

Vitamin C, or ascorbic acid, was first synthesized by Dr. Albert Szent-Gyorgyi in 1928. Pauling began research into ascorbic acid in 1966 when a New York biochemist suggested massive doses of vitamin C for the persistent colds Pauling was having.

Americans spend about half a billion dollars a year on cold treatment medicine, but Pauling advises against it.

"These medicines do not prevent the colds. They may decrease somewhat the misery of the cold," says Pauling, "but they also do harm, because of their toxicity and side effects.

"The natural, essential food ascorbic acid, taken in the right amounts at the right time, would prevent most of these colds from developing and would in most cases greatly decrease the intensity of the symptoms in those that do develop.

"The common cold is an infection by viruses that circulate throughout the world. It rapidly dies out in a small, isolated population. If the incidence of colds could be decreased enough throughout the world, the common cold would disappear, as smallpox has in the British Isles."

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By Dr. William J. Welch

I used to like thinking of myself as immune to what my grandchildren airily refer to as "advertising hooey," but when I caught myself in a drug store a few years ago automatically choosing a well-known brand name over a less expensive bottle of identical aspirin tablets, I began to wonder about it.

Like most doctors, I knew perfectly well that the six chemical manufacturers of aspirin in this country all, by law, must meet the same standards set by the U.S. Pharmacopedia. It was no secret to me that the wholesale cost to the druggist of a thousand five-grain aspirin tablets can vary all the way from about $1 to $6 or more, depending on who manufactures them.

Yet there I was as gullible about brand-name magic as the dullest innocent caught in a shell game!

But what really disturbed me was the realization that if I could fall for such over-the-counter flummery, maybe our critics have a point when they complain that we doctors have been seduced by the same kind of flummery into writing too many prescriptions for high-priced, brand-name pharmaceuticals, and that we too often fail to prescribe equally effective, less expensive, generic equivalents.

They say that the hucksterism that multiplied two or three soap powders, not very different from one another, into a score of over-priced, bogus brand names, has worked the same hocus-pocus with pharmaceuticals and that, as a consequence, brand names no longer mean what they used to mean.

And I must acknowledge that even a casual reader of advertisements for pharcians would have to agree that of all the brilliant and maceuticals directed at physib e n eficient contributions of North America's drug companies to the public health — and there are many — slippery Madison Avenue methods of overpromoting their brand names is most assuredly not one of them.

Consider, for example, the case of a widely promoted brand name of the generic drug, "reserpine," a derivative of the India root, "rawolfia serpentina," commonly prescribed to treat high blood pressure.

Some 20 odd technically competent pharmaceutical houses make reserpine, which they wholesale to druggists at anywhere from 60 cents to plus or minus $10, for one thousand tablets of 0.25 milligrams each.

The owners of the heavily promoted brand name in question, on the other hand, are able to wholesale — and very successfully — the same product for about $40 per thousand tablets. It is difficult to account for such a massive discrepancy on grounds other than the power of promotion.

If your doctor, who ought to have a wholesale-price list on his desk, but probably has not, prescribes reserpine, under that brand name instead of specifying the generic name, your druggist will have to charge you anywhere from four to 40 times as much as he would if he had been instructed to supply the drug under its generic name.

Similar discrepancies between brand names and generic names can be uncovered in many prescription drugs, but before you decide it is all a matter of dollars and cents, beware—because in many instances your doctor has good reasons for specifying one particular brand of a specific drug.

This is the case, for example, with digoxin, the derivative of digitalis, which is so necessary for the management of heart disease. In recent tests, samples of digoxin were found to vary so much in quality and effectiveness, from one manufacturer to another, that many doctors insist quite rightly on prescribing one single brand name for the very good reason that it is the one that has been proved to be the most reliable in its effect.

So, though our critics have a point, choosing a drug, branded or unbranded, clearly depends on a whole lot more than the numbers in the price list. But in principle, you can often save money, and sometimes a good deal, if you ask your doctor when he writes a prescription for you, if there is a generic drug that will do as well as the better known brand names.

There are some basic decorating rules. For instance, don't hang something small next to something large, if you want to avoid an unbalanced look. Aim for a variety in frame styles. Frames should contrast but not conflict.

If you want to display photographs together with other art forms, don't group all the photos together but scatter them throughout the arrangement.

Old Age Continuation of Youth

VANCOUVER (CP) — It is not true that people suddenly decline in old age, physically or mentally; old age is a continuation of young adult life, says a man who has studied the elderly.

Dr. Harry Maas of the school of social work at the University of British Columbia said that is one of the things he has learned from a study of old age, begun seven years ago when he was associate director of the Institute of Human Development in Berkeley, Calif.

He found that lonely and useless feelings, or disengagement "when you reject society and society rejects you" in old people came only with poor health, "and those people had health problems all through their lives."

The 142 persons he studied had been interviewed at Berkeley from the time their children were born in 1928 and 1929 until the children were 18, "so we had a sizable amount of information about their early adult life."

Dr. Maas said the people who were most unhappy in old age had a lifelong history of physical illness or were people whose interests were centred on husbands and children.

"Two groups of women didn't adjust to old age; the Fearful Ordering Mothers — a dreadful term, I'm sorry we used it — who were submissive, fearful, tending to be depressed; and the Anxious Asserting Mothers — they were more histrionic."

The happiest old women were those who had worked while young adults or devoted time to clubs and organizations.

"The clubwomen had few divorces, although they never liked family life. They were well-educated, poised, dressed smartly. They were remote interpersonally. They were not happy as wives and mothers but in later years they were among the happiest people.

"We assume that all women love to be grandmothers, but the clubwomen certainly do not. They are liberated by old age. We cannot make all these assumptions about old people."

Dr. Maas said women who were still working were happiest.

"They were poorer people. Their husbands were not good wage-earners. They were the least educated and many were divorced or separated.

"But they were happier than most, which suggests it's better not to put all your eggs into the family basket."

He said all of the people studied had "remarkably high" IQs but he found no IQ differences between those who concentrated on families and those who found their pleasures away from the family.

He said a group called the Conservative Ordering Fathers generally had the highest IQs.

"They tended to be independent, not easily impressed, self-satisfied, moralistic. They felt they were productive, they were uncomfortable with uncertainty."

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: I think my fish is mad. I mean angry, because he's been getting very red around his face. He's an Egyptian mouthbreeder. What can I do to make amends?—R.D.

Dear R.D.: If your Egyptian mouthbreeder is part of a pair, it's likely he's in love. This fish's flashy, flaming face precedes a particularly passionate performance.

Dear Dr. Miller: When we got this dog four months ago, he was supposed to be a two-year-old Egyptian Sari and he weighed 18 pounds. We got him for a cheap price because the owner had to move out of the country. This dog has been nothing but trouble since. I know we fed him too much because he's kept growing. He now weighs 40 pounds. A neighbor who has a dog says dogs don't keep growing when they're two years old. But then he's never heard of an Egyptian Sari. Can you fill me in on this breed and what to expect?—S.R.

Dear S.R.: An Egyptian Sari? There is no such breed, sorry to say. Nor is there any canine regardless of how confused his ancestry might be who would more than double his weight at two years of age, unless you started with an extremely emaciated animal. Growing some in the process of adding all that weight means he's still a puppy. And if he's still in the process, he'll undoubtedly be a fairly large one.

★ ★ ★

Dear Dr. Miller: When I went to the garage in the morning, I noticed our cat's food was still there. He normally gobbles it up when fed at night. Then I found him, sprawled out dead on the garage floor. I searched and could find nothing as a cause for his death except that an old bottle of ant poison had been spilled on a shelf. Even if he'd gotten into that it couldn't have killed him that quickly, could it?—D.B.

Dear D.B.: The ingestion of arsenic in a concentrated form such as found in some ant baits could cause a very acute form of arsenic poisoning and death within hours. No pet should be allowed in the same room with poisonous substances accessible on table or shelves (or even in cupboards unless they are extremely secure since curious cats are sometimes capable of opening cabinets.)

★ ★ ★

Dear Dr. Miller: The strangest thing has happened. Peterkins, my small parrot, has had a sore eye for about two weeks. It's kind of pussy and red-looking. It looks worse, in fact, than my eyes when I had an eye infection several months ago. I still have some of the salve the doctor prescribed for my eyes. Could I use if for Peterkins? If so, how often?—H.B.

Dear H.B.: Definitely your local bird-oriented veterinarian should be peering at Peterkins to clear up this orbital enigma. Conjunctivitis can occur in parrots, but a frequent complication of this eye problem is a sinusitis near the eyeball. In these cases, surgical drainage of the affected area is often necessary to obtain healing. In any event, medication directly used in the eye of bird is most often a liquid, since ointments are usually shedded off the eyeball before they have a chance to work by the rapid-moving third eyelid.

Dear Dr. Miller: Booboo, our toy white poodle, is always crying. Or so everybody thinks. Nothing I have tried stems her tears. They just keep coming. It's very unsightly. A friend who knows a lot about poodles said an operation to cut off that inner eyelid will stop this tearing and clear it up. I'd hate to have her operated on if there was anything else, but heaven knows I've sure tried. Does anything else work but the operation?—S.S.

Dear S.S.: It's dangerous to experiment with the treatment of eye problems, since there's a possibility of injuring the eyes by using improper techniques or medication. Excess tearing is common in poodles and other small dogs with similar type coats, becoming less of a problem as the size of the dog increases. The lighter-coated animals are the ones who have the most problems, certainly the ones where the tear-stained appearance is most annoying. Appropriate treatment depends on the cause, which may range from eyelashes or other hairs which lie against and irritate the eye, to allergies and plugged or inadequate tear ducts. In selected cases, removal of a gland of the third eyelid (but not the third eyelid itself) may reduce the tearing. The doctor may advise specific medication, a surgical procedure, or he may advise simply living with the process of cosmetically treating the tear-stained areas below the eyes. Booboo's eyes should not be subjected to home experimentation.

13-Year-Old Dad?

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a 13-year-old boy to father a child? Our neighbor claims that Leroy, our 13-year-old son, got Laurie, their 15-year-old daughter, pregnant.

Leroy has always been big for his age, but he never was a run-around, and he hardly ever looked at a girl. He has never been in any kind of trouble. He's a good student and an altar boy at church.

Leroy said he fooled around with Laurie "some," but he wasn't the only one. Laurie says she is sure Leroy is the one, but she admitted to having given in to three other boys.

Laurie refuses to have an abortion because it's against her religion. She is a very religious girl and always said she wanted to be a nun.

We don't know where to turn, Abby. If it's our son's baby, we want to do the right thing, but if it isn't, we don't see why we should be stuck with the responsibility, expense and so on.

Can you help us?—Mess.

DEAR MESS: First, you need some expert legal advice. If you can't afford a lawyer, consult your local Legal Aid Society. Then get some counseling from your clergyman, Family Service and-or Planned Parenthood office. It is is obvious that both Leroy and Laurie need to know a lot more about the birds and the bees and people than they know. What kids don't know can hurt them.

DEAR ABBY: I got into a terrible fight with a telephone operator. I couldn't get my party, so I dialed the operator and asked her to help me get the number. She was very rude and said: "Why don't you learn how to speak English?"

I know how to speak English, Abby. I was born in Pine Bluff, Arkansas, and lived there until eight months ago, when I moved to California.

When this operator insulted me I asked her what her name was because I was so angry I wanted to report her to her supervisor. She said she wasn't allowed to give out her name, and before I could say another word, she disconnected me.

How can a person report a discourteous telephone operator if she refuses to give you her name? — Insulted.

DEAR INSULTED: Ask the telephone operator for her "number." (Each operator has one.) If she refuses to give it to you and hangs up, call back and ask for the supervisor. You may not be able to identify the operator against whom you have the complaint, but it's worth a try.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is 17. Her father (from whom I am divorced) bought her a car of her own, and ever since she's had that car her grades have done down, and she has gotten so disrespectful and independent I can't handle her.

She drives off to school in the morning and sometimes I don't see her until 10 p.m. When I ask her where she's been, she says, "Oh, just goofing around."

How can I get her back in line? The car is hers so I can't take it away from her.—Her Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: The key to the situation fits the car. As long as your daughter is under legal age, you are responsible for her. Ground her until her grades come up. And you set the rules about when she's expected home.

DEAR ABBY: When a woman complained because her husband wanted her affectionate attentions at odd times, you said: "Shoot the ducks when they are flying." Wonderful advice!

My wife is 62 and so am I. She is full of pep and still works fulltime, and she shoots the ducks while they are flying. And if they aren't flying, she hunts them out!

Sign me. — The Happiest Man.

P.S. The only time she gets angry with me is when I tickle the bottom of her feet. She is a little overweight, so there are plenty of other places to tickle her. I hope you don't think we are crazy.

DEAR HAPPY: If you're crazy, what this world needs is more crazy people.

Nuclear Power Plant Planned

SEATTLE, Wash. (CP) — A spokesman for Puget Sound Power and Light Co. said Thursday the company is hoping to start construction in July on a $400 million nuclear power plant 70 miles from downtown Vancouver.

Matt Miletich, news and information supervisor for the company, said public hearings on the proposed plant will be held this spring and early summer.

"We need to start work on clearing and site preparation by July if our first unit is to be completed on target in mid-1982," he said.

The 1,400-acre site of the proposed plant is five miles east of the rural Washington community of Sedro Woolley. The area is about 30 miles south of the Canada United States border.

Miletich said the company has been told by the nuclear regulatory commission, a federal government body, that public hearing will be held this summer.

He said the plant must also be approved at the state level by the Washington state thermal power plant site evaluation council. He said dates for hearings by the state body have not been set.

Miletich said the plant will generate 1,000 megawatts of power initially, about half as much as the Grand Coulee Dam. He said the plant's second unit, scheduled to be ready by mid-1985, will be expanded to 2,000 megawatts.

Pilot Survives Crash

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arnold Apsey of Ketchikan, Alaska, pilot of a light plane which made a forced landing near Kincolith, 45 miles north of Prince Rupert, Thursday, was in Prince Rupert hospital resting comfortably today.

Search and rescue officials said he had undetermined injuries suffered in the landing.

Apsey brought down his Stinson 180 aircraft onto a beach where fires had been lit to guide him in, but it turned into a crash landing.

He had been on a flight from Ketchikan to Prince Rupert when his light plane developed problems.

Typical Untypical Drinker

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The portrait of an alcoholic you have have — of someone lying under the Johnson Street bridge — doesn't fit Barry.

Barry is 43 years old, a handsome man, well dressed, happily married and with a family, living in Greater Victoria. Furthermore, he hasn't had a drink for 17 years.

But Barry is an alcoholic, as he's he first to say, and he claims to be a typical one, like most of the other people attending the three-day Alcoholics Anonymous rally this week at the Westwind Motor Inn in Langford.

Things are good for Barry now because of AA. But they weren't always that way.

"I don't think I ever drank normally. From age 15 or 16, I always drank to get drunk."

As a young man Barry joined the navy and in those days, the common attitude was "if you didn't drink, there was something wrong with you."

But he was single and when the three-day binges ashore followed one after another he wasn't touching anyone but himself.

The binges — they were blackouts — unremembered.

"Many of us used to sit around next day saying: 'Jesus, we must have had a good time last night. We spent all our money and we don't know what we did.' "

In 1954 Barry got married. A nice well-brought up local girl.

"I stayed sober for about five or six weeks to impress my wife with what a hell of a great guy I was. Then it was back to the old pattern.

An example: she asked him to go out for a couple of loaves of bread one afternoon. He didn't come home until midnight "hammered out of my mind."

"I loved her, but I was slowly killing her."

And changing her too. Into a liar. She began to make up stories to others to explain why he couldn't do this, wouldn't be there.

Their son was born. Into a household filled with tension.

So Barry had become an alcoholic. Not a falling down drunk. Not lying under the Johnson Street bridge. Working sober through the week most of the time. Blotto on weekends.

But he didn't think so.

"I said to myself there's no way I'm an alcoholic. I'm too intelligent."

Still, a couple of men in the navy he knew were members of AA and some of the things they said to him lingered. Meanwhile, his wife was getting fed up and the navy was getting more concerned about his work performance.

"I would promise my wife every time 'I'll never do it again' — and I'd blow it every time."

Barry says that things which were important to him — his wife, his son, his job — when he was sober just weren't important when he was drunk.

In March 1959 he made the critical phone to AA. For help. Two men came right over. Barry was in trouble with his family, in trouble with his job, longing for a little sympathy. He didn't get it.

"They went right at me.

"They said: 'if you've really had enought, AA can help you. They didn't promise me another thing."

The two men told him AA wasn't a religious organization, "all it was was a group of people who had one objective — to stay sober."

He went to his first meeting, in Esquimalt, and saw a lot of people he knew, he recalls with a smile.

He wasn't willing to accept everything he was told but he was scared. His newfound friends shephered him, had him at meetings just about every night for weeks.

"Then I started to like those meetings. I began to go because I wanted to and it's been like that ever since."

Looking back at the drinking years, Barry says: "I was a phoney bastard. I saw myself as a great party man, as efficient at work. And at home I was miserable.

"When I came into AA I found I didn't have to act for anybody. I am what I am. AA has provided me with a fun way of living."

Best-Seller Credited To Tumor Home Remedy

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

But for benzedrine and gin, Anthony Burgess may never have written A Clockwork Orange.

In fact, he may never have written at all without the potion, he told an audience of 500 sprawled on the lawn at the University of Victoria Friday — the potion incidentally curbed a brain tumor that doctors said would kill him.

Burgess, whose lecture was sponsored by the student academic affairs committee, was given a year to live in 1959.

"I was elated. I'd never been given 12 months to live before," he said. And in just nine of those 12 months he produced six novels, one A Clockwork Orange.

"This was regarded as excessive, indecent and ungentlemanly," he said in one of a number of swipes at the British and their publishers.

His first book was accepted by a publisher who said it seemed more like a second book, could he go home and write a first?

"So I wrote a first," said Burgess, "containing lots of Catholic guilt and gloom." The publishers didn't like it so refused to publish the second, which was, of course, the first, he said.

An accomplished musician and composer, Burgess tried his hand at other arts, but painting for one, was difficult.

"I'm color-blind," he explained. "That was considered to be a set-back then though it isn't now."

While writing music in 1954, after six hours' labor on a piece a musician would play in two seconds, he said, Burgess began to imagine typing his thoughts instead of translating them to notes.

So began a career with more than 20 published books so far.

Burgess talked about A Clockwork Orange, the fifth novel in his collection of "terminal works" of that unfateful 12 months.

The violence-prone thug was indeed rehabilitated, by a method no doubt approved of by university audience members, said Burgess. Theoretical psychologists often praise its merits, he said.

The brainwashing technique strips the criminal of free will, allowing him no choice but the choice to do good.

And this is one point of the book, said the author.

"It is far more evil to impose upon a human the capacity to do only good than it is to do evil."

"Once you take away his capacity to choose evil, you are rendering him into a creature who isn't human."

A Clockwork Orange was made into a movie in 1971.

RARE BEAVERS NOT IMPRESSED

TORONTO (CP) — Status, even for a rare black beaver, is having your house designed and built by a sculptor.

Since the beavers, donated to the zoo by the Hudson's Bay Co., were moved to an outside pond 12 days ago, only one has moved into the house, constructed of real sticks and fake mud.

The fake mud looks much like that used by wild beavers, but is really placticized concrete.

Already the one beaver has done some extensive renovation on the length of some sticks used to build the house.

But why not let the beavers build their own house?

Zoo officials say they are worried that the beavers would not build according to the design plans — that is, with the house resting against a glass wall through which visitors may watch the animals through a handy peephole.

Not only are officials providing the animals with an exclusive house, but also an endless forest of delicious poplar trees. Freshly-cut trees will be erected in pips in the pond and replaced as eaten.

Trustees, Cupe Agree in Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tentative agreement was reached Thursday afternoon between the school board and the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Clive McKee, industrial inquiry commissioner, said Thursday night that negotiators for both sides had agreed to recommend acceptance of the settlement.

Terms were not disclosed.

The 96 school maintenance workers, members of Local 407, began rotating strikes at city schools March 10. Janitors and stationary engineers refused to cross picket lines, leaving as many as 30,000 students without classes.

The union, which served strike notice Feb. 24, had asked for a raise of $2.50 an hour across-the-board, or $2 an hour with a cost-of-living clause, in a one-year contract.

The school board had offered 80 cents an hour on the current base rate of $4.60 an hour in a one-year contract.

Boy Hit, Driver Fined

A seven-year-old boy is in good condition in Victoria General Hospital today after he was struck by a car as he walked across the road at Quadra and Queens Friday.

Marc Bassiere of 819 Walker received a fractured arm and leg in the mishap which occurred about 5:26 p.m.

The driver of the car, Ross Ernest Bull, 28, of 925 Balmoral was charged with driving with a blood alcohol reading exceeding .08 per cent.

He appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning, pleaded guilty, and was fined $400 by Judge D. K. McAdam.

Paper Files Complaint On Printers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia labor relations board will hear a complaint Tuesday filed by the Vernon News against the Printing Pressman's Union which has halted publication of four of the five Thomson B.C. Newspapers Ltd. publications.

Bruce Rowland, publisher of the news, filed the complaint on the grounds that the Printing Pressman's contract with the News does not expire until June 30.

Pressmen's contracts expired Dec. 31 at the Kamloops Sentinel and Feb. 28 at the Kelowna Courier and Penticton Herald.

None of the four papers has published since March 18. Base rate for the pressmen was $6.55 an hour.

The fifth Thomson newspaper in B.C., the Nanaimo Free Press, has not been affected. Its pressmen are represented by the Stereotypers Union.

The pressmen refused to meet company representatives until the newspapers settle an issue over reproduction of advertising material with Local 226 of the International Typographical Union.

The company maintains that reproduction is a form of feather-bedding and that it is not economically viable at its newspapers. The clause in question would require the newspapers to locally produce material which advertisers supply ready for publication. Usually the locally-produced material then is junked.

The union claims the reproduction clause is necessary for job security.

Pressmen Start Co-op Paper

GLASGOW (AP) — Glasgow press workers announced Friday they have met a government challenge to raise enough money to start their own newspaper. It will be the first in Britain run as a workers' co-operative.

The paper will cost an estimated $5.76 million to launch. The Labor government promised to put up half the money if the workers raised the rest by March 31.

A workers' meeting was told the target was met with the help of a last-minute $60,000 loan from millionaire publisher Robert Maxwell, a former Labor MP.

Industry Secretary Tony Benn said in a statement the birth of the newspaper, to be called the Scottish Daily News, will be "a historic event."

"It will be the first national newspaper to be run by its workers free from political pressures and commercial interests, and constitutes a general victory for the people it seeks to serve."

Maxwell forecast the paper will be on the streets within a month.

Plans for the paper were made a year ago after Beaverbrook newspapers, one of Britain's biggest publishers, closed their Glasgow evening paper and transferred printing of the Scottish Daily Express to Manchester.

The Beaverbrook cuts cost 1,800 jobs in Glasgow. The new paper, printed on the old Beaverbrook presses, will employ about 500.

Grant to Aid Greenpeace Whale Film

A provincial government grant of $1,795 has been awarded the Greenpeace Film Committee to assist in production of a 50-minute documentary film based on the Greenpeace Five mission.

That mission will begin in late April or early May. The 80-foot converted halibut boat, Greenpeace Five, will sail 50 to 100 miles into the Pacific to intercept Russian and Japanese whaling fleets as they return from the Antarctic hunt.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said the Greenpeace campaign has the full support of the provincial government.

"It is estimated that 90 per cent of the great whales have been killed in the past 25 years and eight of the 10 species are extinct or nearly so," said Hall.

Strike Boon to Juvenile Home

By HOI-YIN DER
Times Staff

While most people have been inconvenienced by the current CUPE strike, Phil Perry feels the strike has been a God-send.

"The strike has actually been a blessing in disguise," says Perry, supervisor of the juvenile division of the provincial corrections branch's community services program.

He explained that prior to the strike, all juveniles remanded in custody for trial were lodged in the Juvenile Detention Home, 1125 Pembroke. The home was operated as a maximum security facility, and consequently hard core delinquents and first-time offenders were all lumped together and dealt with in the same way.

The results were often detrimental.

"For instance, naive delinquents often pick up the negative behavior of more sophisticated and manipulative delinquents," Perry said.

He said what was needed if the juveniles were to be best served was splitting the detention home into two sections —an unlocked wing for first-time offenders and a security section for hardened, headstrong delinquents.

Perry said the detention home was picketed by CUPE and on the morning of Feb. 11 notice was given to vacate the building within four hours.

"It was a mad rush. I lodged what kids I could in private homes and moved the more difficult ones over to Vancouver," said Perry, who is also a Victoria school board trustee.

During the search for alternate detention facilities, Perry's dream of setting up two separate detention areas to accommodate the differences in juveniles' attitudes became a reality. Maximum security quarters were relocated in the former RCMP cells at the Law Courts at 850 Burdett and unlocked quarters were established in a vacant group home on Vancouver Street.

"As soon as we feel they can be trusted they are moved to the Vancouver Street home," Perry said.

Each juvenile spends a mandatory 24 hours within the confines of the home, after which he or she is permitted to join in such recreational activities as swimming, hiking, volleyball, baseball and basketball.

Perry said treatment is not an aim of the remand home.

"Our main purpose is to provide an atmosphere that lends itself to communication," he said.

Perry said the segregation of the juveniles into two groups has been a worthwhile experiment.

"Because the juveniles all start out in maximum security cells and are only moved to unlocked quarters when they display some responsibility, they tend to work with the system and communicate with the staff much more than ever before," said Perry.

He said juveniles staying at the Pembroke Street home were often hostile toward the staff.

"But then there was little in the way of incentives for them to act otherwise . . . here at the Vancouver Street home the kids know what the conditions are and if they blow it, they know they'll be sent back to the cells."

Perry said the project has been such a success it will continue even after the strike ends. An architect has been hired to renovate the Pembroke Street home so there will be both maximum security and open-door wings.

ELDERLY WARMED BY SUN

LIVERPOOL, England (CP)—Prototype houses using solar energy for heating are to be built on Merseyside.

Nine of the houses, specially designed for elderly people, will form part of a project at High Bebington, near here. Five houses, heated conventionally, will also be built on the same site. After a year's occupation, energy usage in the two types will be compared.

The solar-heated houses will be of brick, with one outside wall surface covered by a double glazed skin. This wall will absorb solar radiation and re-radiate heat into the house, its release being controlled by the occupants. The houses will, of course, be insulated to a high standard.

There will also be a flat plate solar energy collector on the roof to help in water heating. The houses are to be fitted with fan-assisted cooling systems to cope with possible overheating in summer.

Laboratory experiments and computer simulations have shown that a solar-heated house can use from about one-third to two-thirds less energy than an ordinary one. The scheme will put some real figures and experience into the research.

Work is expected to begin on the houses by the middle of this year. They have been designed by Loughborough University of Technology in collaboration with Pilkington Bros. Ltd, the famous glass-making firm. The project will cost ($322,000) and the money is being provided by the department of the environment.

Condoms Recalled

OTTAWA (CP) — A ninth brand of condome has been ordered recalled by the health protection branch as "unreliable on the basis of probability of leakage," the health department announced Thursday.

The unreliable birth control devices are Fromms FF, manufactured by Mapa-GMBH of Germany and distributed in Canada by Medico-Technic of Montreal.

"Consumers in possession of this product are advised to return it to the place of purchase or destroy it," a spokesman for the health protection branch said.

Eight other brands of condom were ordered removed from the market last December. They were found unreliable in laboratory tests conducted on 60 brands.

Mormons' Faith Pays Off ...In Fewer Cancer Cases

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Mormons neither drink nor smoke, and they stress clean living. They also die of cancer at half the rate of other Californians.

That is not surprising, since many cancers — especially cancer of the lungs, one of the biggest killers — have been linked to tobacco and alcohol,

But Dr. James E. Enstrom of the school of public health at the University of California at Los Angeles has found that Mormons in Utah and California have strikingly lower cancer death rates in sites that have never been associated with tobacco, alcohol or diet. These include cancer of the lymphatic system, such as Hodgkin's disease, breast cancer, uterine cancer, cancers of the bladder and kidneys and cancer of the pancreas

His findings are supported by a separate study of cancer deaths among Seventh Day Adventists, a religion with even stricter dietary regulations and bans on smoking and drinking, done by Dr. Roland L. Phillips of Loma Linda University at Loma Linda, Calif. Phillips, a Seventh Day Adventist, found that the cancer death rate for Seventh Day Adventists in California is 50 to 70 per cent lower — depending upon the site — than the cancer death rate for the entire state.

These findings lend increasing weight to arguments that lifestyle — as well as smoking, drinking and dietary habits — plays an important but still unknown role in determining whether a person will die of cancer.

Both the Mormons and the Seventh Day Adventists place great emphasis on good health habits. They both stress eating a well balanced diet, including the use of unrefined grains and fresh fruits and vegetables. Most Seventh Day Adventists are vegetarians, while Mormons practice moderation in the eating of meat. Mormons try to get a good deal of exercise, and few of them are overweight.

Mormons also emphasize strong family life, and Dr. James O. Mason, a physician who is commissioner of health service for the Mormon church headquarters in Salt Lake City, said that marriages are considered to be made for "eternity."

"Maybe man's emotional status is of greater importance than we have thought," said Mason. "Maybe the extra bit of peace, quiet and harmony in some of our homes is good for physical as well as emotional health.

Enstrom, who is neither a Mormon nor a Seventh Day Adventist, credits the lifestyle of the two religions with reducing the incidence of cancer deaths.

Other cancer experts aren't sure what causes the difference in death rates between Mormons and Seventh Day Adventists and the rest of the country. But Dr. Marvin Schneiderman of the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda said the lower death rates "are not normal."

The Mormon Church, formally known as the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, has about 2.2 million members in the U.S. Most of them are in Utah, where they make up 73 per cent of the state's population. There are 400,000 Mormons in California. Enstrom became interested in studying Mormons when he noticed that the cancer death rate in Utah is the lowest of any state in the nation — about 75 per cent of the national cancer death rate.

He found the differences between Mormons and the rest of the country even more striking when he studied Utah County, near Provo, Utah, which is 85 per cent Mormon. Its cancer death rate is 65 per cent of the national rate.

Moreover, cancer death among Mormons in Utah is about two-thirds that of the cancer death rate of non-Mormons in the state.

To make sure that there is not something in the environment of Utah that caused the difference in the cancer death rate, Enstrom began studying Mormons in California, using church records.

The California study, which used church members only, instead of including non-Mormons who lived in Utah, produced even more striking figures. The cancer death rates were half of those for the California general population, and that proportion continues for causes not usually associated with tobacco or alcohol.

Enstrom based his conclusion on a study of the 800 Mormon cancer deaths in Utah County over the past 20 years, 1,200 Mormon cancer deaths for the state of Utah in one year and 600 cancer deaths among California Mormons in the past two years.

Besides their ban on the use of tobacco and alcohol, their low consumption of coffee, tea and stimulant drugs and their moderate dietary habits, Enstrom thinks that the Mormons' emphasis on exercise, enough sleep and keeping thin contributes to their low cancer death rate.

But Mason, Mormon health commissioner, believes there may be something spiritual involved. "The church teaches that the spirit and the body are related and that the body is the temple of God," he said.

Other religions also emphasize spiritual values, but studies in New York City have shown that Roman Catholics, Jews and members of the major protestant faiths have the same cancer death rates as the rest of the country.

Smoking has been firmly linked to cancers of the lung and larynx, and it has been cited that alcohol is a contributing factor in cancer of the stomach.

Alcohol has been associated by some studies with cancer of the esophagus and cancer of the gastrointestinal tract.

Gas Crunch Hurts Tree Fertilization

SEATTLE (AP) — The greening of America has been slowed somewhat by the energy crisis, especially in the forest products industry, an industry spokesman says.

William Larson, executive director of the Washington Forest Protection Association, said the national shortage and increased price of natural gas has adversely affected programs to accelerate timber growth with the use of fertilizer.

Shortages have caused fertilizer prices to skyrocket to the point where costs today may not be matched by the future return on increased timber production, the industry spokesman said in a news release.

Large-scale aerial fertilization, pioneered in the Northwest about six years ago, has shown great promise as a method of increasing forest yields, he said. A recent study indicated such fertilization increases growth 15 to 25 per cent.

Bank Guard Kills 2 Youths

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A bank security guard shot and killed two 17-year-old boys here Friday night after they had forced him into his car at gunpoint.

Authorities said James E. Roper, a guard at a downtown bank, pulled a gun from his pocket and shot the youths as they began driving way.

Police identified the youths as Paul William Young Jr., Louisville, who was driving at the time and William A. Ellis Jr., Louisville.

Police said the car crashed into a telephone pole following the shooting.

Roper was treated at a local hospital for a gunshot wound in the arm received in the scuffle and released.

STREAKERS DIVIDE MILITANTS

BOMBAY (CP) — Streaking has invaded the troubled campus of Bombay University and the main beneficiaries appear to be the university authorities.

Ever since a group of masked streakers marched through the grounds of St. Xavier's College chanting "Down With Naked repression," militant students have been debating whether the practice is a legitimate protest weapon.

Streaking was denounced by many students, particularly women, as vulgar and un-Indian. Communists and other leftists termed it a bourgeois weapon. "A dirty capitalist trick designed to divide the ranks of militant youth," said Jimmy Bharucha, a Communist leader. "It is time to pause in our struggle for student rights and consider the means we are adopting."

A survey indicated that 80 per cent of the student body opposed the practice but the pro streaking minority was equally vehement.

"There is nothing wrong with it," said Thomas Fernandez, a bearded science student. "Those who oppose streaking are hypocrites, for they secretly enjoyed the spectacle. I know of half a dozen so-called Maoists who cheered the streakers."

A girl who condemned streaking as an "insult to women," received a handwritten note saying: "Keep your mouth shut if you don't want to find yourself streaking against your wishes."

Falklands Dispute Boils

By The Associated Press

Inhabitants of the Falkland Islands want to launch an investigation of reports that oil lies beneath or around this British crown colony in the Atlantic Ocean about 350 miles off Southern Argentina.

The Falkland Islands legislature has voted to ask Britain to allow an international oil consortium to make a search. But Britain is said to be wary of taking such steps since Argentina renewed its claims to the island colony of 1,900 people, known to the Argentines as Islas Malvinas.

The Falklands were taken over by Britain in 1833, and a dispute with Argentina over sovereignty has been brewing ever since. The Buenos Aires government stepped up its claim several months ago when rumors of oil began to circulate.

Many Falklanders see oil royalties or income from exploration operations as a solution to the hard times now existing. The Falklands' only products are wool and mutton, and international prices for them are low.

The issue took on new importance when Ashland Oil Canada Ltd. applied to Britain for concessions on behalf of a consortium. The request was set aside for consideration as a number of others have in the past few years.

British authorities on the islands have warned the Falkland legislature to use caution in sparking any investigation and to bear in mind the sovereignty issue.

Informants said after the legislative council voted to seek an investigation that a seismic study costing about $2 million and lasting 18 months would first be necessary. They said results would be shared with the British government.

Four years ago the only access between the Flaklands and the mainland was by a monthly boat. There was no direct telegraph service to Argentina and no telephone connection, although these existed with Britain. Then the British and Argentines signed and agreement to develop trade and communications. Argentina built a temporary airstrip at Port Stanley and telegraph and telephone lines were set up.

THIRD PARTY PICKETING ALLOWED, BOARD RULES

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board has ruled that if a third party begins to assist a struck employer a union may legitimately picket the third party.

It was the first clear ruling by the board on how it will handle allied picketing a section in the revamped labor code.

Board chairman Paul Weiler laid down the guidelines in a case involving Surrey municipality, Haul-Away Disposal Ltd., B and B Trucking Ltd. and Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Weiler said that a union has the right to strike an employer to bring economic pressure to bear to gain a contract.

He also held an employer has the right to keep functioning so as to resist union pressure.

"But if, in doing so, the employer utilizes the active assistance of a third party, the latter will be exposed to certain risks."

He said secondary employers who are uninvolved in the primary dispute are protected by the law from picketing by the striking union.

"However, once a third party begins to assist the struck employer in reducing the impact of the strike, it loses its neutrality, and the union may legitimately train its picketing weapon at the premises of this ally as well."

In the Surrey case, Haul-Away has contracted to haul garbage for the municipality, but when civic workers went on strike, Haul-Away was forced to look for an alternate dumping ground because the municipal dumping ground was being picketed.

Haul-Away then began taking garbage to an excavation on B and B Trucking premises. CUPE then picketed B and B and disrupted the company's business.

Weiler said under the labor code, CUPE was entitled to follow that operation with its

Nostalgia is a Booming Industry

By RONALD THOMSON

LONDON (AP) — They dance the tango in Zurich, sing Victorian music-hall ballads in London, watch operettas in Vienna, dine in Paris restaurants with decor from the 1920s.

Girls in Brussels sport the bell-shaped hats their grandmothers wore. In Bonn and Berlin there's a rush on curved, quilted sofas and other furniture from the turn of the century.

Nostalgia is not just a boom in Western Europe; it's an industry, tuned to the longing for a world that seems to have vanished—if it ever existed.

Sociologists say the yearning for older, more stable values arises from the perplexities and fears of the 1970s.

"People want to get away from scary inflation, crazily changing patterns of society and horrifying prospects of atomic war," said David Simpson, a college history lecturer in southern England.

"Every time there's an increase in the price of gasoline they wish they were back in the times of the pony and trap. What they tend to forget is that comparatively few people then had any transport of their own. Some of the supposedly good things about the good old days were pretty bad."

A beaded dress made in 1922 fetched $65. Bidders paid hard cash for squeaky phonograph records of King George VI's coronation in 1937, an ostrich-feather fan, a stuffed bird, and a bunch of dried flowers under a glass dome.

One of BBC television's most popular series is The Good Old Days, which recreates the atmosphere of the Victorian music hall with an audience in extravagant outfits singing the ballads of long ago. There's a two-year waiting list to get in the audience.

The Second World War exerts an unending fascination. A concise history of the war was top of the British best-selling list for much of 1974. Colditz, a TV drama series about life in one of Nazi Germany's most formidable fortresses for prisoners of war, has been repeated twice within a year.

In Paris, 27-year-old fashion designer Daniel Ebret said nostalgia always follows economic crises and leads to undesirable conservatism in dress.

"There is no search for new ideas, just a return to past standards," he said. "The woman is dressed in an extremely feminine way. She cannot run, get into a car comfortably, even walk comfortably.

In Vienna, one movie theatre thrives on films at least 15 or 20 years old. The Volksoper stages sellout performances of the "Golden Operetta" era of the late 1920s. Youngsters are among the most enthusiastic fans.

Austrian book stores report major sales of works about the long-collapsed Hapsburg Empire, a source of instant nostalgia in Vienna.

When West Germans talk of the good old days, they mostly mean the era of Kaiser Wilhelm before the First World War, not Hitler's Third Reich.

The Hitler period between 1933 and 1945 rarely counts for nostalgia buffs. Last year Hamburg publisher John Jahr began issuing bi-weekly magazines on the history of the Third Reich. The first of 52 editions sold 360,000 copies. By the end of the year the circulation was down to 140,000.

Walter Kaiser, who runs Zurich's largest school for ballroom dancing, said students want to learn the tango and other routines regarded as highly dated only a few years ago.

Dr. Joshua Bierer, one of London's top psychiatrists, said the nostalgia boom is "a sign of health." It means, that people are striving for stability and "the intensity of these longings for the past will bring about a future better than anything we have known before."

WCB Lays Charges After Electrocution

NANAIMO — The Workers Compensation Board has laid charges against a Victoria company and two of its employees as a result of a fatal industrial accident last October.

The charge of operating a crane within 10 feet of a high tension electric wire, contrary to WCB regulations has been laid against Chew Excavating Ltd. of Victoria; crane operator Alan Ackerman and his supervisor Robert Crawford. Crawford has also been charged with not providing proper instruction to employees about not taking undue risks on the construction site.

Richard Jankowski, 28, of Parskville, was killed by electric shock while installing pipe in a trench on a road near the Harewood Dam in Nanaimo.

Jankowski was apparently guiding the pipe into the trench when the boom of the crane holding the pipe touched an electric wire, sending the current down the pipe Jankowski was holding.

Court appearance is expected in early April.

Now In Force

LONDON (Reuter) — An international convention banning the use, production and possession of biological weapons came into force this week. The anti-germ warfare convention was negotiated at the Geneva Disarmament Conference and agreement on it was reached in 1972. It was signed April 10, 1973 by Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union — the three depository powers — and has since been ratified by more than 40 countries.

Comic Strip Creator and Hero

Ace Unknown Here

TORONTO (CP) — Major Dan Cooper is a square-jawed Canadian Forces pilot who speaks Turkish, German, French, Portuguese, Dutch, Croatian, Hebrew, Arabic and a few other languages.

He hasn't learned English yet.

Major Dan is a creation of Belgian comic-strip artist Albert Weinberg and for 16 years has been a hero of youngsters in 24 papers in Europe and Asia Minor.

Weinberg, 47, was in Toronto Thursday on a Halifax-to-Winnipeg tour gathering material for new adventures of Major Cooper.

Cooper was born 21 years ago on Weinberg's drawing board. He has battled spies, with little violence, flown in aerobatic teams and occasionally embraces his one true love, Randi, a Norwegian blonde.

Cooper's personality was based partly on the career of George Buzz Beurling, an RCAF flyer from Verdun, Que., who was a Canadian fighter ace of the Second World War. Later, he was killed on a mercenary mission for Israel.

The artist gave Cooper an English-speaking Canadian father and a French-Canadian mither and sent him to McGill University.

He made him a squadron leader in the RCAF to start with but when that organization became part of the integrated forces, Weinberg changed his uniform and gave him the rank of major.

Weinberg, who says his income this year will be around $80,000, puts Cooper into books after his cartoons have been used by papers. He says about six million books have been sold.

Licensed Brothels Eyed

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A bill allowing communities to legalize prostitution has passed its first hurdle in the Alaska state legislature.

The legislature's commerce committee released a measure Wednesday sponsored by its chairman, Bob Bradley of Anchorage, for further review by the judiciary committee chairman, Ketchikan Democrat Terry Gardiner.

The measure would allow local governments with police power to legalize prostitution on licensed premises. It also would require communities to adhere to health and inspection rules adopted by the department of health and social services.

Bradley said the bill was aimed at the problem of "uncontrolled, unregulated and untaxed criminal prostitution."

The bill noted prostitution will continue regardless of state law. And it said: "It is in the best interest of the state to authorize a maximum of self-government in this area and protect the health of its citizens by comprehensive regulatory measures."

The measure would require licensing of prostitutes and premises where prostitution is practised under regulations adopted by the commerce department. Only those persons 19 years or older would be issued licences. The bill also stipulates that an individual could not hold an interest in more than one licence or licensed premise.

The commerce department would be authorized to adopt regulations "prohibiting the formation of monopolies or licensed premises in which prostitution is practised."

The measure also would outlaw soliciting or procuring except within a licensed place of prostitution.

Celsius Starts Tuesday

OTTAWA (CP) — I Love You a Hectolitre may never replace I Love You a Bushel and a Peck on the all-time hit parade, but next Tuesday a man named Celsius will be available to inspire popular song writers.

On April Fool's Day — like it or lump it — Canadians take their first big step in converting to the metric system from the old imperial weights and measures, a legacy of British ancestry. Part of it is the Celsius temperature scale. The entire metric conversion job will take until 1980.

From April 1 onward a warm spring day will be about 20 degrees above zero, not because March went out like a lion, but because the weather office will no longer use the familiar Fahrenheit temperature figures.

We owe it all to Anders Celsius, a Swedish astronomer, who lived from 1701 to 1744. He decided that the logical way to measure temperature was with a scale of 100 equal units or degrees between the freezing and boiling points of water.

First called the centigrade scale, it now carries the Celsius name, after its inventor. Freezing, which is 32 degrees Fahrenheit, becomes zero Celsius. The boiling point, 212 degrees Fahrenheit, is 100 degrees Celsius.

The federal metric commission, responsible for the conversion program, says public usage is voluntary and it can only "encourage" radio and television stations to give Celsius readings. However, beginning April 1 all public weather forecasts will be issued with Celsius temperatures only.

The Canadian Press and its subsidiary, Broadcast News, which relay the weather forecasts to most newspapers and broadcasting stations, will distribute reports in the form they are received from the weather office, with temperatures stated only in Celsius.

CP news stories on the weather in Canada and abroad will also use Celsius only.

Reporting temperature in both Celsius and Fahrenheit readings is frowned upon by the metric commission, which sees it creating unnecessary confusion.

"Universal experience proves that a dual system does not work," says Frank Rousseau, a commission official. "Look at England. It's been 10 years since they began their conversion and because of the dual system they are still having problems."

The target date for complete conversion in Britain has been extended two years until 1977.

The commissioners have set out some benchmarks to help Canadians with their adjustment. They point out that 35 degrees Celsius, for example, comfortable days when the air-conditioning tends to break down from overwork. In fact, 45 degrees Celsius is the highest temperature ever recorded in Canada.

Twenty-five degrees, on the other hand, could be a warm, lazy summer day. Twenty degrees is normal room temperature. Minus 10 is good skating weather and at minus 20 you tend to walk rather briskly. At 40 below the two temperature scales cross, minus 40 Celsius being the same as minus 40 Fahrenheit.

Over the next two years the weather office will change all its measurement units to metric. Ken Park, metric information director, says rain and snowfall will be given in millimetres and centimetres rather than inches starting next September.

Atmospheric pressure will be switched to metric in April, 1976, and wind velocity will be given in kilometres from April, 1977.

But changes at the weather office are only part of the extensive conversion that will affect everyone as Canada joins the 90 per cent of the world already using the metric system.

Some changes already have occurred, largely unnoticed, especially in the realm of packaging. Toothpaste, for example, now comes measured in millilitres in only five sizes, compared with about 30 package sizes before.

This fall sugar and some other goods will be packaged in metric sizes. Sample highway signs in kilometres already are up in most provinces.

Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie has announced a new loan program to help small businessmen, including farmers and fishermen, to convert their operations to metric. A storekeeper, for example, will incur expenses when he has to convert his measuring scales.

Three sites have been chosen for pilot projects to investigate the problems involved in this type of changeover. They are Sherbrooke, Que., Peterborough, Ont., and Kamloops, B.C. Larger organizations such as Ontario Hydro are considered large enough to absorb the costs involved.

Public interest in the federal government's conversion program has been considerable, says Mr. Pack. "We get more letters than IBM, an average of about 20,000 a month."

A lot of the correspondence is critical but many write "just to ask how they can adapt to the new system." Public concern is understandable, the commission says. Metric conversion becomes a complex activity involving most facets of life from textbooks in schools to speedometers in automobiles.

Speedometers offer perhaps the smallest problem. A metric spokesman said those in 1976 cars will be converted to kilometres only or in combination with the mileage scale. Manufacturers are expected to offer transparent overlays with a milometre reading for use in older cars. They may cost about $1.50.

A Stylish Roundelay

A Film Review
By Nora Hutchison

Shampoo is the fastest, funniest American comedy I've seen in a long time. It's a raunchy bedroom farce centered around a handsome hairdresser named George whose cuts, comb-outs and all-over body massage are the delight of Beverly Hill's luckiest ladies. The story is such a natural for the movies that its originality comes as a surprise. But we're luckier for it because producer Warren Beatty, director Hal Ashby and scenarist Robert Towne have created a flippant social comedy that makes its points in a stylish and understated manner.

George is a fantastic creature — a by-product of L.A.'s supercharged hustle who rides to his assignations on a motorcycle with his hair blower fucked in his belt like a six-shooter. To the rich, idle women of Beverly Hills, he's the compleat lover — terrific in bed and terrific with their hair. He's so turned on by what he does for his clients and so caught up in the complicated juggling act that is his love life that he's constantly on the move.

The movie focuses on the 40 hours in his life (from Election Eve, November 4, 1968 to the morning of November 6) when his balancing act falls apart. George's Don Juan number is beginning to affect his work — "I've been cutting too much hair lately and I'm losing my concepts." His dream, he tells his current girlfriend (Goldie Hawn), is to settle down and open his own shop. Financing, however, is a problem — his references aren't bankable. So he talks about loans with the husband of on of his most seductive customers (Lee Grant) in between commuting from her bed to that of her husband's mistress (Julie Christie). The coupling and uncoupling goes on throughout Election Day and into the evening until, at a pre-dawn election celebration, George's indiscretions are exposed. His lovers regroup, form new alliances, and prepare for the new era, leaving George behind.

The Election Eve setting expands the movie's scope significantly. The reference points of that period — the Nixon-Agnew campaign, miniskirts, strobe lights, Beatles' music — provide a framework in which to contain and amplify the action. And the election itself, characterized as it was by ruthless ambition and lack of restraint, is an ideal metaphor for the kind of lifestyle lived by George's clients, lovers and business associates.

George operates in a tiny, select society of the very rich where casual sexual encounters are the only diversion from boredom. Everyone around him is constantly on the make, plotting variations on the mating game, keeping all the possibilities open. They're working so hard at being upwardly-mobile that they live in a constant state of anxiety.

As George's women, Lee Grant, Julie Christie and Goldie Hawn are really good. They're highstrung, passionate sugar-babies who thrive on the dangerous excitement their carnal roundelays create. But it's Warren Beatty's performance as George that holds the comedy together and makes it work. Beatty is a solid actor who is not afraid of his reputation. His good looks and his much publicized affairs off-screen only reinforce the fun of the occasional scenes in which he is assumed to be gay, and that joke is integral to the plot's concept anyway. He lets us see George getting a little seedy, becoming a little worse for wear so that we can understand his urge to settle down. His women love him but they leave him because he doesn't know how to function in their society — he's too generous and too full of expectations they've forgotten how to fulfil. George is the romantic fool in a crowd of rapacious realists.

Beatty and his girls, Hawn and Christie

'Chiller' To Open Play Series

Plays which helped establish some of the outstanding actors of our century are the target of Camosun College Theatre Arts director Maurice Harty for an up-coming series of productions.

To introduce the series, he has chosen a notable chiller, Night Must Fall, by Welsh playwright Emlyn Williams.

Now in rehearsal, Night Must Fall will be presented at Open Space April 24-May 4 at 8 p.m. There will be matinees on both Saturdays and the Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

Harty says he intends to present at least one play each season which has been important in its time, under the general tag, Plays of Yesteryear.

"Plays chosen will still relate to and enthrall contemporary audiences," he says. "The concept is not necessarily to present the classics but to give audiences a chance to see plays which established certain reputations."

Since its first performance 40 years ago at the Duchess Theatre in London, the Night Must Fall has been presented in every major capital in the western world and twice been made into a film.

The Old Man Still Has His Stuff

By LEONARD FEATHER

ROLLING STONE

LOS ANGELES — What generation gap? "Well," says Darius Brubeck, "it's true I was beginning to sense a minor one — between my 27 years, which is sort of going-on-30, and Dan's 19."

Darius, the eldest, who plays electric keyboards, was speaking of his brother the drummer. He was half-kidding; the gap he's usually asked about it, of course, the supposed one between legendary pianist Dave, now 54, and his three sons who have become a quasi-permanent part of his tour.

The generational interplay has been working for a year and a half, to the advantage of all four Brubecks. In 1973 the format was a little confused. Brubeck pere has his own rhythm section, plus the saxes of Gerry Mulligan and-or Paul Desmond: Chris, now 22, led a rock combo; Darius had his avant-garde group. At various points "Uncle Dave" would mix it up with an assortment of the kids. Then it seemed a stilted comedy of eras.

★ ★ ★

"But," says Dave, "Darius came to me with an idea for putting all three groups into one. We stopped using my own musicians except for special occasions; we dropped the rock group but incorporated two of its members — Chris himself and Peter "Madcat" Ruth, the harmonica player — into Darius's ensemble.

"We usually open with some of the old quartet things, so the audience right away is satisfied there's not going to be any huge departure from what they've been used to for 20 years."

The implication clearly was that the father attracts primarily his own people. Yet the elder Brubeck hastily added, "Gradually it's becoming 80 or 90 per cent high school and college age, with the rest of the crowd old, hard-core Brubeck fans."

That, at least, is how it was the previous night before a capacity crowd at the College of Marin. This winter evening at UCLA's Royce Hall the proportions were reversed, with most of the audience drawn from the suit-shirt-tie ranks.

Danny Brubeck, as the most naturally jazz oriented of the sons, is the most at ease. "This mixture works out great for me," he said. "I get into a kind of futuristic thing with Darius's group and a more traditional thing with the whole family" so it covers all areas. I studied with Joe Morello — who was Dad's drummer for all those years — and also for a while with Alan Dawson, who took over from Joe, so I have a solid foundation.

"Working with this group, you have that extra push, a sense of mutual prodding; I'd say all three of us have a great advantage in our heritage and our setting."

Darius Brubeck, who unlike Chris and Dan never went to music school, seems to have learned rapidly from the interacting with his father. "He has a whole way of playing that I couldn't come close to reproducing," says the eldest son. "He was wise in not teaching me how to do what he did. If I asked him a question about this or that chord, he'd explain it away from the keyboard and I'd have to figure out how to reproduce it. So I developed technically in a really different way from my brothers."

★ ★ ★

Chris Brubeck is less certain about the situation. "I'm a rock musician and this certainly didn't turn out to my rock advantage. It's inhibiting me, that's for sure. Sometimes I wish I was two or three people, because I love jazz, but I really love rock. There's some rock influence coming into our thing now, but in my head I hear even more. On the other hand, I don't want to make waves while everything's going so good."

Chris's dual nature has never been more apparent. He grew up as a Beatles booster, aspiring to sing his own compositions. He succeeded, writing all but one of the tunes on Secret Sauce, the album just released by his rock group, Sky King. Yet in the multi-Brubeck format, when he switches from electric bass (as a member of the all-Brubeck quartet which usually opens the program) to trombone (which he plays as a member of Darius's seven-piece group while Dave takes a break), his blowing has an it's-not-my job-man quality.

Nevertheless, alongside Perry Robinson's funky, pseudo-Pee Wee Russell clarinet, Jerry Bergonzi's Coltrane-derived tenor and Madcat's multi-influenced harmonica playing, even Chris Brubeck has his moments of inspiration. When the interaction at UCLA was most successful, it stemmed from the suitability of the material: "Earthrise," an exercise in space music, found Chris in a smooth relaxed groove.

Despite the sloppiness, the applause of recognition went to all the old warhorses — "Unsquare Dance," "Brandenburg Gate" and the inevitable "Take Five" encore. The good stage-to-hall-and-back vibes were the product of a sense — among the younger musicians and their listeners alike — that the old man still had his stuff together. It seems that the generational cross-pollination works advantageously for all.

What is still missing is the record sales. From a position at the top of the pop charts in 1960, Dave Brubeck has slid to a point where he defensively points out, "In a recent 'Billboard' we were on the jazz chart at number 38 out of a list of 40. But I'd say we were among the most genuinely jazzy of the 40; certainly among the top three.

Having looked at Brubeck from both sides now (I was out there when Dave and his definitive Quartet were just a bit older than his sons are now), it's both pleasing that the experiment is going as well as it is and doubtful that Darius, Dan or Chris will ever have the impact which led to a "Time" cover story and millions of record sales for their father. It all boils down to a question of whether a musical family can simultaneously go home again and visit a new planet. Dave Brubeck and Co. may not be able to do both, but they're having a damn good time trying.

Deadline Set For Letters To C.R.T.C.

Additional information has been made available with regard to the possible allocation of TV channel 10 in this region.

Anyone who feels strongly that his chanel should be reserved for a CBC station in Victoria, or other form of public rather than private facility, has a chance to affect the decision of the CRTC at its meeting in Ottawa, April 22.

It was suggested in a column on the subject in last Saturday's Times that letters expressing such opinions should be written to the CRTC.

According to the Association for Public Broadcasting in B.C., such letters must be in the mail by Friday, April 4 if they are to receive consideration.

The letters should be addressed to Pierre Juneau, Chairman, Canadian Radio-Television Commission, 100 Metcalfe Street, Ottawa, K1A 08C.

Markham a Must-See Show

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Move over all theatrical organizations in the city, or at any rate be prepared for some stiff competition.

The Victoria Actors Association arrived on stage Thursday at the McPherson with the brightest, most consistent comedy performance seen this season.

Granted Move Over Mrs. Markham is no classic comedy. It has no ingenious twists of plot or rare characters. But for what it is — a racey, cheekily sophisticated comedy — and for the purpose it was chosen for which was purely entertainment, it couldn't be better.

Mrs. Markham came close to filling the theatre on opening night and there was no doubt that the audience was richly entertained. Laughter was continuous, loud, and frequently spattered with involuntary bursts of applause.

This was ensemble playing between actors who were enjoying it to the hilt. It was flawed momentarily, but far above average in its total result.

Design and execution of the set — the Philip Markhams' smart London flat — is by Garnet Fay. Highly satisfactory, it resolves the problem of providing two rooms and a necessarily bizarre decor without creating a conflict of difficulties for the actors.

To this music John Britt enters as the arty young interior designer who is "doing over" the flat. Picking up the rhythm he minces about the stage providing an irresistible pace-setter for the opening bars of the play.

Britt keeps throughout, almost consistently, the high level established by the more comedy-experienced members of the cast, plays into the group well and makes highly effective use of his several hilarious entrances.

Much, of course, is due to Purdy's experienced and comedy-wise direction. He has blocked the play in clean, simple lines, used much invention in the stage business and has accurately gauged the high points.

Except for a slightly sagging tempo patch near the start of act one, the play moves at an animated pace throughout.

The point of the proceedings is that everyone with a romantic episode simmering in the background, plots to make use of the Markhams' flat that evening while the owners are out.

Complications include arrival of spinster author Olive Harriet Smythe, prepared to offer publication of her latest "Bow-wow b o k — they're best sellers — to Markham's firm. If they stay away from pornography.

Colin Skinner as the bookish and sensually obtuse half of the firm is superb, making the most of every spoken and unspoken chance for comic effect.

The other half, Don Juanish Henry Lodge, is debonairly and smoothly played by Jack Droy.

Carolyn Stephenson, Janet Sehior and Sheila Litt are well cast, each a clearly etched personality but achieving as a group, balance and interplay. Mary Bissenden and Donna Heighes are whistle-inspiring support players and director Purdy does a cameo bit in a manner that makes one wish it were something more than a bit.

There will be one more performance of this "must-see" show, tonight at 8.

PRINTS ON SHOW

Currently on view at the Bau-Xi Gallery, 827 Fort, is a showing of prints and drawings by fourth year University of Victoria art student, Wendy Dobreiner.

An accomplished printmaker, Dobreiner has had exhibitions in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, Guelph and Sackville, as well as works in the international print shows in Yugoslavia and Britain.

She has received a Canada Council grant for 1974 and an Ontario Arts Council grant.

Dobreiner was born in Vancouver and has also studied at York University in Toronto. Her father John is at present chairman of the fine arts department at UVic.

The works on show until April involve mechanical and human images and have a strong humorous vein.

Brain Damage Award $150,000

A 13-year-old Vancouver Island boy this week was awarded damages of $150,000 for brain injuries suffered when struck by a vehicle when he was 3½ years old.

Mr. Justice E. Davie Fulton of the B.C. Supreme Court in Vancouver made the award to Robert Kenneth (Robbie) Young, who was injured July 7, 1965, at Cowichan Bay.

Through his father, Robert Douglas Young, he sued Tim Leslie Spelman of Langford, driver of the vehicle involved and Jufi Drywall Ltd. as owners of the vehicle.

The boy suffered brain damage in the mishap and at age 13 is in the equivalent of grade 3.

Mr. Justice Fulton said in his judgment that the boy would not have gone much beyond the grade 4 level when he is 16 years of age.

The judge said liability for the accident was admitted and that he considered the $150,000 award appropriate for a loss of potential earnings, pain and suffering and the loss of enjoyment of the amenities of life.

WASHINGTON — Mstislav Rostropovich, the Russian cellist, has accepted the post of music director and conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, beginning with the season of 1977-78. He will succeed Antal Dorati, who may remain associated with the orchestra as "principal" guest conductor.

The appointment of Rostropovich, perhaps the most famous Russian musician in the world, comes only six months after he and his wife, soprano Galina Vishnevskaya, and their two daughters left Moscow in protest against the Soviet Union's lack of artistic freedoms. Vishnevskaya was, until restricted by Russian officials, the leading soprano of Moscow's Bolshoi Opera.

LOS ANGELES — Academy Award-winning director William Friedkin has filed a $5.8-million suit against Warner Bros. Inc. for money he says is due him for The Exorcist.

Friedkin, who won an Oscar for The French Connection, filed the suit in United States Superior Court Thursday, alleging breach of contract and fiduciary duty, fraud and usury.

The suit says the movie has grossed $90 million to date and netted $40 million. Friedkin said his contract called for a fee of $325,000 and 10 per cent of the film's net profits.

He contended the $5.8-million figure is conservative because a full accounting might put the claim higher.

Huei, 56, is now growing back his long hair and beard because he said it felt more comfortable and because he has agreed to star in a movie about his jungle life.

"I still don't know what is my role in the film," Lee said. "But all my grandchildren advised me not to play a bad guy. They watch TV all the time and they just hate the bad guy on the screen."

It happened after his mother, Mrs. William Davis, saw Rogby the Robot on a television show and called Arlan Van Os, 18, of Jenisen, Mich., who had designed it for his high school science project.

She told Arlan about Chuck, who has a heart defect that can't be cured unless a mechanical heart is perfected.

After a short conversation, Chuck was a robot-owner and Arlan was packing for a week's vacation at this town near Atlanta.

"Does it make ice cream," Chuck asked after Arlan and Rogby arrived.

"No, but I'll work on it," Arlan promised.

Mixed Fraud Verdict

LONDON (CP) — John Sullivan, Montreal real estate agent who says he was recruited into a $500,000 swindle under threats of violence, has been found not guilty of conspiring to handle the stolen goods.

Ronald St. Germain, Montreal accountant, was found guilty on a similar charge Wednesday, along with Londoner Frank Brockley, 45, and they will be sentenced April 14.

The jury of eight women and four men earlier found Eugene Lastowiecki, 60, a European-born Canadian, and London businessman Mathew Drysdale, 46, not guilty.

Later Thursday the jury returned a guilty verdict on William McCallum, a business partner with Drysdale, after more than 10 hours of deliberation. He too will be sentenced April 14.

The trial, which started early last November, concerned an international fraud in which a bogus cheque was drawn against a Montreal branch of the Royal Bank of Canada and then processed through a Dublin bank and then a Barclay's bank here.

More than half the money was collected and sent to Canada and has not been recovered.

FEELINGS BACK IN SEVERED ARM

EDMONTON (CP) — A three-year-old Bluffton, Alta., girl whose left arm was rejoined just above her elbow after it was severed in an accident about eight months ago now can flex her fingers and reach above her head.

"I'm very happy at this stage," says the surgeon for Teresa Bakx, whose arm was severed by a hay mower on the family farm.

"I never thought it would turn out this well," her father Hubert said as Teresa sat in a doctor's office.

"She has started to pick up things like a piece of cake, paper or a pen."

Within hours of the accident, Teresa and the severed arm were rushed 60 miles to a hospital here where University of Alberta surgeons were waiting with new equipment and techniques developed in San Francisco which would allow them to reconnect the microscopic blood vessels in her arm.

Both ends of the arm were trimmed at the point of disconnection above the elbow. The bones were pinned back together and the veins were rejoined.

The chief surgeon, who has asked not to be identified, explained that the nerves had to grow back down to the fingertips.

LAST FLIGHT FROM DA NANG

Panic-Crazed Viets Mob Plane

SAIGON (Reuter) — South Vietnamese troops opened fire on each other in a panic-crazed scramble to board a United States airliner which arrived to pick up refugees from the beleaguered city of Da Nang today.

Government troops in trucks, jeeps and cars chased the chartered world airways jet around the airport as half a dozen Communist rockets landed on the runway and set several buildings ablaze, according to the pilot, Capt. Ken Healey of Oakland, Calif.

There were about 60 people in the baggage hold. Seven were in the wheel casing, of whom six walked away at the end of the flight. The seventh was carried off on a stretcher alive.

Unable to raise its wheels and with one wing-flap blasted away by a hand grenade thrown by a government soldier, the overloaded plane made it back to Saigon, Healey told reporters.

Two other planes had headed for Da Nang, but they turned back to Saigon because of the chaos at the airport. Flights had been cancelled Friday for the same reason.

Today's lone flight finally took off with 323 persons aboard, all but seven of them military personnel or their families, the pilot said.

Healey said the plane, designed to carry 150 passengers, was mobbed on the Da Nang runway wherever it stopped.

Several soldiers fired machine guns and pistols but crew members said they believed this was to aattract attention as there were no bullet-holes in the plane.

"Soliders were shooting at each other," Healey said. When the plane stopped, some of the soliders threw away their flak-jackets and helmets, tossed away their guns and scrambled onto the aircraft.

Others came aboard with their weapons, including grenades, but surrendered them to crew members at the door. The weapons were stacked in the cockpit and handed to security officials when the plane landed at Saigon airport.

People tried to cling to the outside of the aircraft but fell off as it rose over the city.

Healey said the aircraft door could not be closed properly during the flight as the weight of people pushing aboard had damaged it.

He said military vehicles were careening crazily around the airfield in pursuit of the plane. At one point a jeep loaded with 20 people collided with a motorscooter, overturning the jeep and leaving five people sprawled motionless on the ground.

As the pilot tried to keep the jet moving during its 20-minutes on the ground, the soldiers abandoned their vehicles on the runway and they sprinted to the open door.

One British cameraman scrambled onto the aircraft as it was beginning its take-off run but lost his balance trying to heave his film camera aboard and fell to the ground.

The plane landed in Saigon after a journey of nearly two hours because of the damage to the aircraft, Healey said. The 375-mile trip usually takes about 40 minutes.

One U.S. Boeing 727 touched down Friday at Da Nahg airport but took off almost immediately because of the chaotic situation. It did not take on passengers.

The U.S. and South Vietnamese governments were hoping to bring out 10,000 refugees a day by ship and plane from the threatened city. The evacuation by ship is continuing, a Saigon command spokesman said. The refugee airlift began Thursday when several hundred people were taken to areas further south.

Situation 'Hopeless'

Times News Services

SAIGON — Communist troops moved into Da Nang under cover of a heavy artillery barrage today, prompting military sources to call the situation in South Vietnam's second largest city "hopeless."

U.S. Army Chief of Staff Gen. Frederick Weyand visited government leaders and gave them assurances of President Ford's "strong support."

A U.S. statement said Weyand told President Nguyen Van Thieu the United States was firmly behind "the determined resistance of the people of South Vietnam to the massive invasion by a North Vietnamese expeditionary corps in flagrant and cynical disregard of the provison of the Paris agreement.

Bao Loc city, only 90 miles northeast of Saigon, was shelled and attacked at 7:15 a.m. according to an official announcement here, and lost only two hours later. The capital of Quang Nam province, Bao Loc lies astride a strategic road from the mountains to the south central seacoast areas where the Saigon government has been planning to relocate many of the million or more refugees from recently lost areas in the north.

Hoi An, the provincial capital of UANG Nam province, was attacked by Communist forces from three sides about 6 a.m. and overrun by 1 p.m. according to reliable but unofficial reports. The provincial capital is only about 20 miles south of Da Nang.

Cambodia Leaders Fleeing?

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH — As the No. 2 man on the list of prominent Cambodians marked for death by the Khmer Rouge left for Paris with his family today, reliable sources reported President Lon Nol will leave Tuesday for an official visit to Indonesia, Japan and the United States.

Political and diplomatic sources in beleaguered Phnom Penh are speculating whether the president will return to Cambodia or remain indefinitely outside the country without tendering his resignation.

The departure of Cheng Heng came as rebel forces stabbed into Phnom Penh's northern defence line. However, field reports later said the line was re-established.

A United States airlift of food and military supplies resumed after a 24-hour halt because of rebel fire on the airport.

Cheng Heng, who was chief of state after the coup ousting Prince Norodom Sihanouk in 1970, said at a news conference before his departure:

"I am going for medical treatment, not for political reasons. I am also leaving because I want to leave a good climate for our politicians."

Military informants said the Khmer Rouge insurgents pierced the defence line at Kap Srau, eight miles northwest of Phnom Penh. The sources added that Cambodian forces had pulled back about a mile and came under heavy mortar and artillery bombardment.

In Washington, Pentagon officials say U.S. arms shipments to Cambodia will stop in a few days because the money appropriated by Congress will have run out.

They said the Cambodian government has enough ammunition on hand to last an additional 10 days or two weeks.

Herring undergo checking and sorting

'Mad Scramble' Blamed In Herring Disasters

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Poor organization and too short a season are the main reason lives have been lost and 14 fishboats either sunk or capsized since the herring season started March 17.

Convinced of this Bill Hilborn, president of Oakland Industries Ltd. says the fisheries department, fish companies and the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union must get together and work out a solution.

"This is a disorganized fishery," Hilborn said, "The fisheries set a quota of 60,000 tons this year. There was a mad scramble, as a result of the strike, and the catch was as high as 44,000 tons in a few days.

"The end result is the boats are overloaded, trying to get there first — any bad weather and they go down like stones."

Apart from the loss of life and boats, Hilborn said the Canadian industry will lose out to competition because of the inferior quality of fish.

"The fish is arriving in such vast quantities at plants that the quality is deteriorating. It was the same case last year. It's really a roe (fish eggs) industry with Japan the buyer. Now, China is producing the best quality roe. It's a real problem industry."

Oakland Industries has just completed a modern plant on Montreal, going into production for the first time March 17.

Both Hilborn and Pat Keen, who is in charge of new production and quality control, feel the fisheries department should not raise the quota but extend the season to six or eight weeks in order to keep individual catches smaller, allowing total utilization of the fish.

"This way the boats would not get such large catches and spoil what, in effect, could be a good fishery," Keen said. "They would be landing top quality fish that could be totally used."

Under the pressure of the large catches, the plant is employing 200 people on a two-shift system for three weeks. Using a few

25 BABIES DIE IN WARD FIRE

RIJEKA, Yugoslavia (AP) — A fire snuffed out the lives of 25 newborn babies in a hospital maternity ward Friday, touching off wild scenes of anguish among parents and relatives.

One man who lost an infant son wailed outside the hospital: "For so many years we had waited for this child. We finally had him ... for a total of three days."

Officials said the fire in the Rijeka hospital was caused by human error and old, faulty wiring. In addition to those killed, three other babies are in critical condition, they said.

Hysteria broke out among mothers in a room next to the babies when they tried desperately to save the infants but couldn't, a hospital source said.

He said the roaring blaze sapped oxygen in the room and in the incubator, and that 20 babies suffocated and five died of burns.

At Vatican City, Pope Paul interrupted his Holy Week observance and said a special prayer for the victims of the Good Friday tragedy.

Outside the hospital, Milivoje Zamic, a father of one of the victims, said: "I try to fight back tears and console my wife and mother. When this our second child was born we cried like babies out of joy. It was only two days ago."

Today was proclaimed a day of mourning in Rijeka. Public events were cancelled, flags were at half staff and ship captains were to wail sirens in the port during the funeral for the victims, all less than a week old.

Cyclist Tunnel Shuttle

The British Columbia bicyclists will get a break from the provincial government beginning April 1 when a shuttle service through the lower mainland's Massey Tunnel starts operating.

The tunnel is on the route between Vancouver and the Tsawwassen ferry terminal.

Highways Minister Graham Lea said Thursday the shuttle consists of a van for passengers and a self-loading trailer which can carry up to eight bicycles.

"Initially, the shuttle will run at two-hour intervals between 10 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. seven days a week. this schedule will be reviewed periodically," Lea said.

The suggestion for a shuttle service through the tunnel was made by Emery Barnes (NDP—Vancouver Centre) who said he often rides his bicycle from Vancouver to Victoria.

Prison Guard Charged In Heroin Conspiracy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver men, one a local prison guard, will appear in provincial court today charged with conspiracy to import from Hong Kong 8½ pounds of pure heroin worth about $5.9 million on city streets.

The raid culminated a month-long investigation by the RCMP after the heroin was discovered Feb. 26 by Canada Customs officials hidden in a wooden crate.

The two-foot by four-foot box shipped from Hong Kong was destined for a Vancouver address and was being stored at the Ballentyne pier warehouse at the foot of Heatley Street.

Charged with conspiracy to import and traffic in heroin are William Louis Reisig, a prison guard for about seven months, and Clifford (Fook Hing) Jung.

Resig is also charged with possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

In another raid Friday, Vancouver police surrounded a truck on Jericho Beach at English Bay and found 75 pounds of marijuana valued at $36,000, scales and other equipment used to package and sell the drug in the beach.

Police arrested a man and a woman at the beach and later raided an apartment in the Kitsilano district where they seized another three pounds of the drug, more scales and arrested another two persons.

TIMES FEATURE FOR BIKE BUFFS

With the warmer, drier days of spring and summer ahead, a lot of bicycles which have been in storage or used infrequently during the winter will be back on the streets.

But there's a lot more to bicycling than just getting on and riding. A reasonable amount of care, maintenance and adjustment (particularly with the 10-speed variety) is necessary to get the most out of this healthful, enjoyable and economical sport.

To help out in this department, the Victoria Times is starting a 10-part series Monday with helpful tips for bicycle owners — tips that will save them a lot of unnecessary trips to the repair shop.

If you're a bike buff you won't want to miss "Cycling by Dou Langford" starting Monday in the Family Section of the Times.

Extortion Charge Laid

A 33-year-old man was charged in Victoria provincial court this morning with the attempted extortion of $100,000 from a Victoria bank manager Thursday.

James Archie Hancock of 1316 Rudlin was also charged with armed robbery of $571 from the Beacon Drive-In, 126 Douglas last Saturday.

Judge D. K. McAdam remanded Hancock in custody to Tuesday for election of trial method and plea.

Hancock was arrested 1 p.m. Thursday after a drama-packed hour during which an attempt was made to extort $100,000 from Vincent Fourt, manager of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch in the Hillside shopping plaza.

Victoria police said a man had phoned Fourt and told him to deliver the money or harm would be done to Fourt's 14-year-old daughter, Deanna.

Though Fourt phoned home and learned Deanna was there and in no apparent danger, police asked him to carry out the demands, which were to take the money in a package and drive to a phone booth in front of Memorial Arena where he would receive further instructions.

Police said Fourt found a note in the telephone booth which told him to drive to the third floor of the Bay Parkade and leave the car.

About 15 minutes passed, he said today, when he heard someone approach and open the door. A gloved hand then reached in to grab the package on the front seat.

"Don't make a move or you're dead," Bennett said he told the man, who let out a gasp. "He nearly fainted when he saw me."

The package did not contain $100,000, police said, but the amount was not disclosed.

Police said Hancock was not armed when arrested although a gun was later found similar to the one used in the Beacon Drive-In holdup.

The extortion bid was the third in Victoria in recent months. In each case the attempt has been unsuccessful.

'A Constant Hope We're Winning'

Felt a bit like our esteemed PM the other day.

Well, Mr. Trudeau was given the freedom of the City of London while in England, wasn't he?

And I was given the freedom of Brannan Lake. I was presented with a key (with a long cord and a pin attached) that would open any door. And I was grateful.

For there were many doors and behind them many questions waiting to be answered. And hadn't Duncan Mayor Ken Paskin called for the "full story" about what goes on at the Island Youth Centre there? But what is the full story Mayor Paskin? A reason to one man is an excuse to another.

All I know is I spent a long day there and met a lot of dedicated people trying their hardest to help a group of kids (sure, the staff well outnumbers the youngsters) most of whom don't particularly want to be helped and would rather be on the outside.

There is nothing to stop them being on the outside and it appears that this is Mayor Paskin's main complaint. In the 20 years since Brannan Lake was first opened and since it was completely remodelled and renamed Island Youth Centre in 1969, there have been runaways. And there have been incidents of vandalism in the community, some linked to those from the school.

But as acting administrator Jack Harris points out, "Whenever there is trouble, we are suspect. If only we were able to quote our success stories and tell of kids who were here once and have gone on to do well in their lives, I don't think the public would believe us."

"That's what keeps us going, a constant hope that we are winning," says Iva Woodward, Duncan-based regional director for the Department of Human Resources.

For the public, who hear only of the failures and the misdeeds, there is more often a feeling that they're losing.

John Noble, an official with the human resources department who was director at Brannan Lake for seven years, says many people in Duncan and Nanaimo have suggested that the Brannan Lake kids "shouuld have their heads shaved and be dressed in flourescent jackets, so they would be easily distinguishable in the community."

And, says Noble, residents within 10 miles of the institution used to complain it was "too nice for bad kids who shouldn't have a swimming pool and things other kids don't have." They believed "boys are being persuaded to commit crimes to get in there."

It is nice, too.

Nestled among tall trees on the shores of picturesque Brannan Lake in, beautiful country seven miles north of Nanaimo, the Youth Centre has a soccer field, tennis and lacrosse courts, miles of trails for hiking through the 164-acre grounds and of course the lake for swimming and boating in the summer. Under the instruction of Fred May, the boys themselves have built six canoes, three sailboats (including the masts) and two motor boats.

And, as well as several recreation rooms such as the library and billiards room, there is a big gymnasium and a fine indoor heated pool. The boys all learn woodwork and auto mechanics from Art Jones, who also runs a driver-training school.

All these things are of great value in preparing the youngsters for a return to society.

The pool, also used by retarded children from Nanaimo and Ladysmith and other groups, is "great therapy," says teacher Mike Yakelashek. "A kid can be very uptight and you take him into the pool and he really settles down."

But all these things are not the rights of the youngsters who go there.

Explained Joe Alexis, the former Trinidadian who is in charge of the program for boys from the Lower Mainland, the youngsters get points for good behavior and for good work and with the points they can buy time for such things as sailing or playing pool.

"It's all a privilege system," says Joe, "you have to earn these rights and privileges."

When I was there, several of the boys were cleaning up and getting ready to go home for the Easter break. But many were not and social worker Ike MacKay explained "they haven't earned their trip."

Ike, one of Canada's best-known soccer players, loves his job. "The kids are the best part of it," he says. And you can tell that the others feel the same way.

Take Walter Shogan, for example.

Walter is chief child care counsellor and has been in the job for 34 years, 14 years in Port Coquitlam and 20 at Brannan Lake, And his three senior counsellors, Dick Burdett, Len Bailey and Frank Chapman, have all been there "for years."

"Kids who come here have been through the mill," says Shogan, "most of them have forgotten how to live and our objective is to teach them everyday living again."

Under the over all administration of Harris, each of the program directors is responsible for his own department. There's Alexis, Joe Sasvari who runs the program for Vancouver Island youths, and principal Frank Murphy, who handles the Brannan Lake School for the Nanaimo School District.

And then there's Tom Williams.

Williams is in charge of the newly-opened Guthrie Centre for reception and assessment of youngsters. It is run as a completely separate unit and has five beds for boys and five for girls in a general assessment program that lasts about six weeks, and another four beds in an emergency 24-hour service to the community.

Some of the youngsters now attending the Youth Centre have been referred there from the Guthrie Centre. And all 20 of the day students — girls and boys — who attend the Brannan Lake junior-secondary school went through the Guthrie Centre.

The day students, says principal Murphy, are kids who have had difficulties in ordinary schools and have either dropped out or been kicked out.

"We pick them up right on their doorstep every day and take them home again, too. They aren't motivated enough to come themselves.

"These are kids with real problems," says Murphy, "the ordinary tough guy is being dealt with now in the community. Almost all the kids have a very poor self-concept. They hate themselves and they think everyone else hates them. They have an image that they are bad boys and they do everything they can to prove this. Unfortunately, they've been getting this message from society. That's the first thing we have to do, improve their self-concept."

"There is such a huge range in ability — from about Grade 2 to Grade 12 — that we have to set up an individual program for each student," explains Murphy.

"Their behavior is our first responsibility. People ask me what is our success rate and I tell them 100 per cent. Every boy who leaves here is better than when he arrived, some a little better, some a lot. But every boy changes and he changes for the better."

I talked to John, a 16-year-old from nearby Wellington who said he got in fights at his school and one day the principal said "take your books and get out!"

At first, John didn't like Brannan Lake School.

"I had trouble with some of the boys here, too," he said. "But after a while it was all right." Now he's all smiles and doesn't want to leave.

"I hope I won't have to go to another school, I like it here," said John.

Many don't like it, though.

"It's my second time here," he said distantly. "The first time was for swiping cars and B and Es and they discharged me and then I was caught for possession of narcotics and sent back."

"I don't like it much here, though," said Rob. "You can only get seven cigarettes a day here. I'd rather be on the outside."

"Dad lives in Vancouver and mum lives in Kamloops," explained Rob. "I'll be getting my discharge on April 7 and going to a foster home."

He smiled. "I like the swimming pool and the billiards room, oh and the free meals and free cigarettes, I guess, but I don't think this place helps you any, though."

I found Donna sitting looking out over the lake and she said she didn't like the getting up at 7 a.m. part, but likes the "arts and crafts and listening to records and relaxing."

Joe Sasvari, whose program is specifically designed to suit the community needs of the upper-Island-Powell River region, proudly showed me over the new Campbell House, a bright and cheery cottage for girls which is to open soon.

Over at his other cottage, Park House for Island boys, there are signs of life and occasionally signs of rebellion.

In one of the little sleeping cubicles, an Indian boy has plastered his walls with psychedelic posters and a cross hands next to a Swastika and a sign defiantly proclaiming "Red Power."

While Mayor Paskin and others have been concerned about what happens outside, few, except for the staff there who are deeply involved, have cared enough about the inside, about the boys themselves.

We hear ho wterrible these kids are. Yet I saw no terror. We hear how they keep escaping yet no one ran past me. In all the hours I was there, I saw no fights, heard no arguments or even raised voices. The kids I met had an ideal opportunity, through me, to show the outside world how bad they are, yet they didn't. Instead, they were polite, as politeness goes, and were interested in what I was doing.

As for the running away, Sasvari says when the kids go there it is tough for them at the start, and that's when most of them run. Most don't get far, though and don't do any harm.

"We have no bars here," says Joe with a kind smile. "What we do have is very close personal supervision and if we get a kid with really tough problems, then it's a one-to-one basis for 24 hours.

"But what we provide this way is a relationship . . . bars do not provide a relationship."

SECOND SECTION

Extended School Day Will Start April 8

A five-hour school day will be introduced in Greater Victoria senior secondary schools and most elementary schools Tuesday, April 8.

Junior secondary schools will be put on a four-hour day the same day.

Decision to lengthen class time from the present three hours was taken by Greater Victoria school board at a special meeting Thursday.

The six senior secondary schools, including Reynolds, will be open five hours between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. daily, with each principal free to set exactly which hours.

The 10 junior secondaries will have morning classes from 8:30 to 12:30, plus an optional hour between 1:30 and 3 p.m. for individual or group instruction.

Elementary schools will be operating five hours daily if volunteers are keeping the schools clean enough and where health standards are met.

An amendment by trustee Roy Temple that would have put junior secondary schools on the same five-hour day as senior secondaries was defeated.

Greater Victoria schools have been operating on reduced hours since district custodians and maintenance workers, members of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, went on strike Feb. 24.

The board appealed to the public, including parents, pupils, interested citizens, and teachers, to help clean the schools.

District superintendent Jake Longmore reported that as of Thursday, 28 district schools were judged clean, 20 satisfactory and eight unsatisfactory.

A week before, he said, only nine schools were judged clean, 26 satisfactory and 19 unsatisfactory.

Five schools have no volunteers to clean them, he said, one because the principal has asked that no volunteers be sent in and four because no parents have volunteered.

Longmore said volunteers are particularly short in the junior secondary schools. Colquitz and Lansdowne have none, he said.

Oak Bay junior started with nine volunteer cleaners and now has three, he said, and Central started with 20 and now has 10.

Trustee Peter Bunn challenged teachers to "demonstrate real professionalism" by helping to clean the schools, a suggestion that received applause from about 20 parents attending the meeting.

"For us to go in and do the kind of things you're suggesting would in fact be strike-breaking," responded Mavis De Girolamo, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

Teachers in the district have voted to cross CUPE picket lines but to refuse to do any work normally done by custodians and janitors.

Airport Open For All Taxis

Taxi service at Victoria International Airport should double April 1 under a new system worked out with the Ministry of Transport.

Under the system, all qualified taxi operators, fleet or individual, can both drop off and pick up fares at the airport, provided they have paid the $40 annual fee and received a permit decal from the transport ministry.

In the past, all taxis were allowed to take passengers to the airport, but only authorized drivers were allowed to pick up fares there and the regulations meant many of the drivers had to return to victoria with empty cars.

Drivers are required to accept short-haul fares from the airport and the cabs must be kept clean and in good condition.

Tutoring Eyed For Students

Weekend and evening tutoring may have to be started this spring to help Greater Victoria students make their school year, trustees were told Thursday.

Assistant superintendent of schools Dr. John Wiens was assessing for the school board the impact of the current reduced school day on the district's 29,000 students.

He said the shortened school day, which the board instituted after district custodians and maintenance men went on strike Feb. 24, has affected students in three ways.

There are some who have worked hard and whose school work has not suffered.

There are those who have worked hard but their work has suffered anyway; and there are those who haven't worked and whose schooling has suffered.

When the strike ends, Wiens said, the board will have to decide whether to give special help both to those who have tried hard and those who have slacked, or to single out those who have tried.

"I am not very sympathetic for the plight of students that could have helped themselves and didn't," he said.

Remedial help for students who have been slipping behind has already begun in many schools, Wiens said, but teachers may have to start weekend and evening tutoring.

Wiens said he thinks the dangers of the current strike and school disruptions to children's education is exaggerated by many.

Freed from hours of sitting in classes, these students have been able to work independently, he said.

After the three-week custodians' strike two years ago students were asked what help they needed to make up for the disrupted school time.

Their response, said Wiens, was: "We don't need summer school, we don't need night schools, we'll be fine."

Most were, he added, but a few weren't.

Young Trio Arrested

Three 16-year-old juvenile boys will be summoned to appear in Family court next week for car theft after Saanich police arrested them at 7:12 a.m. today driving a stolen vehicle.

A police spokesman said the trio is also charged with breaking and entering the Scandia Food Palace, 3591 Douglas overnight and stealing about $90 cash.

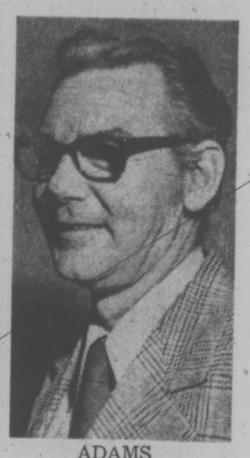
New SPCA Head

Don Adams, 41, an inspector with the Victoria branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals since May of 1971, takes over as manager Tuesday.

His promotion came after Dave Beeching, 64, manager of the local SPCA office for 13 years, decided to retire. Beeching will continue as a consultant for the next six months.

Both Beeching and Adams are former policemen, Beeching joining the SPCA after 30 years with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Adams at one time was with the Ontario Provincial Police.

The local SPCA branch, with office and kennels on Napier Lane, has a permanent staff of eight, including three inspectors, and a part-time staff of eight.



ADAMS
. . . sees changes

Main function of the operation is welfare of animals but it also provides animal control under contract to Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, said Adams.

He said animal control put the local SPCA about $5,000 in the red last year and there is the possibility of having to get out of this kind of work rather than subsidize it with donations intended for animal welfare.

Beeching said the major change he has seen over the years is a vast increase in the number of animals the society has had to deal with, from 5,407 in 1962 when he started as manager, to 9,200 last year.

As the city becomes more crowded, people become more conscious of animals and the problems they create, he said.

Adams, who is an "aviculturist," a bird hobbyist, who breeds several species and treats injured birds, has developed a method of washing and caring for birds coated with oil.

He said he would like to see people more actively aware of animal problems. He said he disagrees with a common attitude among many young people that their pets have a biological right to reproduce.

Juvenile Faces Court

A 14-year-old Victoria boy is expected to appear in family Court early next week charged with stealing a car and possibly dangerous driving following an incident in Colwood 7 p.m. Thursday.

Colwood RCMP said a car, reported stolen in Victoria earlier in the day, sideswiped a vehicle on the Trans-Canada Highway and then crashed into a power pole on Millstream and Peatt.

Police said the boy and a 13-year-old girl companion fled the scene and were arrested about two blocks away. They were taken to Victoria General Hospital for treatment of minor injuries and released.

The mishap interrupted power distribution in the immediate vicinity for a short time, police said.

On Top of Old Smoky, a Tyrant Heel

TODAY I OFFER A REport from the persecuted minority to which I belong. We smoke. In a society becoming rampantly anti-cigarette, that makes us fair game for anyone who never acquired the habit, and more so for the person who has kicked it.

A man's home is supposed to be his castle. But even under our own roofs, we're no longer safe. So short a time ago that I still get hot under the collar at the recollection, that fact was forced on my attention.

An ex-smoker of our acquaintance stopped by for a chat and a mug-up. He was no more than inside the house when he began sniffing like a bird dog.

"Still smoking, eh?" he said to me. "I thought you'd have quit by now."

As an item of self-preservation, the persecuted learn that meekness is politic. It didn't matter that the caller had to my personal knowledge set two wastebaskets afire and ruined a living-room rug. He had quit smoking, an achievement which elevated him to the master class.

"Still at it," I told him. "But I've really cut down."

"It doesn't work," he said. "You'll never quit that way! Now look at me . . ."

I looked. It occurred to me that he had put on weight since he renounced nicotine, most of it under his belt.

"Smoked my last cigarette on May 17, 1973, at eight in the evening," he proclaimed, launching into the familiar testament of the saved.

Why does the ex-smoker insist on clobbering his victim with the precise date, hour and even minute at which he last lit up? Is it pride, a sin we're warned against? Or is he a prisoner of virtue who draws cold comfort from keeping track of time served?

And why did this otherwise pleasant fellow — a man who would go out of his way to avoid stepping on a bug — alternate for the next five minutes between boasting about his will-power and working me over for my lack of the same?

I could have suggested that he'd better start watching his cholesterol level. But civility forbade. Anyway, us smokers are learning our place, and in case we forget it, there are plentiful reminders.

Signs are springing up. Last time my dear one and I visited a cafeteria we favor, we were fetched up short of our prefered corner by a sign that dangled on chains from the ceiling.

The smug message lettered on it was, 'This Area Reserved for the Comfort of Those Who Do Not Smoke.'

We halted at the dividing line. "Look at those creeps at OUR table!" I muttered to Win. "You ever see such an unhealthy-looking pair?"

My loyal wife, who rarely reminds me that she hasn't smoked since 4:03 p.m. Feb. 27, 1970, shushed me.

We found a table on the edge of the flyway from the kitchen. A waitress, probably a non-smoker, joggled it while hurrying past with an order for the elect, slopping coffee into my saucer.

I am perfectly willing to grant non-smokers their rights, and take elaborate care to ensure that those rights aren't infringed upon.

I don't smoke in stores, even those in which smoking isn't prohibited, or in buses, or in houses in which an ungracious lack of ashtrays conveys a loaded hint.

But the unreformed who reach for the pack in shirt pocket or handbag also have their rights. One of these is or should be to pollute the hell out of ourselves without being bullied, scolded, condescended to and moralized at by never-touch-'ems who shun cigarettes but indulge the reprehensible habit of petty tyranny.

With tolerance on one side and consideration on the other, smoker and non-smoker can live in amity. Win and I have been demonstrating that fact for five years, two weeks three days, seven hours and 57 minutes!

LAST FLIGHT FROM DA NANG

Panic-Crazed Viets Mob Plane

SAIGON (Reuter) — South Vietnamese troops opened fire on each other in a panic-crazed scramble to board a United States airliner which arrived to pick up refugees from the beleaguered city of Da Nang today.

Government troops in trucks, jeeps and cars chased the chartered world airways jet around the airport as half a dozen Communist rockets landed on the runway and set several buildings ablaze, according to the pilot, Capt. Ken Healey of Oakland, Calif.

There were about 60 people in the baggage hold. Seven were in the wheel casing, of whom six walked away at the end of the flight. The seventh was carried off on a stretcher alive.

Unable to raise its wheels and with one wing-flap blasted away by a hand grenade thrown by a government soldier, the overloaded plane made it back to Saigon, Healey told reporters.

Two other planes had headed for Da Nang, but they turned back to Saigon because of the chaos at the airport. Flights had been cancelled Friday for the same reason.

Today's lone flight finally took off with 323 persons aboard, all but seven of them military personnel or their families, the pilot said.

Healey said the plane, designed to carry 150 passengers, was mobbed on the Da Nang runway wherever it stopped.

Several soldiers fired machine guns and pistols but crew members said they believed this was to attract attention as there were no bullet-holes in the plane.

"Soldiers were shooting at each other," Healey said. When the plane stopped, some of the soldiers threw away their flak-jackets and helmets, tossed away their guns and scrambled onto the aircraft.

Others came aboard with their weapons, including grenades, but surrendered them to crew members at the door. The weapons were stacked in the cockpit and handed to security officials when the plane landed at Saigon airport.

People tried to cling to the outside of the aircraft but fell off as it rose over the city.

Healey said the aircraft door could not be closed properly during the flight as the weight of people pushing aboard had damaged it.

He said military vehicles were careening crazily around the airfield in pursuit of the plane. At one point a jeep loaded with 20 people collided with a motorscooter, overturning the jeep and leaving five people sprawled motionless on the ground.

As the pilot tried to keep the jet moving during its 20-minutes on the ground, the soldiers abandoned their vehicles on the runway and they sprinted to the open door.

One British cameraman scrambled onto the aircraft as it was beginning its take-off run but lost his balance trying to heave his film camera aboard and fell to the ground.

The plane landed in Saigon after a journey of nearly two hours because of the damage to the aircraft, Healey said. The 375-mile trip usually takes about 40 minutes.

One U.S. Boeing 727 touched down Friday at Da Nang airport but took off almost immediately because of the chaotic situation. It did not take on passengers.

The U.S. and South Vietnamese governments were hoping to bring out 10,000 refugees a day by ship and plane from the threatened city. The evacuation by ship is continuing, a Saigon command spokesman said. The refugee airlift began Thursday when several hundred people were taken to areas further south.

Situation 'Hopeless'

Times News Services

SAIGON — Communist troops moved into Da Nang under cover of a heavy artillery barrage today, prompting military sources to call the situation in South Vietnam's second largest city "hopeless."

U.S. Army Chief of Staff Gen. Frederick Weyand visited government leaders and gave them assurances of President Ford's "strong support."

A U.S. statement said Weyand told President Nguyen Van Thieu the United States was firmly behind "the determined resistance of the people of South Vietnam to the massive invasion by a North Vietnamese expeditionary corps in flagrant and cynical disregard of the provison of the Paris agreement.

Bao Loc city, only 90 miles northeast of Saigon, was shelled and attacked at 7:15 a.m. according to an official announcement here, and lost only two hours later. The capital of Quang Nam province, Bao Loc lies astride a strategic road from the mountains to the south central seacoast areas where the Saigon government has been planning to relocate many of the million or more refugees from recently lost areas in the north.

Hoi An, the provincial capital of Uang Nam province, was attacked by Communist forces from three sides about 6 a.m. and overrun by 1 p.m. according to reliable but unofficial reports. The provincial capital is only about 20 miles south of Da Nang.

Cambodia Leaders Fleeing?

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH — As the No. 2 man on the list of prominent Cambodians marked for death by the Khmer Rouge left for Paris with his family today, reliable sources reported President Lon Nol will leave Tuesday for an official visit to Indonesia, Japan and the United States.

Political and diplomatic sources in beleaguered Phnom Penh are speculating whether the president will return to Cambodia or remain indefinitely outside the country without tendering his resignation.

The departure of Cheng Heng came as rebel forces stabbed into Phnom Penh's northern defence line. However, field reports later said the line was re-established.

A United States airlift of food and military supplies resumed after a 24-hour halt because of rebel fire on the airport.

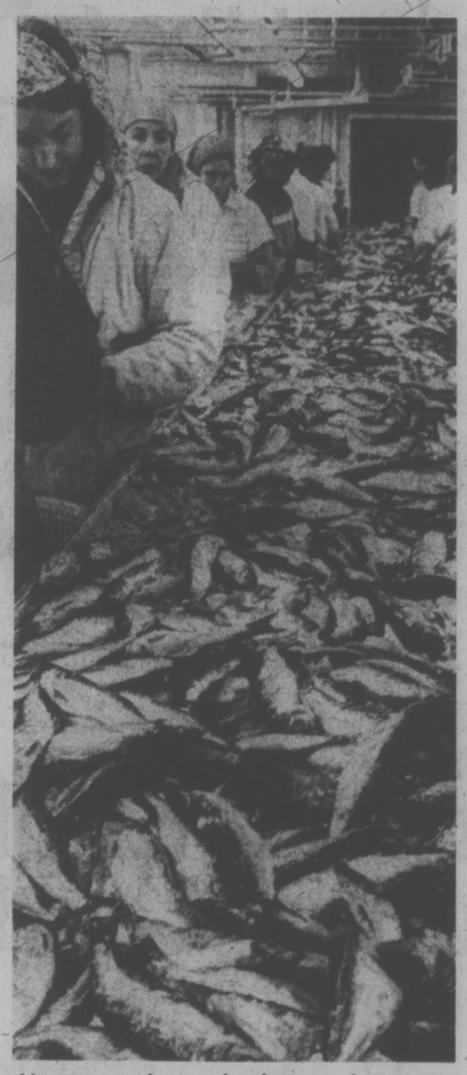
Cheng Heng, who was chief of state after the coup ousting Prince Norodom Sihanouk in 1970, said at a news conference before his departure:

"I am going for medical treatment, not for political reasons. I am also leaving because I want to leave a good climate for our politicians."

Military informants said the Khmer Rouge insurgents pierced the defence line at Kap Srau, eight miles northwest of Phnom Penh. The sources added that Cambodian forces had pulled back about a mile and came under heavy mortar and artillery bombardment.

In Washington, Pentagon officials say U.S. arms shipments to Cambodia will stop in a few days because the money appropriated by Congress will have run out.

They said the Cambodian government has enough ammunition on hand to last an additional 10 days or two weeks.



Herring undergo checking and sorting

'Mad Scramble' Blamed In Herring Disasters

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Poor organization and too short a season are the main reason lives have been lost and 14 fishboats either sunk or capsized since the herring season started March 17.

Convinced of this Bill Hilborn, president of Oakland Industries Ltd. says the fisheries department, fish companies and the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union must get together and work out a solution.

"This is a disorganized fishery," Hilborn said, "The fisheries set a quota of 60,000 tons this year. There was a mad scramble, as a result of the strike, and the catch was as high as 44,000 tons in a few days.

"The end result is the boats are overloaded, trying to get there first — any bad weather and they go down like stones."

Apart from the loss of life and boats, Hilborn said the Canadian industry will lose out to competition because of the inferior quality of fish.

"The fish is arriving in such vast quantities at plants that the quality is deteriorating. It was the same case last year. It's really a roe (fish eggs) industry with Japan the buyer. Now, China is producing the best quality roe. It's a real problem industry."

Oakland Industries has just completed a modern plant on Montreal, going into production for the first time March 17.

Both Hilborn and Pat Keen, who is in charge of new production and quality control, feel the fisheries department should not raise the quota but extend the season to six or eight weeks in order to keep individual catches smaller, allowing total utilization of the fish.

"This way the boats would not get such large catches and spoil what, in effect, could be a good fishery," Keen said. "They would be landing top quality fish that could be totally used."

Under the pressure of the large catches, the plant is employing 200 people on a two-shift system for three weeks. Using a few

25 BABIES DIE IN WARD FIRE

RIJEKA, Yugoslavia (AP) — A fire snuffed out the lives of 25 newborn babies in a hospital maternity ward Friday, touching off wild scenes of anguish among parents and relatives.

One man who lost an infant son wailed outside the hospital: "For so many years we had waited for this child. We finally had him ... for a total of three days."

Officials said the fire in the Rijeka hospital was caused by human error and old, faulty wiring. In addition to those killed, three other babies are in critical condition, they said.

Hysteria broke out among mothers in a room next to the babies when they tried desperately to save the infants but couldn't, a hospital source said.

He said the roaring blaze sapped oxygen in the room and in the incubator, and that 20 babies suffocated and five died of burns.

At Vatican City, Pope Paul interrupted his Holy Week observance and said a special prayer for the victims of the Good Friday tragedy.

Outside the hospital, Milivoje Zamic, a father of one of the victims, said: "I try to fight back tears and console my wife and mother. When this our second child was born we cried like babies out of joy. It was only two days ago."

Today was proclaimed a day of mourning in Rijeka. Public events were cancelled, flags were at half staff and ship captains were to wail sirens in the port during the funeral for the victims, all less than a week old.

Boat Blast Hurts Man

An eyewitness said he saw the man enter the boat and minutes later he heard a loud explosion and turned to see the roof of the boat lift 10 to 15 feet in the air.

He ran to the boat and saw a man coming out slowly, waving for help. Skin on both the victim's hands was peeling off, the witness said.

Prison Guard Charged In Heroin Conspiracy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver men, one a local prison guard, will appear in provincial court today charged with conspiracy to import from Hong Kong 8½ pounds of pure heroin worth about $5.9 million on city streets.

The raid culminated a month-long investigation by the RCMP after the heroin hidden in a wooden crate was discovered Feb. 26 by Canada Customs officials.

The two-foot by four-foot box shipped from Hong Kong was destined for a Vancouver address and was being stored at the Ballentyne pier warehouse at the foot of Heatley Street.

Charged with conspiracy to import and traffic in heroin are William Louis Reisig, a prison guard for about seven months, and Clifford (Fook Hing) Jung.

Reisig is also charged with possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

In another raid Friday, Vancouver police surrounded a truck on Jericho Beach at English Bay and found 75 pounds of marijuana valued at $36,000, scales and other equipment used to package and sell the drug on the beach.

Police arrested a man and a woman at the beach and later raided an apartment in the Kitsilano district where they seized another three pounds of the drug, more scales and arrested another two persons.

TIMES FEATURE FOR BIKE BUFFS

With the warmer, drier days of spring and summer ahead, a lot of bicycles which have been in storage or used infrequently during the winter will be back on the streets.

But there's a lot more to bicycling than just getting on and riding. A reasonable amount of care, maintenance and adjustment (particularly with the 10-speed variety) is necessary to get the most out of this healthful, enjoyable and economical sport.

To help out in this department, the Victoria Times is starting a 10-part series Monday with helpful tips for bicycle owners — tips that will save them a lot of unnecessary trips to the repair shop.

If you're a bike buff you won't want to miss "Cycling by Doug Langford" starting Monday in the Family Section of the Times.

Extortion Charge Laid

A 33-year-old man was charged in Victoria provincial court this morning with the attempted extortion of $100,000 from a Victoria bank manager Thursday.

James Archie Hancock of 1316 Rudlin was also charged with armed robbery of $571 from the Beacon Drive-In, 126 Douglas last Saturday.

Judge D. K. McAdam remanded Hancock in custody to Tuesday for election of trial method and plea.

Hancock was arrested 1 p.m. Thursday after a drama-packed hour during which an attempt was made to extort $100,000 from Vincent Fourt, manager of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch in the Hillside shopping plaza.

Victoria police said a man had phoned Fourt and told him to deliver the money or harm would be done to Fourt's 14-year-old daughter, Deanna.

Though Fourt phoned home and learned Deanna was there and in no apparent danger, police asked him to carry out the demands, which were to take the money in a package and drive to a phone booth in front of Memorial Arena where he would receive further instructions.

Police said Fourt found a note in the telephone booth which told him to drive to the third floor of the Bay Parkade and leave the car.

About 15 minutes passed, he said today, when he heard someone approach and open the door. A gloved hand then reached in to grab the package on the front seat.

"Don't make a move or you're dead," Bennett said he told the man, who let out a gasp. "He nearly fainted when he saw me."

The package did not contain $100,000, police said, but the amount was not disclosed.

Police said Hancock was not armed when arrested although a gun was later found similar to the one used in the Beacon Drive-In holdup.

The extortion bid was the third in Victoria in recent months. In each case the attempt has been unsuccessful.

O.C. Soccer

LONDON (Reuter) — Carlisle United, whose first ever season in the English football league's First Division has been an undignified dive towards relegation, at least had the satisfaction today of reshaping the championship race.

United became the first side this season to take four points off league leaders Everton with a 3-0 home victory that left the way clear for Liverpool to leap into top spot.

Liverpool toppled Birmingham 1-0 — the only goal coming from a controversial second half penalty by Kevin Keegan — and they now have 45 points from 37 games. This is one more point than Everton, but the deposed leaders have a game in hand over their Merseyside rivals.

Behind Liverpool and Everton come Ipswich, Middlesbrough and Stoke, bunched together on 43 points, and in sixth place is Derby, with 42 points from 35 games and perhaps with as good a chance of winning the title as anyone.

The complex situation at the top of the English League is in direct contrast to the Scottish First Division which was decided today when Rangers won their first championship in 11 years when they drew 1-1 with Hibernian and ended Celtic's run of nine successive championships.

Death Call For Sniper

MOUNT HOLLY, N.J. (AP) — "Kill him!" Kill him!" shouted a crowd of onlookers as police dragged a bleeding man from a three-storey home from which a sniper had opened fire, killing two policemen and critically wounding a third.

James Carhart, 22, and unemployed, was arrested after police shot their way into the house in this working-class suburb across the Delaware River from Philadelphia following a three-hour siege.

Carhart was treated for a shotgun wound in the right hip. Doctors said he was in serious condition.

"He wouldn't give up," said Police Chief Eugene Stafford after Carhart was pulled into a police car Friday night. Stafford said he would seek murder charges against Carhart.

"We had to fire shots through the doorway," The chief said. "He was firing and he was incoherent."

Police said they didn't know what prompted the shooting.

Witnesses said Carhart stood in front of his house at sundown and fired a series of shots with a handgun. A passing motorist summoned police.

Stafford said two officers arrived and one was shot down on the pavement. While the second officer took cover, a third officer was shot as he emerged from his car.

Police sprayed rifle and shotgun fire onto the house while other officers retrieved the bodies of the slain men. Shots were exchanged for three hours until more than 100 policemen, under the cover of gunfire, raced into the house and up to the third floor.

Shooting erupted inside the house. Screaming was heard and within minutes Carhart was dragged to the sidewalk amid the shouts of onlookers.

Only minutes before Carhart's capture his parents and two brothers — one in a wheelchair — emerged from the building. Stafford said he did not know if they had been hostages.

Holy Sites Crowded, Guarded

The Associated Press

Christians and Jews gathered in the holy places of Jerusalem this weekend for Easter and Passover. Israeli security patrols guarded against violence after the explosion of two bombs.

In Rome, Pope Paul called for the remembrance of those still suffering because of war and "political or civil conflicts."

Two small time-bombs wired to wristwatches exploded in Jerusalem Friday, wounding 13 persons. One went off in a crowded bus but the second one placed in a shopping bag in Zion Square was spotted and police cleared the street before it exploded.

Pope Paul, who reduced his Holy Week schedule last year because of ill health, carried a heavy wooden cross in the Good Friday Way of the Cross procession on Rome's Palatine Hill.

He then told a crowd of thousands gathered near the Coliseum in Rome that Christ's suffering on the cross should be known by "all who, still today, are suffering because of conflicts of war or because of political or civil conflicts."

CIA-JFK LINK PROBE PLANNED

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Senate committee on intelligence operations is planning an inquiry into persistent but never proven allegations of Central intelligence Agency involvement in the assassination of President Kennedy.

According to informed sources, members of the select committee's staff feel they cannot ignore the issue even if the prospect of settling it conclusively appears remote.

"I think it's fair to say they're sniffing around on that right now," one source said. "But there's no formal investigation yet and I don't know if there will be."

Plans thus far apparently call only for a preliminary staff inquiry. Under the committee's rules, a full-dress investigation cannot be initiated without majority approval from the 11-member panel.

"We might just end up exonerating them (the CIA) on this one," another source said, "but that's all right. That's our business, too."

Recent allegations and disclosures concerning the CIAs domestic activities have encouraged a resurgence of charges that Kennedy was the victim of a consipracy that involved the CIA in one way or another.

Firm Claims Entire Yukon

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Using the purchase of an abandoned wartime pipeline project as a basis, a group of Edmonton men has begun legal action in a colossal claim of ownership to nearly one million square miles of the western Arctic — roughly one third of Canada.

Included in the claim, but not part of the proceedings that began here Thursday in Northwest Territories Supreme Court, is the entire Yukon territory. The Yukon portion of the claim is expected to be filed next summer in Whitehorse.

Mr. Justice William Morrow adjourned the case Thursday until June 3 after counsel for the governments of Canada and the Northwest Territories said they had not been given sufficient documentation and time to prepare their cases.

The area being claimed by the five Edmonton men — under the name Barbarosa Enterprises of Hay River, N.W.T. — includes the entire northern route of the proposed Mackenzie Valley natural gas pipeline. The area is bounded on the north by the Arctic coast and on the south by the 60th parallel, the northern boundary of the four western provinces.

The claim also engulfs the 400,000 square miles that, just 1½ years ago, Morrow gave the treaty Indians of the Northwest Territories the right to file a caveat over, subject to appeal.

That appeal by Ottawa is scheduled to begin June 17. Until the appeal process has been exhausted, the caveat — or legal declaration of interest — cannot be registered.

Meanwhile, the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories and the Metis and Non-Status Indian Association is attempting to use the caveat as a bargaining lever in land-claim negotiations with Ottawa.

The Edmonton men, headed by Czechoslovakian-born company president Edmund Buchta, 46, also are seeking a caveat over the same land. Their application to file a caveat was rejected here last year by the land titles registrar because they did not have sufficient legal description of the land in question.

Barbarosa's claim is based on incidents that date back to the Second World War. In 1942, through a series of ambassadorial notes, Canada gave the United States the go-ahead to begin construction on the Canol project, a 600-mile oil pipeline from Norman Wells, N.W.T., to Whitehorse, Yukon.

The U.S. needed fuel to keep its planes fighting in the war against the Japanese in the South Pacific.

Later in the war, contends Barbarosa Enterprises, the Canadian government agreed to give the U.S. oil exploration and drilling rights to the Yukon and most of the western Arctic. This is the area of nearly one million square miles being claimed by the Edmonton group.

But before the war ended, the U.S. had spent $134 million on the Canol project and decided the oil was no longer of strategic importance.

Barbarosa claims that Canada had first rights to buy back the property and assorted drilling, pipe-laying and highway-building equipment abandoned by the U.S., including the nearly one million square miles of land.

Sailboat Searched

A Canadian motor sailboat from Victoria was boarded by U.S. Customs agents in Dungeness Bay and ordered into Port Angeles Thursday.

A Customs official said three men aboard the 43-foot Norwegian Wood were detained while a 45-minute search was conducted and then allowed to go on their way.

Donald Eide, district director of U.S. Customs in Seattle declined to say what specifically his officers were after but did say the boat was stopped for a possible violation regarding customs declaration.

He said such searches are routine.

BUTTER PRICE UP

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers face a 13-cents-a-pound increase in the price of butter, the second increase this year, the agriculture department announced Thursday.

It came as the result of annual dairy policy revisions announced after Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan discussed it at an all-day cabinet meeting.

Also increased Thursday were the government-set minimum prices for butter and skim milk powder. The butter price goes to $1.03 a pound from 90 cents, the powder to 64 cents a pound from 59 cents. The powder increase will not be passed on directly to consumers.

Disorganization Blamed

less people, the employment period for herring could be extended for much longer.

The plant has been designed to use every part of the herring, the flesh for fillets with Germany as the main market, roe for Japan and the milts (male sperms) for the British market, where it is made into fish spreads and other delicacies.

Even the scales of the fish (pearl essence) could be utilized, Keen said, being in demand for such items as dolls' eyes.

Oaklands has installed all the equipment needed to ensure the total utilization process moves swiftly. There's a sexing machine, developed by Neptune Dynamics of Vancouver, that separate male and female fish, using a light process.

The line of three filleting machines are made by the Swedish company of Arenco. They're capable of handling 197 tons of food fish in 21 hours.

Five Japanese technicians, employed by the company that buys the roe, are on hand to ensure the quality of the roe is the finest; roe being as much in demand in Japan as caviar is by European gourmets.

"This is such a waste," Keen said, as we watched a long line of helpers checking substandard fish, the flesh of which can only be used for such things as cattle feed.

He and Hilborn reiterated a better system has to be worked out if the full benefits of the herring fishery are to be gained.

"Something has to be done," Hilborn said. "You can imagine what chaos there would be at the processing plants if this sort of thing (overlarge catches in a small period of time) happened during the salmon season."

Super Round by Nicklaus

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, challenged by Johnny Miller's gaudy exploits of the last year or so, responded with one of the most outstanding efforts of his career Friday, an eight-under-par 63.

"It's a better round than the record 64 at Augusta," Nicklaus said, comparing his effort against the 1965 round that matched the record in the Masters.

And, while Nicklaus was stretching his lead to six shots halfway through the $200,000 Heritage Classic, Miller quietly abandoned this resort island off the South Carolina coast.

He was a victim of the 36-hole cut. He shot 151, 22 strokes behind Nicklaus.

It was the first time he had failed to make the cut since the 1973 Canadian Open.

"No excuses," said Miller. "I just played lousy."

Nicklaus' 63, which gave him a two-round total of 129, 13 under par, was two strokes away from the 61s Miller scored in the Tuscon and Phoenix earlier this season. But the courses and conditions don't compare.

And Nicklaus played them all well.

"I didn't hit a bad shot," he said. "I hit three shots that I wasn't completely happy with."

He missed two greens. On one of those he came within three or four inches of holing an explosion shot for birdie. He came out of another bunker to within three feet.

On all the others he laced his shots dead at the pins on the tiny greens that nestle among the massive sand traps and the moss-hung old cypress. He was never more than 22 feet from the cup. His longest birdie putt was 18 feet. Four times he threw his irons inside of three feet — and he missed one of those putts.

Tom Weiskopf matched the previous course record of 65 and was alone in second place, six strokes behind with a 135. Hale Irwin and Tom Kite each shot a 68 and were tied at 137.

Trevino shot 67 for 140 and Player had a 70 for 141. Arnold Palmer shot a 75 for 149.

Birdie Protects Carner's Position

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — JoAnne Carner, seeking her first 1975 tour victory, blew a three-stroke advantage Friday but came back with a birdie on the final hole to take a one-stroke lead over Judy Rankin in the second round of the $70,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

A former Seattle resident, Carner had an even-par 72 to go with Thursday's five-under-par 67 for a 139 total. Rankin fired a 67 Friday to finish at 140, one stroke ahead of Jane Blalock.

Ipswich Advances To Cup Semifinal

LEICESTER, England (CP) — Ipswich Town reached the English Football Association Cup semi-final for the first time Thursday with a 3-2 victory over Leeds United in the third replay of their quarter-final soccer series.

The quarter-final series covered four matches and seven hours. In previous games, the teams tied 0-0 twice and 1-1 once.

Ipswich now meets West Ham United in a semi-final game at Aston Villa's ground Saturday, April 5. The other semi-final is between Birmingham and Second Division Fulham.

Clive Woods, a young forward who was only in the game because of an injury to first-team regular Mick Lambert, played a key role for Ipswich. With nine minutes remaining and extra time looking inevitable after Leeds had twice tied the score, Woods fired a 20-yard drive past goalkeeper David Stewart for the winning goal.

Meanwhile, Irish international Terry Conroy kept Stoke City in the English League championship race Friday with two goals which earned Stoke a 2-2 draw with West Ham.

The point, lifting the team from fifth place to third, left Stoke two points behind Everton, the First Division leaders with 44 points, and one behind second-place Liverpool.

Goalkeeper Joe Corrigan, making a string of superb saves, frustrated Middlesbrough's championship bid in a 2-1 victory by Manchester City.

A the other end of the table, Tottenham Hotspur brightened hopes of relegation with a 3-0 victory over Wolverhampton Wanderers. It was Tottenham's first home win since Dec. 7. Spurs' new skipper, Steve Perryman, scored twice.

LATEST ACE A RECOR FOR TURYK

He scored another hole-in-one Thursday.

It is ace No. 18 in a golfing career that began only about 20 years ago.

It's his eighth ace on the seventh hole and gives Turyk a share of a world record with Joe Lucius, 59, of the Mohawk Golf Club in Tiffin, Ohio. Tiffin has eight aces on his club's 15th hole. They now share the record for most aces of a single hole.

Turyk scored his 17th ace on his 54th birthday, March 31, two years ago.

The latest ace and a chip-in for a birdie two on the 13th hole helped Turyk to his best-ever round, a six-over-par 76.

Nuclear Power Plant Planned

SEATTLE, Wash. (CP) — A spokesman for Puget Sound Power and Light Co. said Thursday the company is hoping to start construction in July on a $400 million nuclear power plant 70 miles from downtown Vancouver.

Matt Miletich, news and information supervisor for the company, said public hearings on the proposed plant will be held this spring and early summer.

"We need to start work on clearing and site preparation by July if our first unit is to be completed on target in mid-1982," he said.

The 1,400-acre site of the proposed plant is five miles east of the rural Washington community of Sedro Woolley. The area is about 30 miles south of the Canada United States border.

Miletich said the company has been told by the nuclear regulatory commission, a federal government body, that public hearing will be held this summer.

He said the plant must also be approved at the state level by the Washington state thermal power plant site evaluation council. He said dates for hearings by the state body have not been set.

Miletich said the plant will generate 1,000 megawatts of power initially, about half as much as the Grand Coulee Dam. He said the plant's second unit, scheduled to be ready by mid-1985, will be expanded to 2,000 megawatts.

Pilot Survives Crash

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arnold Apsey of Ketchikan, Alaska, pilot of a light plane which made a forced landing near Kincolith, 45 miles north of Prince Rupert, Thursday, was in Prince Rupert hospital resting comfortably today.

Search and rescue officials said he had undetermined injuries suffered in the landing.

Apsey brought down his Stinson 180 aircraft onto a beach where fires had been lit to guide him in, but it turned into a crash landing.

He had been on a flight from Ketchikan to Prince Rupert when his light plane developed problems.

Typical Atypical Drinker

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The portrait of an alcoholic you have have — of someone lying under the Johnson Street bridge — doesn't fit Barry.

Barry is 43 years old, a handsome man, well dressed, happily married and with a family, living in Greater Victoria. Furthermore, he hasn't had a drink for 17 years.

But Barry is an alcoholic, as he's he first to say, and he claims to be a typical one, like most of the other people attending the three-day Alcoholics Anonymous rally this week at the Westwind Motor Inn in Langford.

Things are good for Barry now because of AA. But they weren't always that way.

"I don't think I ever drank normally. From age 15 or 16, I always drank to get drunk."

As a young man Barry joined the navy and in those days, the common attitude was "if you didn't drink, there was something wrong with you."

But he was single and when the three-day binges ashore followed one after another he wasn't touching anyone but himself.

The binges — they were blackouts — unremembered.

"Many of us used to sit around next day saying: 'Jesus, we must have had a good time last night. We spent all our money and we don't know what we did.'"

"I stayed sober for about five or six weeks to impress my wife with what a hell of a great guy I was. Then it was back to the old pattern.

An example: she asked him to go out for a couple of loaves of bread one afternoon. He didn't come home until midnight "hammered out of my mind."

"I loved her, but I was slowly killing her."

And changing her too. Into a liar. She began to make up stories to others to explain why he couldn't do this, wouldn't be there.

Their son was born. Into a household filled with tension.

So Barry had become an alcoholic. Not a falling down drunk. Not lying under the Johnson Street bridge. Working sober through the week most of the time. Blotto on weekends.

But he didn't think so.

"I said to myself there's no way I'm an alcoholic. I'm too intelligent."

Still, a couple of men in the navy he knew were members of AA and some of the things they said to him lingered. Meanwhile, his wife was getting fed up and the navy was getting more concerned about his work performance.

"I would promise my wife every time 'I'll never do it again' — and I'd blow it every time."

Barry says that things which were important to him — his wife, his son, his job — when he was sober just weren't important when he was drunk.

In March 1959 he made the critical phone to AA. For help. Two men came right over. Barry was in trouble with his family, in trouble with his job, longing for a little sympathy. He didn't get it.

"They went right at me.

"They said: 'if you've really had enought, AA can help you. They didn't promise me another thing."

The two men told him AA wasn't a religious organization, "all it was was a group of people who had one objective — to stay sober."

He went to his first meeting, in Esquimalt, and saw a lot of people he knew, he recalls with a smile.

He wasn't willing to accept everything he was told but he was scared. His newfound friends shephered him, had him at meetings just about every night for weeks.

"Then I started to like those meetings. I began to go because I wanted to and it's been like that ever since."

Looking back at the drinking years, Barry says: "I was a phoney bastard. I saw myself as a great party man, as efficient at work. And at home I was miserable.

"When I came into AA I found I didn't have to act for anybody. I am what I am. AA has provided me with a fun way of living."

Best-Seller Credited To Tumor Home Remedy

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

But for benzedrine and gin, Anthony Burgess may never have written A Clockwork Orange.

In fact, he may never have written at all without the potion, he told an audience of 500 sprawled on the lawn at the University of Victoria Friday — the potion incidentally curbed a brain tumor that doctors said would kill him.

Burgess, whose lecture was sponsored by the student academic affairs committee, was given a year to live in 1959.

"I was elated. I'd never been given 12 months to live before," he said. And in just nine of those 12 months he produced six novels, one A Clockwork Orange.

"This was regarded as excessive, indecent and ungentlemanly," he said in one of a number of swipes at the British and their publishers.

His first book was accepted by a publisher who said it seemed more like a second book, could he go home and write a first?

"So I wrote a first," said Burgess, "containing lots of Catholic guilt and gloom." The publishers didn't like it so refused to publish the second, which was, of course, the first, he said.

An accomplished musician and composer, Burgess tried his hand at other arts, but painting for one, was difficult.

"I'm color-blind," he explained. "That was considered to be a set-back then though it isn't now."

While writing music in 1954, after six hours' labor on a piece a musician would play in two seconds, he said, Burgess began to imagine typing his thoughts instead of translating them to notes.

So began a career with more than 20 published books so far.

Burgess talked about A Clockwork Orange, the fifth novel in his collection of "terminal works" of that unfateful 12 months.

The violence-prone thug was indeed rehabilitated, by a method no doubt approved of by university audience members, said Burgess. Theoretical psychologists often praise its merits, he said.

The brainwashing technique strips the criminal of free will, allowing him no choice but the choice to do good.

And this is one point of the book, said the author.

"It is far more evil to impose upon a human the capacity to do only good than it is to do evil."

"Once you take away his capacity to choose evil, you are rendering him into a creature who isn't human."

Paper Files Complaint On Printers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia labor relations board will hear a complaint Tuesday filed by the Vernon News against the Printing Pressman's Union which has halted publication of four of the five Thomson B.C. Newspapers Ltd. publications.

Bruce Rowland, publisher of the news, filed the complaint on the grounds that the Printing Pressman's contract with the News does not expire until June 30.

Pressmen's contracts expired Dec. 31 at the Kamloops Sentinel and Feb. 28 at the Kelowna Courier and Penticton Herald.

None of the four papers has published since March 18. Base rate for the pressmen was $6.55 an hour.

The fifth Thomson newspaper in B.C., the Nanaimo Free Press, has not been affected. Its pressmen are represented by the Stereotypers Union.

The pressmen refused to meet company representatives until the newspapers settle an issue over reproduction of advertising material with Local 226 of the International Typographical Union.

The company maintains that reproduction is a form of feather-bedding and that it is not economically viable at its newspapers. The clause in question would require the newspapers to locally produce material which advertisers supply ready for publication. Usually the locally-produced material then is junked.

The union claims the reproduction clause is necessary for job security.

Pressmen Start Co-op Paper

GLASGOW (AP) — Glasgow press workers announced Friday they have met a government challenge to raise enough money to start their own newspaper. It will be the first in Britain run as a workers' co-operative.

The paper will cost an estimated $5.76 million to launch. The Labor government promised to put up half the money if the workers raised the rest by March 31.

A workers' meeting was told the target was met with the help of a last-minute $60,000 loan from millionaire publisher Robert Maxwell, a former Labor MP.

Industry Secretary Tony Benn said in a statement the birth of the newspaper, to be called the Scottish Daily News, will be "a historic event."

"It will be the first national newspaper to be run by its workers free from political pressures and commercial interests, and constitutes a general victory for the people it seeks to serve."

Maxwell forecast the paper will be on the streets within a month.

Plans for the paper were made a year ago after Beaverbrook newspapers, one of Britain's biggest publishers, closed their Glasgow evening paper and transferred printing of the Scottish Daily Express to Manchester.

The Beaverbrook cuts cost 1,800 jobs in Glasgow. The new paper, printed on the old Beaverbrook presses, will employ about 500.

Grant to Aid Greenpeace Whale Film

A provincial government grant of $1,795 has been awarded the Greenpeace Film Committee to assist in production of a 50-minute documentary film based on the Greenpeace Five mission.

That mission will begin in late April or early May. The 80-foot converted halibut boat, Greenpeace Five, will sail 50 to 100 miles into the Pacific to intercept Russian and Japanese whaling fleets as they return from the Antarctic hunt.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said the Greenpeace campaign has the full support of the provincial government.

"It is estimated that 90 per cent of the great whales have been killed in the past 25 years and eight of the 10 species are extinct or nearly so," said Hall.

RARE BEAVERS NOT IMPRESSED

Since the beavers, donated to the zoo by the Hudson's Bay Co., were moved to an outside pond 12 days ago, only one has moved into the house, constructed of real sticks and fake mud.

Already the one beaver has done some extensive renovation on the length of some sticks used to build the house.

But why not let the beavers build their own house?

Zoo officials say they are worried that the beavers would not build according to the design plans — that is, with the house resting against a glass wall through which visitors may watch the animals through a handy peephole.

Not only are officials providing the animals with an exclusive house, but also an endless forest of delicious poplar trees. Freshly-cut trees will be erected in pips in the pond and replaced as eaten.

Trustees, Cupe Agree in Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tentative agreement was reached Thursday afternoon between the school board and the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Clive McKee, industrial inquiry commissioner, said Thursday night that negotiators for both sides had agreed to recommend acceptance of the settlement.

Terms were not disclosed.

The 96 school maintenance workers, members of Local 407, began rotating strikes at city schools March 10. Janitors and stationary engineers refused to cross picket lines, leaving as many as 30,000 students without classes.

The union, which served strike notice Feb. 24, had asked for a raise of $2.50 an hour across-the-board, or $2 an hour with a cost-of-living clause, in a one-year contract.

The school board had offered 80 cents an hour on the current base rate of $4.60 an hour in a one-year contract.

Boy Hit, Driver Fined

A seven-year-old boy is in good condition in Victoria General Hospital today after he was struck by a car as he walked across the road at Quadra and Queens Friday.

Marc Bassiere of 819 Walker received a fractured arm and leg in the mishap which occurred about 5:26 p.m.

He appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning, pleaded guilty, and was fined $400 by Judge D. K. McAdam.
